Officials, residents mull the high cost of water

Residents lodge protest

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

New water and sewer rates have some residents with septic systems clamoring for changes and others debating the bills themselves.

Selectmen found a group of irate taxpayers ready to do battle when they opened the Nov. 31 meeting. Some 30 residents with septic systems brought their objections to being billed for service they don't use to the table. In addition, resident Mary Pronski brought her new water and sewer bills questioning whether Town Meeting had actually approved charging the new rates retroactively.

Town Meeting voted to adopt a 47.6 percent flat rate increase at its spring session. At that meeting Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer pointed to an increase in the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) assessment as the reason for the rate hikes. The new rates were slated to go into effect July 1, 1992, with the first bill hitting ratepayers by October 1, 1992. Maurer noted that the bills were delayed just about a month.

"I got my water bill for April 28 to Sept. 2, the rates changed April 27 and the following day I got charged the new rates," said Pronski. "I'm more than happy to pay what I consumed. But, I have come before this board three times on this issue," she added. She argued that Town Meeting did not vote the rates in retroactively.

Maurer said several public hearings were held and a lot of discussion revolved on how to apply the rates. "It was the intention of the Board of Selectman in making the recommendation that bills mailed out would reflect new rates," said Maurer. He explained that estimated readings had created problems in the past and thus a decision was made to make the new rates effective in July.

Fed law could raise water rates

One major hurdle to controlling spiralling water costs will confront Winchester as it finds itself in the position of having to build a water treatment plant.

The plant, which will cost the town at least $5 million, will bring the town into compliance with a new federal law governing surface water.

Winchester is one of just 12 communities in the northeast region of the country that needs to construct a water filtration plant, according to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer. Under a 1986 amendment to the Safe Drinking Water Act, all communities that use surface water must have a filtration plant. Many communities already have a treatment plant or use underground water; Winchester does not.

According to Alan Silbovitz, vice-president of Weston & Simpson, which has worked with the town's water system since the mid-'70s, Winchester never implemented a treatment plant because its water is already of sufficient quality. "There are no standards that the water quality does not meet," said Silbovitz.

The funding, designing, and construction of the plant will take place quickly over the next couple of years.

The time-line has already been set: presentation and funding at Spring Town Meeting, design in July '93, construction begins July '94, completion in April '96, and operation by July '96.

The implementation of the plant under federal law is set for July 1993. However, a clause in the law states that a state agency (DEP) can grant a waiver of up to three years if the community has a scheduled time-line and a good faith effort to carry out the plan. The Board of Selectmen intend to get funding approval at Spring Town Meeting and, with a

Stolen car ends up in town's water supply

By Stephen Olivieri and Deborah Trask

Town officials were busy containing a fuel spill in the town's drinking water after someone drove a stolen motor vehicle into the South Reservoir.

"By late Sunday afternoon the system was back operating in a normal manner," said Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer in an update of the situation to the Board of Selectmen on Nov. 31.

Extensive planning in dealing with hazardous materials paid off in containing the damage when a motor vehicle was discovered and removed from the water, according to Maurer. The vehicle, stolen from a 40-year-old New Hampshire woman, sustained heavy damage, including a Nazi swastika carved into its hood.

Just before 11 a.m. on Nov. 28, a jogger observed an oil slick on the South Reservoir near the filtration plant. As he examined the spill closer, he saw a car totally submerged in the water about 50 feet from the shore. The car was in an upright position leaning against the filtration plant in water about 20 feet deep.

In a telephone interview Maurer said guidelines for removal of hazardous material were developed by Board of Health Director Joseph Tabbi, and "the beauty of it was that everybody knew what they had to do and they did it."

Firefighters, police, an employee of the Department of Environmental Protection, the Public Works Department director, employees of the Water Department, and the town manager were called to the scene.

Superintendent lashes out at fiscal critics

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The School Committee continues to grapple with its budget, including where its money should be spent and how much there actually is to spend.

After weeks of criticism directed at the School Department, including some from School Committee members, acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald lashed out at his critics who say the department is not acting responsibly.

"My frustration is that week after week we get told that we don't know what the hell we're doing, and we do know what we're doing. And I plead with you not to publicly suggest that we have no idea what our budget will support, what we have to spend, what we've spent," said Fitzgerald at the School Committee's Dec. 1 meeting.

"If I were sitting on the other side of that television, I would be scratching my head saying, 'What are these people doing. They don't even know if they have any money,'" Fitzgerald added.

There has been much debate over the last several weeks as to whether the School Department is in fiscal trouble. Fitzgerald has estimated that the department would be short $32,000 if all accounts were spent down. Fitzgerald has said that he is confident that the department is in sound fiscal shape.

On the other side, committee member James Evans has estimated that the budget is as much as $80,000 off, and he has refused to support any further expenditures without corresponding cuts.

Salvation Army offers a lift for tough lives

By Carlene Hempel
HARTE-HANKS STAFF WRITER

Money is tight for Pat Holt.

And right now, she can't predict when things will get better. "I don't know if I'll ever get back on my feet again," she said. To ease her burden a little, Holt visits The Salvation Army Community Center for meals a couple times a week. "It really does save a lot of money in the winter," she said.

Holt, 50, wants to get into public housing, but said her name will be on a waiting list for another year. "I have to come here, because the place I'm in now ... it's just too expensive. And I have to run a car because I have to get to work to pay the rent."

Albert Brodeur said it's not so much the money he saves that brings him to The Salvation Army soup kitchen. He goes because his best friends are there, he said.

"I come here a lot to meet different people ... and if you don't have a family, well, you know, it's a good place to come to talk about everything," he said. "It's company."

Brodeur, 57, jogged his memory, trying to remember when he first started visiting the soup kitchen. "Well, let's see, I guess after I got busted for the second time for DWI (driving while intoxicated). No, since I got hurt on the job, that's when," Brodeur remembered triumphantly.

Brodeur spent Thanksgiving Day at the soup kitchen, and said he will probably do the same at Christmas. "I have some relatives around here and I have some friends, but I have a lot of pride I guess. I don't like impos-

Rug thieves strike again in local home

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Winchester police are combing one neighborhood searching for clues to a recent daring housebreak in which Oriental rugs were again the target.

Officer Philip Coss responded to the break on Grayson Road on the morning of of Nov. 29. A woman, asked by the home owners to check their home while they were away, told police that the break must have occured sometime the previous night.

According to that woman, she went to check on the home and was alarmed when she was unable to enter the home because the front door was jammed. She then went to the rear of the house and noticed the back door was open. At that point, the woman went to a neighbor's house and called police.

According to police reports, six Oriental rugs were stolen from the residence. Also stolen were 12 Royal Dalton figurines. The house was ransacked, but there was nothing else missing from the house. There is no estimate yet on the price of the six rugs or the figurines. Police found that the front door was unable to be opened because someone had jammed a typewriter into the door.

A rash of Oriental rug thefts have plagued the town for the past ten years.

Senior stress reaches a fever pitch

By Deirdre Murdock
COUNCIL ON YOUTH

This is the second article in occasional articles written by a member of the Council on Youth

The number one way to avoid senior stress: HIDE ALL COLLEGE APPLICATIONS. In case you haven't noticed, I'm referring to seniors in high school and the high level of stress they feel. Once college choices are put in front of them, they must start determining the course of their entire life. For the 1 percent who have already applied, you are the lucky ones. For the rest of us, a long road is ahead to finish the college applications.

If you are over the age of 19, avoid the c-word (college) at all cost. All adults love to ask where the senior is applying, and what they want to major in, neither of which the senior is certain about. A senior must answer this same question about 500 times during the course of the fall and winter. My solution to this problem is one where we all have recorded our speech on tape and play it to whomever is dumb enough to ask (includes all adults). This way all the senior has to do is mouth the words and merely pretend like they're having fun. It would be much better if questions were only asked in the late spring, when everyone, hopefully, would had already gotten in to one college. In the fall, seniors can only guess where they will be accepted. Please parents, friends, neighbors, refrain from using the c-word.

One day I was counting out my change at a restaurant. This change would determine what I would be able to order. My friend and I then observed a special card that had been placed on our table. This card was a listing of cheaper prices with these words written in large print: SENIORS ONLY. Of course we knew this unfortunately was not us, yet it made us think. Why don't we get a discount. In my opinion we have three times as much stress as senior citizens and don't have any money. Why don't they mean what they say? That way all seniors can get discounts: seniors citizens, seniors in high school, and why not seniors in college too. They have to face the question: What are you going to do with the rest of your life? None of them really have an answer either. Inevitably, I could only afford a coffee, and so my search for equality would have to be continued for another day.

LIBRARY LINES

Learn to use online library catalog in this column

Have you tried the Public Access Catalog at the Winchester Public Library yet? PAC is an online, computerized catalog that lists not only Winchester's books and other materials, but those of the Minuteman Library Network as well. The information is kept current and complete.

Circulation information is provided; you can tell if an item is checked out and when it is due back, saving you an unnecessary trip to the stacks. Patrons also have dial-up access to the Public Access Catalog through their home computers; information on this service is available at the Reference Desk. It makes sense to learn to use the PAC, and starting in the next installment of Library Lines, we will offer brief, simple lessons on how to use this catalog. You can clip the lessons and bring them to the Library with you.

The Minuteman Library Network has been funded in part by state and federal funds administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

Friends of the Library eager to contact local authors

If you are an author who resides in Winchester, the Friends of the Library would be eager to hear from you. Over the years, the Friends have sponsored readings and lectures by noted authors from all over the United States. Now, in their efforts to reach out to the community and plan programs of interest to local residents, the Friends are compiling a "resource list" of Winchester authors who would be available for literary programs or events sponsored by the Friends. If you are interested, you can contact the Friends through Richard Welton at the Library, telephone 721-7171.

Library to collect "Food for Fines" during holidays

Here is a good opportunity to clear up your Library records while helping the needy. From Nov. 23 through Dec. 24, the Library will accept food donations instead of money as payment for overdue fines. Patrons who return their overdue materials with a donation of non-perishable food will not be charged a cash fine. The following rules apply:

1. Only non-perishable foods will be accepted.
2. The food items collected should be of comparable value to the fine usually imposed: $5 per day for videos, 5 cents per day for books, periodicals, and all audio-visual material other than videos.
3. Current fines on overdue material returned to Winchester and older fines on previously returned material are eligible.
4. Museum passes, lost books, and audio-visual equipment are not eligible.

All food donations will be given to the Woburn Council for Social Concern, who will distribute the food to those in need. Last year over 80 bags were collected. Help make this another successful year.

If you have a question or comment about anything mentioned in this column, call the Community Services Librarian at the Winchester Public Library, 721-7171.

Friends Board meeting scheduled for Dec. 8

The Board of the Friends of the Winchester Public Library will have its next meeting on Tuesday, Dec. 8, at 7:30 p.m. The Friends will discuss their upcoming programs, and listen to a presentation by the Technical Services Department. The public is welcome.

Friends of the Library publish reading list

The Friends of the Winchester Public Library have just issued "Into The Stacks," a suggested reading list for fall. This thoroughly annotated list has been prepared by Mary Lou Cowgill, who serves on the Friends' board. It includes the best in fiction and nonfiction, along with Cowgill's informative critical comments. Copies are available in the Library, and a copy is available for reference on the New Book Table in the Reference Room.

WINCHESTER NEWS

Winchester Girl Scouts take part in a Patriot's Trail Council sponsored workshop. The girls built a suspension bridge using chairs, strings and poster board in "Science in Action" conducted by the Massachusetts Society of Women Engineers. Left to right they are Christina Sanzari, Eden Clark and Megan Lebel.

Local marine reservesmen join Ron Piretti and Darlene Ginsberg, owners of the Mail Boxes Etc. store in Winchester, in launching the 1992 Toys for Tots program in the area. New toys or games can be donated at the store through Dec. 20 and will be distributed to local needy children for Christmas.

1992 Toys for Tots drive kicks-off

Needy Winchester children will have a happier holiday as the 1992 Winchester Toys for Tots drive kicks-off on Nov. 21. Mail Boxes, Etc. at 6 Mount Vernon St. will serve as an official collection site for the annual drive which runs through Dec. 20. The Winchester store is one of 62 independently owned and operated Mail Boxes, Etc. retail stores in eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire that will serve as official collection centers for this beloved annual drive, now in its 46th year under the auspices of the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve.

Founded on the premise that "every child deserves a little Christmas," Toys for Tots nationally collects and delivers millions of toys each year to children in need. New, unwrapped toys may be donated by individuals at Mail Boxes, Etc. where they will be picked up by local Marine Reserve units, wrapped and distributed (through local social service agencies) to children in the local area.

The franchisees of Mail Boxes, Etc. have committed their support to Toys for Tots through participation with the Marine Corps Reserve on several levels. Each store will prominently display and actively promote its collection center. In addition, they will donate time, materials and additional toys. They also will participate in local kickoff events and other activities to raise awareness and visibility.

"As a small business in Winchester we feel a debt of gratitude to our local customers and neighbors," said Ron Piretti and Darlene Ginsberg, store owners. "Our participation in Toys for Tots is a way we can give something back to the town and see real results."

"The success of Toys for Tots rests on local businesses and volunteers supporting us," said local reserve spokesman Lt. Joseph Mahoney. "We are grateful to local Mail Boxes, Etc. for providing an enormous boost to our efforts to help these children."

This year, Toys for Tots will help Winchester residents spread their goodwill beyond local communities. A portion of this year's collection will be earmarked for distribution to children in many South Florida communities ravaged by Hurricane Andrew.

Toys for Tots drives are conducted by over 200 Marine Corps Reserve units across the country, collecting over 8 million toys a year. To date, over 100 million children have been able to experience the joy and surprise of opening a holiday toy because of the Toys for Tots program.

Local Marine Reservesmen join Ron Piretti and Darlene Ginsberg, owners of the Mail Boxes, Etc. store in Winchester, in launching the 1992 Toys for Tots program in the area. New toys or games can be donated at the store through Dec. 20 and will be distributed to local needy children for Christmas. All 62 of the owner operated Mail Boxes, Etc. stores in eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire are serving as corporate sponsors and official collection sites for this year's Toys for Tots program.

Forum draws crowd hoping to eradicate racism in Winchester

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Winchester residents gathered to discuss racism in Winchester at a forum spurred on by a recent incident of racist graffiti in town.

Fifty-five people of various colors, ages, religions, and gender were represented at the forum on racism at Winchester High School. The participants met to share experiences in discrimination, enhance community awareness, and discuss how the problem could be addressed.

"The forum was developed after several recent incidents involving both graffiti on the streets and parents' tales about things said to their children," said Multicultural Director Sandy Thompson.

Some participants at the forum told of personal discrimination they have experienced in Winchester. Agnes Lugira told the group about discovering the racist graffiti outside the ABC home: "I was outraged, but I felt at the same time that something should be done ... It's a loud message that we can't ignore."

A host parent of an ABC child, a Jewish student, an Oriental student, and a black parent all said they had personally faced discrimination recently in the town.

Some participants said that the residents of Winchester were reluctant to change, including a change to a more diverse population or even accepting the fact that racism exists in Winchester.

"They say, 'Oh, it's horrible,' and then they don't do anything about it ... They want to make people happy, but they don't want to sacrifice," said high school student Gary DeYoung.

Some blamed the town authorities for a complacent attitude toward racism in town. One participant asked why there was no representatives from the Chamber of Commerce, elected officials, school committee members or principals at the forum. The only official in attendance was acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald. One high school student said she wrote a letter to her principal regarding an incident that made her feel uncomfortable as a Jewish student and never received an answer.

One participant went to an even higher authority to place the blame. Jerome DelPino said that Presidents Reagan and Bush were to blame for the racism that exist in Winchester and elsewhere. He said 12 years of Republican rule had "fundamentally given white America permission to be mean."

One participant wondered whether the schools were doing enough to teach students about the effect of racism. Several students present said they have found that many teachers were open and willing to discuss racism. Some parents added that too much responsibility is being put on the schools instead of where real change will occur — at home.

The town's rejection of the METCO program in the early-'80s, which would have bused minority students into Winchester, still bothered many participants. Many felt that the town's attitude hasn't changed much since that time. "You put that thing (METCO) back on the ballot and you'll see polarization," said Jim Kurnick. "This town's not ready for METCO."

Approximately 55 residents participated in the forum sponsored by the Multicultural Network and lead by Julian Sonn of VISIONS. Thompson said she expects to hold similar forums in the future. "I hope that this would not be a flash-in-the-pan," said DelPino. "(Eradicating racism) is not something that occurs by asking for it or simply wishing it will happen."

Quality caring

"After my accident, I was afraid I wouldn't be able to take care of myself and my home without some help. I looked into convalescent centers and nursing homes, but I hated to give up the security of being in my own home. When I had a Caretenders' home health aide and physical therapist come in, I was able to keep my home, my health and my independence. Caretenders stays in touch with my physician and they make sure I get the quality caring that will help me get back on my feet."

AROUND TOWN

Displays visitors permit pass to the Massachusetts Lottery headquarters, where Joseph A. Mozzicato Jr. and executive director of the Lottery Eric Turner and his staff met in regard to upcoming legislation to create a new specifically targeted Massachusetts lottery ticket:

Mozzicato legislation still going strong

On Friday Nov. 20, more than one year and 22,000 signatures and letters sent to elected legislative officials, Joseph A. Mozzicato's attempt to create a new Massachusetts environmental lottery ticket are one step closer to becoming a reality. The meeting's results will be forwarded to State Senator Charles Shannon and House of Representatives cosponsor Paul Casey of the "Mozzicato environmental legislation."

In early December an amended version of Senate Bill No. 380 will be resubmitted on behalf of Mozzicato by Sen. Shannon and Rep. Casey, at the Massachusetts State House. During this time Mozzicato will continue his petition to United States Congressman Markey for his local support, and consideration of a specifically targeted national environmental lottery program. Mozzicato sites the environment and recycling as one of the three leading concerns of American citizens in a Life Magazine poll of more than 400,000 responding. He was the guest speaker at the Medford Kiwanis on environmental issues and related topics.

He emphatically stated that this is not just a localized issue that ends at the Massachusetts border, but is a worldwide if not at the very least a national issue. Mozzicato has future updates planned on greater Boston area radio as well as newspaper coverage on the progress of this environmental cmpaign.

Buying stamps? Why not have them delivered?

Several stamp-buying services that help postal customers year-round are particularly handy during the holiday season, Michael Donlon of the Winchester Post Office points out.

"We want you to mail early for the holidays, there are some options available in addition to the post office to buy stamps," he says. "Through easy stamp services, you can have stamps delivered to you within five business days. You can pick up a Stamps by Mail form at the Winchester Post Office or get one from your letter carrier. This form is postage paid and there is no additional charge to you for handling your order."

"Credit and telephone orders for stamps may be placed by calling 1-800-stamp-24 and using your Visa, Discover or Mastercard. A $3 handling charge is added to orders up to $85; handling for larger orders cost slightly more."

"Stamps are also available from vending machines in the lobby of the Winchester Post Office, at postal stations and branches, and at these non-postal retail outlets:

Latanision exhibits at Coop through Dec.

Winchester Cooperative Bank is exhibiting watercolor paintings by Winchester artist Carolyn Latanision during the months of November and December.

Latanision has won numerous awards in regional and national competitions. In October she won Fourth Place medal and prize in The Pennsylvania Watercolor Society National Juried Exhibition. During the same month she was invited to become a juried member of the Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club in New York City while also exhibiting in their 96th Annual Open Exhibition at the National Arts Club. The Catharine Lorillard Wolfe Art Club, an organization of women artists, was founded in 1896 for the advancement of traditional representational art.

Latanision's work is in many corporate and private collections, including the Cabot Corporation Collection in Boston, Martin-Marietta Corporation in Baltimore, and Katayama Chemical Works Company in Japan. She works at her studio at 42 Pleasant St., in Woburn and also teaches watercolor classes there.

How our new president could affect your financial situation

This is the first in occasional articles that the Star will publish on timely financial topics.

By DAVID R. SIMMER, JD, MSA
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

Newly elected presidents typically leap at the opportunity to institute their new vision. Twelve years ago Ronald Reagan called on his post-election influence to overhaul the US income tax system. During his watch the top income tax rates dropped from a high of 70 per cent to 28 per cent.

President-elect Clinton's campaign rhetoric portends another shift in taxes. His plan is to cut the deficit and introduce a number of social programs which will require an increase in collected taxes. While we may see new taxes, some old favorites (like the income tax) will undoubtedly be subject to change again.

Clinton's primary target for increased taxes is the upper income population. (The definition of upper income may be broader than any of us imagined.) But early indications are that Clinton will offer a deal. In exchange for a high tax burden, Clinton will offer tax incentives that will encourage investment consistent with Clinton's plan for the nation.

Most agree that the top tax bracket will rise from its 31 per cent maximum. A number of companies are even prepaying bonuses in anticipation of higher 1993 rates. Early projections suggest a 36 per cent top bracket is possible with an additional 10 per cent excise tax on the income of the super-rich.

For years the untouchables have been tax-free buildup within life insurance contracts and the three trillion dollar pool of pension assets. With the total national debt over $4 trillion these untouchables could find themselves under attack. Anyone owning life insurance or participating in a pension plan should pay close attention to legislation in these areas.

Life insurance has always been a great tax-favored investment. Cash values within life policies accumulate without the bite of current taxation. And at death the proceeds of the insurance pass to the beneficiary tax-free. Watch for Congress to make a run at these tax-favored contracts in the future.

Revenue-hungry legislators are pondering the three trillion dollars of pension assets. These are the assets accumulated to pay the pension obligation to employees. Retirees have always paid the tax when they received distributions from these funds. Washington has considered introducing a small tax on these pools during the years of accumulation. The concern is the impact that a tax imposed on the accumulating assets may have on benefits received by the employee at retirement.

High income taxpayers should also expect to:

- pay tax on a larger portion of their Social Security benefits
- lose some of the tax deductions available from large first and second home mortgages, and
- face a higher Alternative Minimum Tax

But the news is not all bad. Clinton will undoubtedly use the tax code to stimulate job growth. Among the ideas is reintroducing the investment tax credit. This program gives businesses immediate tax incentives to purchase new equipment. New equipment purchases should create new manufacturing jobs.

Clinton is also a proponent of the low-income housing tax credit. The credit extension was part of the bill that President Bush vetoed on election day. Clinton appears to support the extension as an incentive for providing affordable housing. We will undoubtedly see more programs like the low income housing credit. High income taxpayers will receive tax breaks for making appropriate investments.

The task of reducing the deficit while simultaneously stimulating growth and introducing new social programs is a daunting one. The tax code will undoubtedly again be a primary pawn in accomplishing the varied objectives of the new administration.

Give, but give wisely

It's the stuff of the season: the warm glow that comes from bringing a neglected child a few moments of happiness, of easing the plight of one disabled person, of making sure a less fortunate family has a good meal or warm clothes.

It just feels good.

So when someone approaches you to give, or give a bit more this year, the wallet opens a bit more easily for a good cause. Yet "sweet charity" is often more sweet for professional fundraisers than the actual charities for which they collect. The attorney general's office reviewed 128 fundraising efforts conducted last year, and found that just one in 10 professional fundraisers funneled more than half of what they collected to their charities. And almost two in 10 kept 90 cents of every dollar they took in under the guise of helping a good cause.

Fraud is prevalent. Several fund-raisers are now serving jail time for bilking small businesses with misleading claims about how the donations would be spent.

Unfortunately, the taint even stains reputable charities. The United Way has suffered the most over this past year, both from a souring economy and a scandal involving the high-living style of its former national president.

United Way pledges in Massachusetts fell $3 million short of goal, with the scandal playing a role. Those still contemplating a donation should know that the United Way's problem was rooted out and that the incident was never a reason to avoid giving to the local United Way.

The attorney general's office and Massachusetts Better Business Bureaus are promoting charitable giving this year with the slogan "Give But Give Wisely." Their sound advice boils down to this: Ask a lot of questions.

Ask whether the caller is a professional fund-raiser. If so, ask for the group's address and telephone number. Ask how the donation will be used, and what percentage goes to the charity. Ask for written material. Ask if the charity and fund-raiser are registered with the state. Ask the name of the organization that will benefit — if it's not familiar, call the organization directly.

Legitimate fund-raisers will be more than willing to provide answers. Those who duck and dodge are best avoided.

Local charities have a tough road to travel in any season. Smaller groups lean heavily on fundraising organizations, because they don't have the time or staff to raise money on their own. Any money a fund-raiser gives them is money they wouldn't have otherwise.

A direct gift to a local group ensures that more of every dollar goes where it should. If you give to United Way of Greater Boston, for example, 75 cents of every dollar passes on to an array of good causes, from shelters and day-care providers to mental health clinics and drug- and alcohol-abuse counseling.

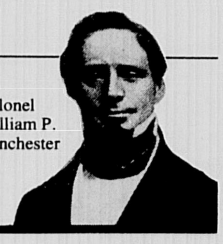

So ask those questions, but don't stop giving. You'll enjoy the feeling.

The Town Boosters

By Dan Chane
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

The bright clear Sunday this week couldn't have been a better setting as citizens and merchants alike tottered on ladders, festooning the lamp posts in The Square with the traditional green garlands- each topped with festive red bows.

While Dick Malcolm and his assistant worked Main Street, Tom Patriola and wife — with their usual verve — wrapped the posts opposite the Congregational Church.

On the rotary, a jovial group was artistically placing the colorful holiday figures as a crew from the D.P.W. strung lights through the trees on the common.

Years ago Winchester wasn't much for seasonal decorations but one inviolate tradition was the lighted spruce tree on the Common. The original tree was donated and decorated by the Fortnightly Club in 1921 and it was to serve as a centerpiece for the annual Christmas Eve carol sing for many years.

Attempts to raise funds for more extensive seasonal decoration saw sporadic results at best — with Woburn and Stoneham constantly outdoing Winchester year after year.

A turning point may have been

The proper hearth for ordering out

GUEST COLUMNIST

By Terry Marotta

According to a recent article in the Utne Reader, kitchens "have become the new family rooms, in which only about half the space is dedicated to food preparation," and "once-prominent items such as refrigerator, stove, dishwasher and sink are pushed to one side to make room for a formal dining table, richly detailed Turkish rugs, overstuffed chairs, " etc. This "sofa-and-fireplacization of the kitchen, " according to author Elizabeth Larsen, may signal "a return to pre-parlor-and rumpus-room-times, when the hearth was the natural gathering place for the household. "

Called 'hearthing,' "this trend of doing homework or shooting pool in the warm glow of the (restaurant-style, please) stove may offer a symbolic link to the way our great-grandparents lived.

"On the other hand, perhaps the homey appeal of today's fantasy kitchen" is just a way for people "to look like they're living the simple family-oriented lifestyle" so they can feel they haven't "lost touch with the cozy virtues of food preparation." Which most Americans surely have done, if we are to believe the statistics about the number of food dollars spent in restaurants.

When we read all this, it rang a bell. Does a kind of paradox occur where, the minute you fix up your sorry old kitchen, you stop using it except as a kind of fern-bar showplace? Are people beginning to gather more and more in kitchens where little actual food preparation goes on? And what of the carpenter Larsen quotes on his experience building one kitchen, which he says involved "granite countertops, ornamental moldings and megalomania; financial hemorrhage, skylights and anger"?

Our old kitchen was a catacombs of peeling yellow paint, with nary a cabinet or counter-top in sight, except for the shelving in two pantries located, oh, some 60 feet from the stove-and-sink area. Then one day, workmen arrived; and for a six-month period we had no kitchen at all, and did such dishes as we dirtied in a bathtub two floors away.

Then suddenly one day we had a kitchen again, with barstools and ferns and an island, as well as fancy countertops like the granite ones that carpenter describes, which seemed to cost about what you'd expect to pay for a year of college except WHOOPS!, it turns out the one thing you can't put down on them is dishes hot from the oven! We have a fancy side-by-side freezer/fridge (upholstered to match the cabinets) that looks like two twin coffins upended. But do we ourselves cook in this place, we pause to wonder? Or are we just "hearthing" too, between dialing for pizza deliveries. And what are others doing?

To find out, we called our friend Lola. "I used to make everything from scratch," she'd once told us. "Then we got this new kitchen and I haven't cooked since." We reminded her of that. "Yeah," she said, "it's pretty true. But you know what? I made a pact with God that no matter what a shambles the rest of the house was in, I'd keep the kitchen spotless."

We went over, to see for ourselves. Now most people's kitchens contain a mishmash of junk mail, kids' drawings, old calendars; dollar-off coupons, widowed gloves, and small stray pairs of underpants. Not Lola's.

Lola's kitchen is a paradise of perfection, with polished copper pans, and a basket of redly swelling apples; a Tiffany lamp, and a large wooden table; a TV and a wall display of antique kitchen gadgets; an oak-and-glass-fronted china cabinet bursting with stemware and quilted outfits for both mixing bowl and blender; cookie jars with cows on them and a miniature set of iron skillets, an inch in diameter; and brooding over all, an enormous framed print of one of those 17th century Dutch paintings showing hams thickly rinded with fat; drooling semi-peeled oranges; shrimp and lobsters and crabs still wearing eyes beaded like a lady's evening bag; a crusty loaf of bread and two shimmering glasses of wine.

The picture alone made our mouths water, so we opened the fridge and saw: Packaged fondue. Canned ham patties. Bottled beverages of every description. But also two bags of fresh whole cranberries that could have been lifted straight from the painting.

We went home to our own place then and opened our fancy twin coffins with the cherry panelling, which by the way are both too narrow to fit much of anything. No real food here, either scratch or prepared. We spent more than our ancestors earned in their combined lifetimes building this place, we thought as we pulled up a barstool and cleared away the underpants. Now all it really needs is one of them nice 17th century food paintings.

Resident comments on special education article in Star

To the editor:

I was pleased to read your reporting on the special education program here in Winchester. This is a very timely subject as the country renews its commitment to education.

My career has moved me through various school districts and the Winchester schools rank very high. In particular, the special education program that Frank Bianco runs is a model effort. It stands out for its commitment to the child and for its rich content. He has a winning team!

On Sunday, Nov. 22, chocolate lovers gathered at Mahoney's Garden Center to enjoy samples from fifteen of the area's finest cholcolatiers. Proceeds from the Friends of Recreation sponsored event benefited the Winchester Youth Center. The Friends group thanks the "Chocolate Sunday" committee members; Freya Surabian, chairperson, Dottie O'Malley, Virginia Westgate, Kathy Jackson, Dolly Sturman, Lainie Higgins, Barbara Lynch, Maura Boylan, Dot Butler, and Denise VonMerring for their enthusiastic presentation of what will hopefully become an annual event. Ambrose team plans to explore cultural diversity

To the editor:

The members of the Ambrose School Intermediate Team have received funding from The Winchester Foundation for Excellence to participate in a Multicultural Reading Workshop. Our intent is to learn about books and authors which represent diversity of cultures, lifestyles and viewpoints. This workshop will be offered after school by Gail Willett of Savanna Books and will be a hands-on introduction to a collection of literature highlighting Black, Asian-American, Native-American and Latino writers.

We would like to invite parents and interested community members to join us as participants in this workshop which will be held on Thursday, Jan. 7 at 3:30 p.m. at the Ambrose School. Participants will be required to read a recommended selection before the workshop. If you are interested in joining us, call the Ambrose School at 721-7012 by Dec. 15 and leave your name, address and telephone number.

ON THE RECORD

A breakdown of the belt at the town transfer station created long lines on Swanton Street as residents flocked to the dump after the first nice day for raking leaves all season. "We had a major problem with the sprockets on the belt," said Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer. Maurer said residents deposited trash in trailers at the transfer station and that the DPW expected to have the belt back on line by Dec. 5.

The lights went out briefly at the town hall during a selectmen's meeting recently but everyone waited out the three minute blackout and power was restored.

The School Committee is now keeping track of donations made to the town's schools by the parents' associations. The theory is that parents have made major contributions to Winchester schools that are not seen in the bottom line operating cost of running a school system. While some associations donated disk players and software, it was items like calculators, books, wall charts, computer surge protectors, and globes that upset some members. "I'm embarrassed that they had to buy something that we should have purchased from our own budget," said acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald.

The school administration must be proud of the test results from the Massachusetts Education Assessment Program. The results showed that Winchester had a higher percentage of students who excelled in all five tested subjects than the state average and the average of comparative communities. The test results for Winchester remained high above the state average in all the grades tested — fourth, eighth, and twelfth.

The Multicultural Network went all out at their recent forum on racism to make sure no one was offended. They even referred to a handout on discrimination as a personuals (not please, manuals).

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 19 — Report No. 48
Massachusetts House and Senate
Nov. 27, 1992

THE HOUSE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from Nov. 16-20. Prior to both roll calls, Speaker Flaherty informed House members that any representatives who have relatives on the state payroll should vote "present" in order to avoid a potential conflict of interest. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

PAY RAISES (H 6208) — House 84-28, rejected an amendment to the bill providing a 13 percent pay raise for some 50,000 state workers. The amendment would provide only a 6 percent hike.

Amendment supporters said this is a more reasonable and fiscally responsible hike which will allow the legislature to revisit the issue of an additional 7 percent hike at a later date.

Opponents said workers have not had a raise in five years and noted this hike was negotiated in 1990. (A "Yes" vote is for reducing the hike to 6 percent. A "No" vote is against reducing the hike to 6 percent.)

Rep. Paul Casey voted no.

MORE PAY RAISES (H 6208) — House 87-24, rejected an amendment to the 13 percent pay raise bill. The bill provides a 6 percent hike on Dec. 2 and the final 7 percent on June 28, 1993. The amendment would provide the 6 percent raise this year and then a hike of 2 percent in each of the next three years.

Amendment supporters said this would spread the raise over four years and help keep the budget in balance without requiring other cuts or layoffs.

Opponents again said the workers were promised this hike in 1990 and have not had a hike in 5 years. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment spreading the hike over four years. A "No" vote is against the amendment.)

Casey voted no.

THE SENATE — Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of Nov. 16-20. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

CHILDREN AND MEDICAL TREATMENT (H 5597) — Senate 16-15, reconsidered its earlier approval of a bill including provisions prohibiting criminal or child abuse and neglect charges from being brought against parents who treat their sick children through spiritual healing and prayer rather than through medical treatment.

The bill does, however, allow charges to be brought against parents who interfere with medical treatment for their children ordered by the court.

Bill supporters said the measure protects the religious freedom of Christian Scientists. They noted neither spiritual healing nor medical treatment are perfect and argued the choice should be left up to the parents.

Opponents said the bill goes too far and argued the state has an obligation to protect children. Some noted they favored an earlier version of the bill which was respectful of religion and still protective of children. Another vote on the bill is scheduled in the Senate during the week of Nov. 30. (A "Yes" vote is for reconsidering approval of the bill. A "No" vote is for the bill.)

Sen. Charles Shannon did not vote.

DRUG SENTENCES (S 1492) — Senate 26-3, refused to table a bill providing a five-year mandatory prison sentence for anyone convicted of possession of 14 grams of heroin, morphine or opium. Current law provides mandatory sentences for possession of 28 or more grams.

Bill supporters said it is time to get tough with these hard drug dealers and insure they are kept off the streets. Opponents said mandatory sentences tie the hands of judges and are not the answer to the drug problem. They said the bill will lead to overcrowded prisons and increased spending.

The bill later received final approval by the Senate and a motion to reconsider that approval is pending. (A "Yes" vote is for tabling the bill. A "No" vote is against tabling.)

Barrett did not vote.

Shannon voted no.

PAY RAISES (H 6208) — Senate 20-9, rejected an amendment to the bill providing a 13 percent pay raise for some 50,000 state workers. The bill provides a 13 percent hike on Dec. 2 and the final 7 percent on June 28, 1993.

The amendment provides a 6 percent hike as a one-time benefit and stipulates that it shall not be considered a permanent salary adjustment for purposes of collective bargaining.

Amendment supporters said this is a more reasonable hike which covers 64,000 rather than 50,000 workers. They noted it requires continued collective bargaining which could lead to necessary changes in the system including providing raises based on productivity.

Opponents said these workers have not had a raise in five years and are entitled to this reasonable hike which was negotiated in 1990. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment reducing the hike to 6 percent. A "No" vote is against the amendment reducing the hike.)

reached in 1953 when Chief James E. Callahan had his men string lights on Central Fire station for the first time.

This evening (Thursday, Dec. 3 at 7 p.m.) the square will again be resplendent with colorful lights and music as Winchester Chamber of Commerce presents its annual "Christmas Lighting and Stroll".

Those Winchester folk attending will experience small town life at its best as friends and neighbors come together on their common to celebrate not only the beginning of the holiday season — but the essence of Winchester itself.

That most New England of institutions — a homemade bean supper — will be held up on the hill by the First Congregational Church from 5 p.m. until festivities begin on Dec. 3.

The common will be packed as youth of all ages await that tip-toe moment when Santa arrives — executing his annual breath-taking balancing act atop one of our fire trucks.

Following Santa's arrival Winchester merchants will extend their hospitality to all — and Arthur Griffin is graciously opening his new museum on Shore Road to enable everyone to warm up over cider and cookies.

For more than 10 years Winchester Chamber of Commerce has organized this holiday event — and has raised the funds necessary to bring it to fruition.

A descendant of the old Winchester Board of Trade, chartered in 1918, the Winchester Chamber of Commerce members have always been the supportive boosters of anything Winchester.

Year after year "The Chamber" has been one of the town's prime assets — has been a great credit to the community, and has always faithfully "delivered the goods."

Intergenerational visits from high school and middle school musicians

Under the direction of conductor John McCann, two holiday musical visitations will be made by the young people from the High School and McCall Middle School. Winchester Hospital president addresses seniors

Eugene E. Loubier, FACHE, president of Winchester Hospital, will speak to seniors at the Jenks Senior Center on Friday, Dec. 4, at 10:30 a.m., concerning the problems of coping with the rocketing expenditures for complex medical equipment, health insurance inadequacy and the tightening economy.

Presented under the sponsorship of the Winchester Seniors Association's Health Committee, chaired by Dr. Robert Smith, this program is sure to be of great interest to all Winchester residents. While many suburban hospitals in the vicinity have had to shut their doors, the Winchester Hospital has continued to keep abreast of the times and meet the pace set by major teaching hospitals.

Loubier's description of his methods should be worth hearing. Note the date: Friday, Dec. 4, at 10:30 a.m., in the Jenks Center's Pond Room. There is no charge for attendance at this program, and no prior registration is required.

Judy Muggia to discuss politics in Winchester

Judith Muggia, former chairperson of the Winchester Board of Selectmen and Chamber of Commerce Citizen of the Year, will discuss problems faced and the general ups and downs of local political life, on Friday, Dec. 11, at 10:30 a.m., in the Jenks Center's Pond Room.

Muggia's remarkable career and her intimate knowledge of many aspects of public affairs in Winchester, plus her great popularity, combine to make this a most promising event. All are welcome to this discussion, sponsored by the WSA's Education Committee. No prior sign up is required and there is no charge.

Marion Arrell admires the "Scrapaholic" Quilt on display at the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester. The quilt will be raffled off at the Christmas party to be held at the Center on Wednesday, Dec. 9, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Pick up your Unicef cards at the Jenks Center

Now that December is here and the spirit of Christmas is in the air, you are reminded again of the Unicef greeting cards, seasonal note papers, calendars, and other incidental items, being offered for sale by Church Women United of Winchester, for the benefit of the United Nations Children's program.

A representative from Church Women United will be at the Jenks Senior Center daily from Monday, Nov. 30, through Friday, Dec. 11, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Seniors and the general community are asked to stop by and make purchases to support this most worthy cause.

The WSA Crafts and Stitchery class, under the leadership of Jane Norberg, designed and created this handsome quilt which will be raffled off at the Christmas party on Wednesday, Dec. 9. All seniors are invited to attend the annual WSA Christmas Party on Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 1:30 p.m., in the Jenks Center's Pond Room. Entertainment for the event will be furnished by soloist, Elizabeth Pucciarella, a lyric soprano, and there will be a sing-along of Christmas music. Refreshments will be served, Santa Claus will distribute gifts to those in attendance, and the "Scrapaholic" quilt will be raffled off. Reservations must be made early as there is a limit of 160 places. A charge of $3 a person can be paid to the desk receptionist, to cover the cost of refreshments, the gift, and entertainment.

Hours of the exhibit will be Saturday, Dec. 5, 11 a.m. - 4 p.m. and Sunday, Dec. 6, noon - 4 p.m.

FIRST PANTS

He stands there in that doorway ready for...
No longer dressed as a little child and wearing his six years piled on his shoulders, he is transformed suddenly into this young man.
Marked by his garb,
by this dark eyes staring at me,
by his father's pride in the family tree, he is growing even as we are watching.

David Lauver's picture of young Jacob, the six-year-old boy leaning on the door frame. As David explains, "Jacob's father called the morning of this young lad's sixth birthday to join the family to photograph the moment of Jacob's receiving his first pair of pants.

Kris Rodammer's Noah's Chair

Griffin Center presents photographer David Lauver

The Arthur Griffin Center for Photographic Art is pleased to present photographs of David Lauver.

Lauver brings to the outside world a knowledge of Amish and "plain people" by photographing them in their native environment. Lauver has devoted a large part of his career to documenting the Amish and Old Order Mennonites of Central Pennsylvania.

In documenting this culture, Lauver has sought to dispel myths about these people. One such myth is their reluctance to be photographed. Lauver has found that different sects and individuals have varying and diverse rulings on this matter.

Lauver lives in Selinsgrove, PA. where he is the proprietor of Images, a photographic studio and art gallery. He is a member of the faculty at Susquehanna University, where he lectures in fine arts, photography, and photojournalism.

Lauver currently has 60 pieces being displayed at the Griffin Center. Gallery hours are Thursday through Sunday 1-4 p.m. There are special hours on Dec. 3 from 7-9 p.m.

Winchester photographer exhibits at Boston society

The color photographs of Kris Rodammer will be on display at The Boston Society of Architects gallery beginning Dec. 3.

Winchester resident Kris Rodammer makes photographs of the commonplace, but with colors so vibrant and saturated they seem altogether beyond reality. His images, printed in the Cibachrome process, depict familiar subjects — an old stairway, a forgotten chair, a fishing boat — all rarely observed or studied with a careful eye. Rodammer's photographs bring these subjects out of the ordinary, and despite their appearance, neither the colors nor the subjects of his images have been manipulated.

A 1978 Communication Design graduate of Rochester Institute of Technology, Rodammer curtailed his career as a graphic designer last year to dedicate his full energy to making photographs.

Rodammer's work has been exhibited at the Centre Georges Pompidou in Paris, is part of the permanent collection of the Library of Congress, and has been published by Graphis Press in Switzerland.

The exhibition of Rodammer's photographs will be on display through Dec. 23 at The Boston Society of Architects gallery in The Architects Building, 52 Broad St. in Boston. Call 951-1433, ext. 221 for further information and directions.

Salvation Army offers help to those who need ing on people," Brodeur said.

He also planned to spend Friday's dinner-time at the facility to celebrate Carl Svenson's 45th birthday. Like Brodeur, Svenson said he finds his strength and laughter with friends he met though The Salvation Army.

"I'm going to spend the holidays down here because these people are my family," Svenson said. "You know, there's been plenty of times I've been discriminated against. Plenty ... and that's by family too.

"But not here," he said. "You're supposed to walk in your own shoes, but you're a sad case if you can't give time or an encouraging word to a poor person." Brodeur agreed, thinking back to Svenson's words, offered when Brodeur announced his decision to join a literacy program.

Justin Falls doesn't visit The Salvation Army for the companionship, or for the support he receives from friends there. He goes because it provides his one meal of the day ... "and because it's warm," he said.

Falls, 20, has been without a home for three months now. "I stay up all night and sleep during the day." Falls said he cannot allow himself to sleep at night. "I get so cold. I walk around so I won't freeze."

During the day, he heads to an outdoor place called "'The Weeds,' where homeless people go to sleep. It's pretty safe there," he said.

Falls said he's been "kind of without family," since his mother died in 1982. "I never met my father," he said. He tried to join the Army, but said he was discharged because of his asthma. "So here I am. I hitchhiked here. I have family somewhere in California. But it will be a long time 'til I can get out there."

Until then, he'll stay around here, trying to find odd jobs. Falls said he has a few friends in the area, but will probably have his Christmas dinner at The Salvation Army soup kitchen. After that, he doesn't know, other than catching up on some sleep at "the weeds."

The Winchester Star and other Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers are once again co-sponsoring the annual Salvation Army Holiday Fund, which raises money to help needy families during and after the December holidays. Costs may soak ratepayers plan in place to begin the project in July '93, they hope to get a state waiver until July '96.

At Spring Town Meeting the issue will be underway with discussion of funding the $5 million plant. Maurer said the town will look to float bonds to pay for the project. The municipal bonds can be paid off over a period as long as 30 years. The question up for debate is how to pay for the bonds: by property taxes or increased water rates.

If the project is paid by water rates, it would be a double hit for Winchester ratepayers who are already paying escalating water bills to fund the Boston Harbor cleanup.

An example of the financial strain the project puts on the budget can be seen at the public library. The library's board of trustees intends to go to Spring Town Meeting for some major, overdue repairs to the library, such as a new heating system, air conditioning, handicap accessibility, and reorganization of departments. The trustees had planned to ask Spring Town Meeting for approximately $2 million for the renovation. Now they may find themselves pitted against the water treatment for municipal bonds. "We could be struggling with an uphill battle," said Ellen Browning, chairperson of the library board of trustees.

Maurer sums up the situation in the same way Town Meeting members may have to: "One (the treatment plant) you have to do, the other (the library) you should do."

The filtration plant will be located at the South Reservoir. The $5 million price tag includes the treatment plant and accessories such as a storage facility and piping changes to filter all the town's water through the treatment plant.

Following the Girl Scout call to "help other people at all times", Ambrose school's Daisy Troop 1469 collected food items to donate to a food pantry to help those less fortunate at Thanksgiving. Seventeen Daisy troop members were inducted into the troop at their meeting

Fitzgerald did concede that if the School Department has to pay for a $45,000 special education legal settlement, the budget will suffer a major shortage. "The $45,000 hit is outside of our budget as far we're concerned," said Fitzgerald.

The majority of the School Committee seems to be in support of seeking that $45,000 outside the school budget. Evans, however, disagreed with that sentiment. "It is just not fair or reasonable to the community to stand up ... and say, 'This $45,000 is not out of our budget' because it really is a School Department item," said Evans.

The School Committee even now is under constant pressure to increase its budget. At its Dec. 1 meeting the committee was asked to fund before-school monitors, an aide to the Lynch Elementary School, and a superintendent search budget.

The issue of hiring four monitors to watch elementary students before the start of the school day has already been rejected twice at School Committee meetings. At the Dec. 1 meeting, the monitor stipends were up for reconsideration. Under parliamentary rules, the measure can only be brought for reconsideration by those who were not on the losing side of the previous vote — in this case, members Evans, Constance Makhoul, and Edward O'Connell. None of the three members moved to reconsider.

The rejection came after several parents had spoken in favor of the issue. Phyllis Murphy, president of the Lincoln School Parents Association, stormed out of the room immediately after the vote and slammed shut the door to the committee room. After the vote, School Committee Chairman Mark Lombardi said it was a "dead issue."

The School Committee did approve spending $8,800 on the search for a new superintendent. The budget for advertising, $3,800, has already been spent. The other $5,000 is for travel expenses. The travel allowance would be given on a per mileage basis for those prospective superintendents traveling to Winchester and not would include air fare without a separate vote by the School Committee. Lombardi said that the Search Committee for the superintendent has received 55 applications for the position. Twenty-nine are from Massachusetts; the applicant furthest away is from New Jersey.

Another possible added expense brought before the School Committee is a request for an aide at the Lynch kindergarten. The three kindergartens average 24 children. Some parents said that when the committee redistricted in June, it had promised that the teacher-pupil ratio would be 1:18. However, O'Connell said, "I do not remember the School Committee, as a body, making such a promise."

While committee members seemed supportive of hiring an aide, they were noncommittal, especially without an idea of where the money would come from.

Fitzgerald said some money for these expenditures could become available from the bus monitors that were funded but never implemented and a hiring differential for a teacher who resigned.

"There's no way we can read every meter on July ... rates are in effect when they bills are sent out, not when the water is consumed," said Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt. He suggested that anyone who felt the bills were unfair should file for an abatement.

High Street resident Philip Hollzman acted as a spokesman for the residents who received their first sewer bills under the new system. "I think we're here collectively to say this is a matter of some concern," said Hollzman. Hollzman questioned the decision to begin to bill customers even though they do not have access to the sewage system.

Furthermore, he noted that Winchester is the only community that bills non-sewage users, according to an MWRA rate manager with whom he spoke.

"I will say the board is considering the issue of septic use and how to fairly deal with this particular issue," said Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt. Schmitt said several plans would be put on the table over the next several weeks in order to be fair to the entire community.

"We are one of the few communities whose real estate does not subsidize water and sewer rates," added Schmitt. Selectman Peter VanAken said the decision to charge septic system users was proposed to Town Meeting to include them in costs directly linked to the Boston Harbor cleanup and met with its approval.

However, Selectman Stephen Powers pointed out that the 67 households affected by the new ruling would have only had a minority voice on this issue at Spring Town Meeting. He agreed that there should be some consideration given to the fact that these particular residents don't use the town-wide system. "I believe there should be a charge," "There has to be some charge otherwise you shift the 67 people on to other residents," added Powers.

"I'm sure that all of us here feel that we're in a minority and that our rights have been subsumed. I only beg that you give us due consideration," said Hollzman in summarizing the position of the group. He agreed to meet with other residents and discuss alternatives to be brought up at the next selectmen's meeting.

Resident Ken Slattery questioned the lack of planning on the part of the town. "Why couldn't a letter be sent out so we could be aware of this?" asked Slattery. "We were not made aware that we would be charged sewage," he said.

Car ends up in water

Firefighters in scuba gear immediately dove into the water to check for bodies in or around the car but found none.

The fire department sealed off the leakage with booms to prevent it from spreading, and the water supply to residents was switched from the South Reservoir to the Middle Reservoir.

The switch from the South to the Middle Reservoir had a temporary detrimental effect on the town's water system. Four separate locations in town experienced a sudden change in water pressure, causing the water to leak from the pipes, said Maurer. According to fire reports, the low water pressure caused by the shutdown of the South Reservoir pump also set off several sprinkler alarms in town.

According to fire reports, no more than five gallons of fuel were leaked into the water. Maurer said the oil containment booms were fortuitously donated by Johnson Motors owner Jim Johnson several weeks ago.

"Those booms made containment of the oil much easier," said Maurer. The lack of wind on Saturday also made the cleanup go more smoothly.

It took more than eight hours to seal off the area, switch the water system to the Middle Reservoir, and remove the car.

The interior and the exterior of the vehicle, a 1985 Buick, were extensively damaged. The front and rear ends of the vehicle were crushed. Also, the steering wheel, ignition, dashboard, and windshield were smashed; the radio and speakers were stolen; the seats were slashed; and a swastika was carved into the hood, said reports.

According to police reports, the vehicle had been stolen either earlier that morning or late the previous night. Police are unsure how the thieves entered the reservoir area since all the gates were found to be locked the next morning.

"I have to say I was very pleased by the response of the police and fire department. And Joseph Tabbi should be commended for the excellent booklet he prepared," said Maurer following his report to the selectmen.

Selectman William O'Leary called for an investigation into the incident. "We had an attack on our water supply, I would like a report on how it happened as soon as possible," said O'Leary.

SCHOOL NEWS

Workday at Lincoln school.

Work day at Lincoln School

Rich in Winchester history for more than 89 years, Lincoln School has served as a high school, junior high and now an elementary school. Lincoln is also a vital part of the beauty and heritage of the town center, and was recently treated to some well deserved loving care.

The Lincoln parent-volunteer team began its blitz on the school on Friday, Nov. 6, when a backhoe arrived and began digging holes for a landscaping project.

On Saturday, the parent crews began planting shrubs and trees; plastering and repairing walls; painting ceilings, walls and blackboards; replacing broken windows; building a new fence; stripping and hanging wallpaper; and cleaning and preparing a large storage room for the new science supply area. These are only a few of the projects tackled in order to continue to make Lincoln a "friendly" environment in which to work and learn.

Muraco students get ready for fitness

The students in grades 2 through 5 at Muraco School have been working hard in preparation for the fall physical fitness test. The physical fitness test is given twice a year, town-wide from elementary to high school students, and measures the students cardiovascular system, abdominal strength and flexibility.

The results of their tests are converted to a percentile based on the Athletic Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance Norms (AAHPERD).

Elementary students receive one of three certificates for their participation in the fitness test. If a student scored 90 percent or higher on one of the three tests they are a single crown winner. Two 90 percent or higher scores entitles the students to a double crown certificate. To acquire the triple crown award, a student must score 90 percent or higher on all three tests.

An artist visits McCall

Robert Neuman visited the Creative Art Workshop class of McCall Middle School on Friday, Nov. 20. Neuman, (the father of class member Christina), spoke about his rural roots and development as an artistic thinker; decisions he made about becoming a professional artist (fighting negative prospects); and finding sources and inspiration for his work. Neuman showed examples of prints and paintings from significant recent work periods.

He invited the eighth grade student group to his studio in Stoneham, (at some point in the spring of '93). Neuman has had numerous national and international exhibitions of his artwork, spanning his 45-year professional career. His work is also included in over 40 museum and corporate permanent art collections.

In addition, he has taught fine art courses at local colleges and art schools for many years.

All in all, the students were treated to a very special presentation by a unique and gifted individual. For more information of future "Visiting Artist at McCall" events, contact Laurie Schmidt, art teacher, at McCall Middle School.

Marie Bohlin and the eighth grade students in Ms. Zack's French class write about themselves, en francais. "It's Me" meshes personal interests with foreign language skills.

Fall 'n heroes

One writer picks Winchester's best

With the passing of the 1992 fall sports season at Winchester High, it's time to clean out the sports closet and hand out a few awards.

Best Female Athlete
Liz Kelley, girls' soccer

When Middlesex League MVP Liz Kelley was on the field, opposing coaches tried everything to contain the Sachemettes' outstanding forward. They tried double teams, triple teams and shadows but were rarely successful, as her 26 goals and 15 assists demonstrate.

JIM McKENZIE

Her skills are unquestioned and rivaled by few in the state. But what sets her apart from other all-state level players is her tremendous shot. No girl in this part of the state possesses the accuracy and sheer power of a Liz Kelley shot. The velocity Kelley was able to generate resulted in goals from all sorts of seemingly impossible angles.

Best Male Athlete
Shaun Oliver, boys' soccer

No player in the Middlesex League generated as much excitement as Winchester's Shaun Oliver. Every time the senior tri-captain touched the ball, players, coaches and fans all took notice, wondering what the nifty right winger would do next.

Oliver had the ability to make the best ML defenders look silly with his slick sideline moves. The league's coaches apparently agreed as they voted Oliver, the league's top scorer with 14 goals and 10 assists, the MVP.

Rookie of the Year
Julie Russo, girls' soccer

The little redhead, affectionately known as either "Rocky" or "Tyson," continued to impress with her all-around athletic ability.

After making the varsity teams in girls' basketball and softball — where she was the starting shortstop and leadoff hitter — as a freshman last season, Russo made her way into the starting lineup for girls' soccer, a rarity for a sophomore at Winchester High.

She controlled the left sideline from her wing halfback position like a three-year starter and, by the end of the season, had perfected her corner kicks. She'll be fun to watch in the future.

Team of the Year
Golf

With all due respect to both soccer teams, the choice for Team of the Year goes to the golf team. Coach Dave Miller's duffers qualified for team state championship play by finishing first at the Division 2 North Shore and Greater Boston Championships.

Led by junior Dave Fiorentino, who finished with a tournament-low 76, the Sachems became the first golf team in the history of the school to qualify to play in the state championship.

Coach of the Year
Michelle Palumbo, field hockey

In her first season as head coach, Michelle Palumbo resurrected a dying program, instilling pride and a winning attitude in her Sachemettes.

After an 1-7 start, during which Palumbo was forced to concentrate on the basics rather than the fine points of the game, Palumbo and the Sachemettes righted their ship and turned in a solid 3-5-2 finish to move from 10th to seventh place.

Better yet, Palumbo has her players thinking field hockey 12 months a year, instead of just during the two-month season. Palumbo's dedication could show continued results as early as next season.

Unsung Hero
Todd Sundstrom, football

Sundstrom was instrumental in two of the most memorable moments of the '92 football season. The first was "The Hit," which occurred in

Sachems' big plays produce winning number

Defense directs shutout

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Most football coaches preach that it takes a combination of hard work, skill and luck to win a football game. And when the opponent is a team the experts say is better, those factors become magnified.

When meeting Woburn on Thanksgiving Day in the 88th revival of a 101-year-old tradition, Winchester High was able to combine all three elements to produce a 19-0 whitewash of the favored Tanners.

"The Play" was MVP Josh Carroll's magnificent strip of Woburn fullback Luis Fonseca on second-and-goal from the one-foot line in the second quarter, on which the Sachem senior turned a probable 6-6 tie into a 99-yard defensive touchdown and a 12-0 Sachem advantage (further explained on Page 2B).

But while everyone was talking about Carroll's strip act, the most important thing the Sachems did was to dominate the line of scrimmage. Refusing to aknowledge the nearly 40-pound weight disadvantage both offensively and defensively, line coach Paul Manganaro's troops, decimated by injury and lacking big-game experience, destroyed Woburn in the trenches throughout the game.

"It was a great effort overall," said a beaming Manganaro. "These kids never quit in practice, got better and better all season, and put it all together this week."

Winchester began the game by piecing together a masterful first drive which whittled nearly eight and a half minutes off the clock. Starting from its own 40, Winchester ran 17 plays, including 14 rushes. The Sachems converted

Winchester rains over Woburn

Carroll takes ball, game into own hands in Thanksgiving Day classic

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

It's really too bad the Thanksgiving Day rain kept so many people away from Woburn's mud-filled Connolly Stadium for the annual Winchester-Woburn Turkey Day slugfest, because those fans who elected to stay warm and dry missed one of the most spectacular plays in the 101-year history of this storied rivalry.

Winchester High School FOOTBALL

Winchester High senior Josh Carroll, reenacting a similar play he made a few weeks earlier in the Sachems' 28-22 upset of Melrose, ripped the football away from Tanner fullback Luis Fonseca on second-and-goal from the one-foot line, turned, and sprinted 99 yards for the game-breaking touchdown in Winchester's 19-0 shutout of Woburn.

"The strip," as it instantly became known, highlighted a tremendous individual performance by Carroll, who closed his varsity career with a three-touchdown, MVP performance as Winchester (7-3) overcame the Tanners (6-3-1), the field and the weather to close the season with its fifth straight victory.

"Josh's stripping the ball on the goal line absolutely turned the game around," said Winchester head coach John Donohue. "It's a heartbreaker for (Woburn), but that's the way it goes."

In a steady rain in front of approximately 4,250 fans, Winchester took the opening kickoff and drove 60 yards in 17 plays for an early 6-0 lead. The Sachems converted four fourth-down situations to keep the drive alive. Darin Byrne's 6-yard scoot on fourth-and-1 from the Woburn 38 and Ed Russo's 4-yard dive on fourth-and-4 from the 26 were key plays.

Finally, with just 1:35 remaining in the first period, Carroll took a perfectly timed option flip from quarterback John Rauseo on fourth-and goal from the 2 and dove into the end zone for the first points of the game. After two penalties moved the extra point attempt to the 13, Winchester tried a two-point conversion, but the pass failed.

Woburn (five fumbles) had trouble holding onto the ball throughout the game. Starting from the Woburn 19, a first-snap fumble lost five yards for the Tanners. Although sophomore quarterback Steve Donaghey was able to sneak for a first down on fourth-and-inches from the 28, the next snap resulted in another fumble, upon which Winchester's Jon Arsenault pounced.

Winchester names frequent league all-star teams

Kelley, Oliver chosen soccer MVPs; Fiorentino runner-up as conference's top golfer

The Middlesex League announced its all-star teams for fall sports, and, as expected, Winchester was well represented, particularly in soccer and football.

Forward Liz Kelley made a return appearance to the ML girls' soccer all-star team, leading a list of five Sachemettes to make first-team all-league. Kelley was voted the league's MVP in a landslide.

Winchester's defense, which allowed just nine goals in 20 games, just missed a clean sweep of the back spots. Goalie Jenn Russo, sweeper Catherine Doherty, stopper Jenna DeSimone and left fullback Colleen Campbell all captured spots.

The boys' team was allowed a maximum of four selections by league rules, so at least one deserving Sachem was left off the team. Tri-captain Shaun Oliver, the runaway league-leading scorer, was selected MVP, while Jeff Tahnk and tri-captain Peter French joined him up front. Goalie Andy Nolan, in his first season between the posts, was the ML all-star keeper. The honorable mention list included senior tri-captain David Hood, a Sachem sweeper, and right wing Eric Hood, Dave's twin brother. Junior fullback Jamie Lanzo was also an honorable mention choice.

Senior co-captains Mike Szczepanski and John Rauseo head a list of four Sachems named to the ML football all-star team. Rauseo was selected at quarterback and Szczepanski at middle linebacker. Offensive tackle Justin Simeone and defensive end/halfback Josh Carroll were also tabbed.

Coach Dave Miller's golf team nearly added a third league MVP to the Winchester scoreboard in junior Dave Fiorentino, who was chosen as the No. 2 golfer in the league behind Woburn's Jon Chouinard.

Co-captain Mike McGinty and senior Brian LaPointe were chosen for the second team.

Sarah Bonnell and Ray Regan were Winchester's representatives to the cross-country teams, while Rose McCaul was elected for field hockey.

Sachemette booters show all-star skills

Five Winchester High School girls' soccer standouts, past and present, continued to play well after the conclusion of the soccer season, appearing in all-star games in Boston and Florida.

Winchester had three representatives at the EMass Senior All-Star game, held last Friday (Nov. 27) at Boston University's Nickerson Field. Tri-captains Catherine Doherty and Jenn Russo played for the North squad in the game; Chris Scanlon coached it.

After falling behind when the South got one past Russo (13 saves) just minutes into the contest, the North came back to win, 2-1.

"Jenn played a fabulous game in goal," said Scanlon. "After the first goal, there were a multitude of shots taken which she was able to keep from going in."

Doherty, Winchester's All-Middlesex League sweeper, played nearly the entire game on defense.

Sachemette Liz Kelley had to miss the game as she was involved in the U.S. Olympic Development program, which held its final inter-regional camp in Florida over the Thanksgiving break.

Kelley joined former WHS players Jen Gilpatric (now at the University of Virginia) and Sara Noonan (Harvard) on the 16-player East squad. Only 64 players from throughout the country are invited to participate in the elite camp, which had its first session in Winchester last August. The final pool of players will be announced in December.

four fourth-down situations in keeping the drive alive. The offensive line — center Brian Bernazzani, guards Todd Miles and Brendon Reardon, tackles Gerard Fidalgo and Justin Simeone and tight end Todd Sundstrom — blew Woburn off the ball on play after play.

In the fourth quarter, Winchester put any hopes of a Woburn comeback away as the offense chewed another 7:05 off the clock with a 12-play effort (all rushes) that ended with Carroll's third touchdown of the day. In all, Winchester controlled the ball for over 26 minutes, compared to just 13 for the Tanners.

Defensively, Winchester's down linemen — Rob Barrile, Jon Arsenault, Dan Boffo and Phil Reuland — made deep penetration throughout the game, making it possible for Carroll and Brian Johnson, particularly, to make big plays in the backfield to contain Woburn's explosive running back, Mike Wall. Wall managed just 55 yards on 11 carries.

"This had to be up there with the best of them," said Manganaro. "This was right up there with the '90 Super Bowl game (against Walpole), and the '90 win over Woburn and the '90 win over Melrose."

Sachems on cable

Winchester's Continental Cable will offer one more chance to see Winchester's 19-0 victory over Woburn in the annual Thanksgiving Day football matchup. Channel 19 will air a tape of the game on Monday, Dec. 7, at 4:30 p.m.

Woburn 10 and returned it to the 42. Only a shoestring tackle by fullback Carroll saved a touchdown. Carroll's saving tackle was just an appetizer for the main course, which occurred minutes later.

A 26-yard screen pass from Donaghey to Fonseca set the Tanners up with a first down on Winchester's 32. Woburn's all-star running back, Mike Wall, then broke what would be his only long run of the day, a 14-yard gainer to the Sachem 18. Wall caught a screen pass and rambled to the 3, then gained 2 more yards on a dive over right tackle.

On second-and-goal from inside the 1, Donaghey spun to hand off to Fonseca, but the two collided. As Fonseca fell, defensive tackle Todd Sundstrom and Carroll slammed into him and Carroll ripped the ball away and took off on his jaunt.

The score, which made it 12-0, seemed to take the life out of Woburn, which struggled to resurrect its offense for the remainder of the game. A rejuvenated Winchester defense swarmed Woburn ball carriers the rest of the day; Woburn ran just 12 second-half plays (to Winchester's 23), and gained just 21 second-half yards (to Winchester's 102).

A 12-play drive resulting in Carroll's third TD of the game ate up over seven minutes of the fourth-quarter clock. Byrne and Russo, who were starting in place of co-captain Mike Szczepanski (cracked kneecap) and halfback Brian Lindmark (sprained medial collateral ligament) got the bulk of the yardage. When Russo bulled his way down the sideline for a 14-yard pickup on third-and-5 from the Winchester 33, the Woburn stands began to empty. Byrne nearly broke a long TD, but slipped in the mud and settled for a 10-yard pickup. Carroll's 3-yard burst and Mike Wallwork's extra point made it 19-0.

Donohue indicated the key to the game was Winchester's dominance in the trenches.

"Our offensive and defensive lines had their best game of the season," said Donohue. "I couldn't ask for any better effort, and I couldn't get any better."

Quarterback Rauseo, who commandeered a ground game that marched to 156 yards and two rushing scores against a defense which had posted shutouts in four of its last five games, agreed.

"I think they were a little surprised by our power game," said Rauseo. "We were really up for the game, and they tried to intimidate us with their slow walk."

With Szczepanski injured, inside linebacker Brian Johnson became the defensive signal caller while Sean Furey moved to the other inside position. Linebacker coach John Pirani said Johnson and the defense was successful in taking Wall, Woburn's big threat, out of the game.

> "I couldn't ask for any better effort, and I couldn't get any better."
> John Donohue
> Winchester coach

"Brian Johnson had some huge hits on the best back in the league," said Pirani. "If your line and your linebackers go out and play a great game, you get a shutout. It's cause and effect."

When Lindmark went down in practice just days before the game, Winchester's once-deep backfield had been weakened considerably. But Byrne (a team-high 52 yards rushing on 12 carries), Russo (6 for 27), Andy Perenick (2 for 7) and Carroll (10 for 39) filled in admirably.

"We knew with Brian and Mike out, we had to turn it up another notch," said Byrne.

Rauseo, who said the team had dedicated the game to its injured seniors, beamed with emotion as his teammates slipped and slid their way through a post game victory bath in the mud of Connolly Stadium.

"I'm so proud of this group of guys we had this year," said Rauseo, the Sachems' senior captain. "We were 2-3, but we worked hard to turn it around. It's awesome."

Defensive standouts included Brian Johnson and Darin Byrne. Johnson, filling in for injured co-captain Mike Szczepanski at inside linebacker, made all the right calls defensively and looked like a personal escort to Wall, who entered the game leading the league with 1,238 yards rushing in just nine contests. Johnson was in the Woburn backfield all morning, shadowing Wall's every move.

Byrne, who had four solid tackles, stood out with his tight pass coverage on the Woburn receivers. The only time he was beat all day, he nearly picked off an underthrown Steve Donaghey pass while sitting on his backside in the ankle-deep mud.

Senior co-captain John Rauseo was another viable MVP candidate. The Winchester quarterback didn't have the stats he's used to accumulating (12 rushes for 31 yards, 1 for 6 with 1 interception passing), but he ran the option flawlessly. The Sachems compiled 156 rushing yards, spread between five different backs. On the Sachems' first TD drive, Rauseo was leveled by two different Woburn linebackers — but not before he flipped the ball off to Carroll, who crashed into the end zone from the 2.

Rauseo ran the offense like a finely tuned machine despite the field conditions, which were not well-suited to a team which runs the ball so often.

"We thought the field would take us out of our offense," said Sachem coach John Donohue, "but it turned out the other way. John did a real nice job of controlling the offense and running the option."

The Sachems also got lucky. With one minute left in the first half and Winchester up, 12-0, Ed Russo's punt was fielded by Woburn's fleet return man, Scott Khourie, at the 15. Khourie retreated to the 10, was momentarily bottled up by three Sachems, then sprung free and raced towards open ground. But officials' whistles blew, claiming Khourie's forward progress had been stopped at the 12. Khourie, who had just two defenders left to beat, and the Woburn bench erupted. Replays indicated they may have had a case as Khourie apeared to only hesitate slightly in order to change direction.

As many of the coaches pointed out in the victorious Sachem locker room, the mark of a good team is its ability to take advantage of what's given to it and to create opportunities with hustle and determination. It would appear that the 1992 Winchester High School football team, with a five-game win streak to close the season and upsets over two favored teams, has accomplished those tasks.

WHS coach sings Carroll's praises

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Longtime Winchester assistant coach Bob Miksen has been around the game of football for over 40 years. He's a throwback to the days of limited padding and broken-bones football.

Josh Carroll is Miksen's type of player.

Carroll made the play of the year for Winchester, and he made it twice. With Winchester clinging to a 6-0 lead in the second quarter of the Thanksgiving Day clash at Woburn, Carroll, Winchester's running back and defensive end, stole the ball from Woburn fullback Luis Fonseca and raced 99 yards for a game-breaking touchdown. The play was a near-instant replay of a similar stunt he pulled in Winchester's 28-22 upset of Melrose on Nov. 7, when he stole the ball on a reverse play at the Sachem 20 and galloped 80 yards to seal the Sachem victory.

"You can't teach kids to steal a ball," said Miksen. "It's just instinct. Once is a miracle; twice? — that's unbelievable. We used to teach it. It used to be part of the game, but it died. He's one heck of a player."

Carroll's career game was a far cry from his performance in last season's Winchester-Woburn matchup. In that game, Carroll was called for roughing the kicker when Winchester had Woburn punting from deep in its own end late in a 7-7 game. The penalty gave Woburn an automatic first down, which the Tanners parlayed into the game-winning touchdown minutes later.

One year later, Carroll is the hero. The modest Carroll (who scored all three Sachem TDs in the 19-0 victory) described the play in a matter-of-fact way in the locker room.

"He came off tackle," said Carroll, "and I hit him and Todd (Sundstrom, Winchester's defensive tackle) hit him. I knew he wasn't gonna get in the end zone, so I just stripped it out and ran."

Carroll was one of the most exciting players in the league in the second half of the season. The two-way starter, who played halfback and defensive end, scored seven touchdowns in the final three games. In the Woburn contest, he was called upon to step into the fullback slot when co-captain Mike Szczepanski suffered a season-ending knee injury. His two TDs from his new position in addition to his huge defensive effort earned him game MVP honors.

"I'm nowhere near as good as Mike," said Carroll, "but I tried to block as best I could. Mike's a great fullback; I'm really new at it. It sure was a fun game though."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Winchester Badminton begins 60th season

The Winchester Badminton Club, one of Winchester's oldest continuing organizations, has started its 60th season.

The club is a recreational organization open to all adults and meets twice weekly, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings (7:30-9:30), at the McCall Junior High School on Main Street in Winchester.

All levels of racquet sport skills are represented by the club members and players, whether experienced or not, are invited to attend any or all sessions, which will continue through March, 1993. Play consists primarily of doubles. Dress is athletic/casual.

Now an olympic sport, badminton played on a hard surface indoors is very unlike the game people play in their backyards. Badminton played in clubs such as Winchester places no premium on age, size, strength or gender, but emphasizes finesse, reflexes and thinking; all due to the relatively small court area and the speed of the shuttlecock of over 100-plus miles per hour to a tantalizing crawl.

If interested, players may attend any session, or for more information contact Ray Jenkins of the Winchester Badminton Club at 729-0807.

Maccabiah seeks swimmers over 35

The United States Maccabiah Team is seeking swimmers age 35 and over to compete in the Masters Division of the 14th World Maccabiah Games, to be held July 5-15, 1993, in Israel.

There are six age classifications: over 35, over 40, over 45, over 50, over 55, and over 60. Ages must be as of Jan. 1, 1993.

Competition will be held for men and women in the following 17 events: freestyle (50 meters, 100m, 200m, 400m, 800m, 1500m, 4x100m, 4x200m); butterfly (100m, 200m); backstroke (100m, 200m); breaststroke (100m, 200m); intermediate medley (200m, 400m); medley relay (4x100m).

Interested swimmers should send times in L.C. meters or S.C. yards, along with name, address, phone number and age (as of Jan. 1, 1993) to: Jimmy Goldman, U.S. Masters Maccabiah Swimming Chairman, 5281 Forbes Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15217.

For more information, write or call the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel at 1926 Arch St., 3rd Floor, Philadelphia, Pa. 19103, or call (215) 561-6900.

Easter Seals, Celts sponsor Shoot-Out

Hundreds of area youngsters have received invitations from Boston Celtics star Kevin McHale to participate in the 1992 Easter Seal/Boston Celtics Basketball Shoot-Out. Local schools and youth organizations have also been invited to participate.

Youngsters participating in the Shoot-Out collect pledges from family and friends for each basket shot during a three-minute period. A parent, teacher or coach signs off on the number of baskets completed. The shooter collects his or her pledges and sends the money to Easter Seals to fund services for people with disabilities.

Last year, nearly 5,000 youngsters raised $150,000 in Basketball Shoot-Outs all over Massachusetts. The top 100 fund raisers joined McHale and Dee Brown in the Boston Garden for a special basketball clinic.

This season, 100 winners will attend the clinic at Boston Garden on March 26, 1993.

Basketball Shoot-Out sponsors include TJ Maxx, WLVI-TV 56 and WWLP-TV 22.

For more information, call David Lamacchia at 1-800-922-8290.

New England Mariners baseball seeks players

The New England Mariners Baseball Club is currently recruiting potential players to compete in the 1993 AAU/Junior Olympics.

The club is an organization governed by the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) of the United States.

The Mariners Christmas Baseball Camp is scheduled to be held December 28-31 at the new Brandeis University field house in Waltham. Tentative plans include two sessions for ages 9-12 and 13-17. The instruction will be given by college, high school and Mariners coaches.

The organization is currently accepting applications for coaching positions. These positions are on a volunteer basis, with some expenses paid from the general fund. All travel expenses to the national championships are paid in full.

All player and coaching inquiries should be addressed to: New England Mariners, Inc., 12 Cornell Road, Beverly, Mass., 01915.

Palumbo rebuilds program

Winchester's 27-0 home victory over Wakefield on Oct. 31. With quarterback John Rauseo sprinting left on an option keeper, Sundstrom held up Wakefield defender Chris Francis just long enough for wideout Sean Furey to level the stunned Warrior, springing Rauseo for a 28-yard gain.

The second play occurred in the Thanksgiving Day win over Woburn. With Woburn threatening to tie the score, Sundstrom got a tremendous jump from his defensive line position, blew through the Woburn line and slammed into Tanner fullback Luis Fonseca. His hit enabled Josh Carroll to strip the ball from Fonseca and race 99 yards for the game-breaking score in Winchester's 19-0 whitewash.

Most Exciting Moment
Tie: Jeff Tahnk, boys' soccer and Josh Carroll, football

Tahnk scored the biggest goal of the Sachems' Middlesex League championship season when Winchester met Belmont at Skillings Field on Sept. 24.

Midway through a scoreless first half, Tahnk lined up a direct kick from 25 yards out and ripped it at Marauder keeper Matt Hilgenberg. The Belmont captain was unable to stop the low bullet, which powered through his outstretched arms for the eventual game-winning goal in Winchester's 2-0 win.

Josh Carroll. The strip. 'Nuff said.

Biggest Understatement
John Donohue, head football coach

Moments after senior co-captain John Rauseo turned in a Herculean effort (173 yards and two touchdowns rushing, two TDs passing, and two interceptions) in leading the Sachems to a 35-14 victory over Belmont on Oct. 24, Donohue deadpanned "Two rushing touchdowns, two passing touchdowns and two interceptions. I'd say that was a pretty good day for John."

Winchester High field hockey coach Michelle Palumbo has put some spark in the Sachemettes' program.

Mite AAs red hot

The Winchester Youth Hockey Mite AA team started its season by running off 11 straight wins. Through Nov. 22, the team was sitting atop the Middlesex Youth Hockey League with a record of 5-0.

The team, under the tutelage of coaches Paul Notartomaso, Skip Clavette and Ron Martignetti, averaged eight goals per game while yielding only two each contest.

The Mini Sachems, with six returnees from last year's second-place team, have been led by forwards Rugo Santini (57 points), Charles McLeman (41), and David Notartomaso (37).

Three-year veteran defenseman Danny Spamg has provided the leadership to a solid corps of defenseman, including two-year starters Bob Norberg and Anthony Martignetti, and rookie Adam Delaney-Winn. Eight-year-old goaltender Billy Notartomaso has backboned the stingy defense.

Up front, scrappy veteran Brad Harvey has sparked a line with speedy Andrew Clavette and dangerous Tim Armstrong. The checking line of John Lynch, Kent Harrington and Michael Russo rarely lets the opposing teams' top lines generate any offense while occasionally adding a few goals of its own.

Senior Cooperative Theatre sing and dance in "My Fair Lady"

A group of approximately 60 talented actors and actresses will take to the stage Dec. 4-6 when Winchester Senior Cooperative Theatre brings to life the well known Lerner and Lowe musical, "My Fair Lady" at McCall Auditorium. Adapted from George Bernard Shaw's play, "Pygmalion," the show will feature students in grades six through eight in over twelve musical song and dance routines.

Auditions for "My Fair Lady" were held in September. The 60 talented and lucky members of the cast began rehearsing in McCall Middle School Auditorium under the direction of Catherine Alexander, the co-operative theatre's director and founder, for three hours, four afternoons a week. Every student in the cast learned the songs and received training in singing, dancing and acting. As always in co-operative theatre productions, the leading roles are double cast, with two young actors and actresses playing each part in separate performances.

Musical accompaniment is under the direction of Carole Davidson. "My Fair Lady" showcases such memorable songs as, "I Could Have Danced All Night", "Get Me To The Church On Time", "Wouldn't it be Loverly?" and "I've Grown Accustomed to her Face."

CBT wins three design awards

The Boston-based architectural firm, CBT/Childs Bertman Tseckares Inc., received in November two awards from the Boston Society of Architects and a national award from the Precast/Prestressed Concrete Institute.

The Boston Society of Architects selected the firm's work on Parlin Memorial Library, in Everett, and on The Park, in Brookline, for its 1992 Honor Awards. The national award was for Parlin Memorial Library.

In its restoration and new additions to Parlin, CBT maintained the scale and articulation of the original 1895 building and its 1910 addition. The body of the new building maintains the muted yellow brick of the original, and the new roof continues the same dark slate; but the old building's terra cotta window moldings and cornices, as well as its masonry course, have been reinterpreted in precast concrete. CBT's decision to work in a version of the original Romanesque Revival meant adapting contemporary materials to achieve a comparable sense of scale and quality of details, within a reasonable budget.

CBT received an Honor Award from the Boston Society of Architects for its work in restoring and enlarging what was formerly the Free Hospital for Women, in Brookline, into a residential complex known as The Park.

CBT converted former operating rooms, patients' rooms and nurses' quarters in five of the Victorian buildings into 71 rental apartments. The architects designed an additional 16 new condominiums to fit with the existing Victorian hospital buildings and the surrounding houses in Brookline.

The estate-like grounds of The Park, across the street from Olmsted Park, were restored as well. The Park is in an historic district in Brookline.

Charles N. Tseckares, FAIA, of Dix St., in Winchester, is a founding partner and president of CBT/Childs Bertman Tseckares Inc.

HEALTH NOTES

William Ericson, M.D. in the operating room at Winchester Hospital.

Smaller is better

A new portable high-tech imaging device is streamlining many orthopedic operations, reducing the amount of anesthesia patients need and giving surgeons a new degree of control over each stage of surgical procedures. This state-of-the-art radiology equipment uses low radiation to deliver high resolution images that make it possible for surgeons to undertake meticulous work and ensure precise bone placement during various operations on the extremities.

"This device is a miniature version of an existing piece of equipment," explains Dr. William Ericson, a board certified orthopedic surgeon affiliated with Winchester Hospital, one of the few community hospitals to own the coveted equipment. "It's small enough that the surgeon can pull it into place with one hand, and it's been designed so it reaches over the operating table for ideal positioning." The device can also deliver a high quality hard copy image at the push of a button, eliminating the need, and time, for traditional x-rays.

Time is of the essence in the operating room (OR) — from the point of view of the patient, the OR staff and the hospital, which must use its facilities efficiently. However, the special requirements of delicate orthopedic surgery can be time consuming. "During various orthopedic procedures on the extremities, we require accurate imaging of the bones and joint surfaces," says Ericson. "Before the availability of this device, we would have to suspend the procedure that's underway and summon an x-ray technician to the OR. The technician would push a heavy piece of equipment into position over the operating table and take the necessary radiograph under the direction of the surgeon. Then the film was brought to a processor while everyone would wait in the operating room until the image was produced."

This process could take half an hour or more. With the new device, that wait is eliminated, making the procedure shorter and easier on the patient. Also, the equipment has been designed so that the surgeon can position it by means of a sterile handle that the doctor can control while he or she is scrubbed. The depth of its C-arm, which houses a screen at one end and the x-ray unit at the other, lets it easily fit over the operating table while remaining sterile. The surgeon has access to x-ray images without delay.

"This equipment is a by-product of NASA research," explains Ericson. "A battery powered version was developed for use at football games, to assess whether a player had a knee or ankle fracture. From there, the equipment was further modified for use in operating rooms. The later generation of equipment uses minimal radiation."

Although the existing device was highly serviceable, Ericson requested modifications by the manufacturer to make it even more appropriate for the needs of the orthopedic surgeon. The manufacturer, Xi Tech, incorporated the alterations suggested by Ericson, including the depth of the C-arm and addition of the sterile handle, resulting in a device that he says, "Lets the surgeon do everything he or she needs to do quickly and easily."

Badge day held at Winchester Hospital

It was a day of learning, sharing and growing when over 300 Junior Girl Scouts gathered together for "Badge Day" held recently at the Winchester Hospital Family Medical Center. The program was created to help Junior Girl Scout troops meet the requirements for three badges of their choice.

"The girls were very enthusiastic and genuinely interested in all the workshops," said Denise Linehan, Winchester Hospital health educator who instructed several of the badge workshops. "This was a real 'feel good' event. From learning basic first aid to exploring self-image, every Girl Scout who participated learned something new and had a lot of fun in the process. It was a great experience for everyone involved."

The Girl Scouts were given the opportunity to complete activities and attain badges in first aid, healthy eating, immunization, health and fitness, baby care and self esteem. As Badge Day was a tremendous success, Winchester Hospital is considering offering the event on an annual basis.

Nurses aide training course

For nurses aides, or those interested in becoming a nurses aide, Winchester Hospital now offers "Nurses Aide Training Course," which meets the needs of state requirements for certification.

The course includes learning about activities of daily living, understanding residents and residents rights, infection control, safety procedures, nutrition and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

The course will run from Nov. 30 through Dec. 16, from 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Winchester Hospital Health Promotion Center, 23 Warren Ave., Woburn.

For price information, contact Winchester Hospital at 756-2220.

Learn how to save a child's life

Appropriate Pediatric and Infant CPR techniques differ from those used on adults — knowing these techniques can mean the difference between life and death.

Winchester Hospital offers Infant and Child CPR course in a two-part class from 6 to 10 p.m. on Dec. 8 and 10 at the hospital.

Upon successful completion of the program, participants will receive a one-year certificate from the American Heart Association.

For price information and to register call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 756-2220.

Quitters in motion at Winchester Hospital

Once they have given up smoking, ex-smokers often need extra support and encouragement to adjust to a new way of life. Many people find it hard to be around family and friends who successfully quit.

"Quitters in Motion," offered by Winchester Hospital, is an ongoing support group for those who have quit or are trying to quit smoking. This group may be used in conjunction with the nicotine patch as a patch advantage program.

The group will meet from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, at the Winchester Hospital Health Promotion Center, and costs $7 at the door. For more information call 932-8200.

For the elder you love free support group

The changes brought about by aging affect more than just the elderly individual. All the people who love and care for older people are impacted.

"You and Your Aging Relative," a free support group sponsored by Winchester Hospital's Social Service Department discusses the role of the caregiver and the resources available to assist families.

This group meets on Dec. 3, from 7 to 9 p.m., 7 McKay Ave., and continues to meet the first Thursday of every month. It also meets from 7 to 9 p.m. on Dec. 17, at Winchester Nursing Home and continues to meet at the nursing home the third Thursday of each month. There is no fee. For more information, call 756-2633.

Especially for adoptive parents

Adoptive parents have many special questions and concerns. Winchester Hospital now offers private classes to prepare adoptive parents for the arrival of their new baby.

The program includes information on basic baby care, parenting tips and concerns and when to call a pediatrician. For more information, contact Winchester Hospital at 756-2220.

Breastfeeding workshop at Winchester Hospital

The decision to breastfeed or bottle feed is a topic of importance to new parents. Winchester Hospital offers a workshop, helpful to parents-to-be, which provides accurate information on this subject.

The workshop provides a variety of information such as the pros and cons of breastfeeding, self-help measures to prevent complications, routines for bottle and breastfeeding and helpful hints to mothers who work outside of the home.

For dates and price information, call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 756-2220.

Brighten the Holidays

Three ways you can help those less fortunate this holiday season

Holiday Fund

Once again, Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers joins the Salvation Army in the Holiday Fund. In 1992 your contributions have allowed the Salvation Army to help over 18,000 families and feed over 36,000 people during the holiday season and beyond.

Requests for shelter, food and help with heating have skyrocketed in recent days at area Salvation Army Centers. Indicative of the trend is the 40 percent jump in the number of hot meals served by the statewide organization in the first nine months of 1992 as compared to the pervious period. The combination of job losses, cuts in government programs and the continued high cost to live in the area all are contributing to the near crisis situation.

You can help those in need this season through your generous donation to the Holiday Fund. Donations should be sent to: Harte-Hanks Community Newspaper Holiday Fund, 580 Winter Street, Waltham, MA 02154.

If you know of a family in need and would like to tell their story, or yours, please send your story to Salvation Army, c/o Steve Capoccia, 147 Berkeley Street, Boston, MA 02116. Please include your name and phone number for verification purposes.

Toys for Tots

Make a difference this holiday season and give the joy of Christmas to a child who may not know the wonders of the holidays. Donate a new toy to the Marine Corps Reserve Toys For Tots Program. Simply drop off a new toy (please, no used or broken toys) at the Middlesex News, 33 New York Avenue, Framingham, or Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers, 580 Winter Street, Waltham during business hours: Monday - Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. With every toy given by you, you will feel a special warmth knowing you are making a difference in the lives of some very special children.

Winter Coat Drive

The Middlesex News and It's About Time Mobile Dry Cleaning will be sponsoring a coat drive to benefit the South Middlesex Opportunity Council (S.M.O.C.) and the Massachusetts Society For The Prevention Of Cruelty To Children (MSPCC). S.M.O.C. extends its services to Pathways Family Shelter and Turning Point Shelter. Donations will also be made to The Sage House, and Grace Congregational Church of Framingham, the Greater Marlboro Shelter, and the Bristol Lodge, Waltham.

Simply drop you donations at the following locations and It's About Time Mobile Dry Cleaning will deliver them to those in need.

Captain Sean and Stephanie Costello

Stephanie Schwartzman is bride of Captain Sean Costello

Stephanie Schwartzman and Capt. Sean Michael Costello , U.S. Army, were married on Aug. 29 at St. Anthony's by-the-Sea in Gloucester.

The bride is the daughter of Carl and Misty Schwartzman of Black Horse Terrace. The groom is the son of Vice Adm. and Mrs. John D. Costello, U.S. Coast Guard (Ret.), of Bethesda, Md.

Father Frederick Murray of St. Denis Parish in Westwood, retired captain of the U.S. Navy and friend of the groom's parents, officiated at the service.

Mica Schwartzman, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cindy Cunningham Yuen of Melrose, Lisa Patterson of California, both formerly of Winchester, and Cheryl Duncan, M.D., of Maryland, former roommate of the bride at Wesleyan in Connecticut. Katie Joern, cousin of the bride, from Albany, N.Y., was the flower girl.

The groom's brother, Lt. Terrence J. Costello, U.S. Coast Guard Reserve, of Arlington, Va., served as best man. Groomsmen were Capt. Phillip Beaver and Capt. William Branley, U.S. Army, friends of the groom, and Bruce Schwartzman, brother of the bride. Ushers were Eamon Costello of Ohio and Matthew Heenan of West Springfield, cousins of the groom. Mark Schwartzman of Seattle, brother of the bride, was the videographer and sang and played with the bands during the reception.

Readings were by John W. Morris III from Hong Kong, friend of the groom; Betty Grace Costello, Esq., sister-in-law of the groom; and Kate Mawn, Esq., friend of the bride. Capt. Joy Leapheart, a friend of the bride and groom in Seattle, Wash., was the soloist.

The Prayer of the Faithful was read by the groom's father. Following the double ring ceremony and the lighting of the Unity Candle with the tapers lit earlier by the mothers of the bride and groom, the ceremony came to an end with the Jewish traditional blessing of the wine. The father of the bride, explaining the various meanings of the breaking of the wine glass, placed the glass on the floor. The groom crushed the glass with his heel to shouts of "Mazeltov."

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at Woodman's Function Hall in Essex.

The bride graduated from Winchester High School Class of 1979, attended Wesleyan and Semester-at-Sea and graduated from University of Utah in 1984. She is the west coast sales representative for Cambridge-based Softbridge Inc.

Capt. Costello graduated from Winchester High School Class of 1978 and from John Hopins University in 1982. Rental & Apartment Living Q&A

by NATOLI REAL ESTATE

Q. Why should I use a Rental Agent rather than rent my apartment myself?

A. A Realtor will screen potential tenants as to their occupation, income and needs. He will show the apartment at the renter's convenience (making himself available at all times). A Realtor will acquire a full application and run the potential tenant through a credit check.

A Realtor will confirm everything stated on application, and organize a meeting of both parties before the signing of the lease. Then the Realtor will type up and make copies of the lease agreement of the landlord's choice.

What are the benefits of going through a realtor to rent an apartment?

A Realtor will listen to and show you only the apartments that would truely interest you and meet your individual needs. A Realtor is an excellent liason to solve and help communicate problems or questions as they arise. A fee is only paid at the time when both parties are satisfied and the lease is signed.

Foreign Motors West

Location: 253 North Main St., Natick (Rt. 27)

History: Foreign Motors West has been in business in Natick since 1970, and located at its present address since 1978. Owner Thomas R. Mix began his career in the auto industry in the 1950s. Initially employed as a car salesman of luxury imports at Foreign Motors of Boston, he worked his way up to owning the dealership.

In 1970, Mix expanded the business to include a facility in Natick, which he had chosen as the site for his new dealership because of the growth in the western suburbs at that time. In 1978, having moved Foreign Motors West to a new location in Natick, Mix sold Foreign Motors of Boston in order to devote all his efforts to the new facility.

Number of Employees: Foreign Motors West opened in 1970 with a crew of 10 workers, and now boasts 150 employees. Fred Tierney of Foreign Motors West attributes this "tremendous growth" to the company's ability to "exceed customers' expectations."

Service: Foreign Motors West in Natick handles sales of new and pre-owned automobiles and parts, leasing, repairs of every nature, accessory installation, glass work and auto detailing, which can make old cars look like new.

In addition to the services offered at the Natick facility, Foreign Motors West owns a 23,000 sq. ft., state-of-the-art auto body repair facility in Ashland. It is one of the largest, most modern operations of its kind in New England, and FOREIGN, Page 12

Range Rover

1993 County offers quieter, classic styling, high value

True to its philosophy of continuous product improvement, the 1993 Range Rover County has enhanced features and value.

Since its introduction here in 1987, the aluminum-bodied Range Rover has become the standard by which all sport utilities are measured. The traditional 100-inch wheelbase County will now share the spotlight with the new 108-inch County LWB (long wheelbase), but at a substantially lower price.

For the second straight year, numerous engineering changes have been made for better performance and quieter operation. The County is equipped with a higher compression 3.9 litre, fuel-injected aluminum V-8 engine driving a two-speed Borg-Warner viscous coupled transfer case and a ZF four-speed transmission. Increasing the compression ratio to 9.35:1 has boosted power from 180 to 182 bhp at 4750 rpm and torque is up from 227 to 232 lb/ft at 3250 rpm.

For the second straight year, numerous engineering changes have been made for better performance and quieter operation.

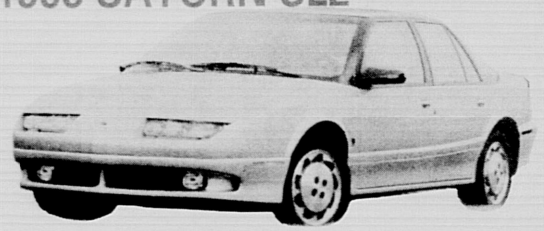

Range Rover continues to lead the sport-utility segment with its permanent four-wheel drive design and now becomes the world's first dual purpose vehicle to be fitted with an Electronic RANGE ROVER, Page 3

Range Rover

Traction Control System (ETCS). Operating on the rear wheels, the ETCS is an extension of the sophisticated and highly acclaimed WABCO anti-lock braking system standard on all 1993 Range Rovers. When the rear wheels are on a slippery surface the ETCS causes power to be transferred to the side of the axle with the most traction.

The 1993 County continues Range Rover's tradition of producing highly appointed vehicles equal to the most luxurious touring sedans. Burl walnut graces the fascia, door cappings and shift console and, as with all Range Rovers, the County features Connolly leather upholstery and a power slide and tilt glass sunroof.

New electronic control logic now allows the power windows and sunroof to be operated for up to 45 seconds after the ignition is turned off. Both front windows offer one-touch activation when opening.

An improved alarm with remote keyless entry is standard on County for '93. And for added protection, a newly designed load space cover protects the rear cargo area from view.

The County's standard a/d/s six-speaker sound system with six-disc CD changer has been hailed as one of the best systems installed in any vehicle. Improvements to vehicle noise isolation add to the studio-like music reproduction. Radio reception is enhanced by a new diversity antenna which constantly seeks the strongest signal.

For smooth on-road handling, the County is fitted with front and rear anti-sway bars. Off-road, the Range Rover's legendary capability is the result of front and rear live axles suspended on long travel coil springs. Easily identified by three-spoke alloy wheels, the County comes standard with Michelin M+S 244, 205R 16 all season tires.

Aside from choice of colors, the 1993 County is fully equipped without the need for options. From the front spoiler with fog lamps to the front door puddle lamps, the Range Rover County has it all. Centrally operated and heated power door locks; power steering; air conditioning; heated windshield, and an automatic dimming rearview mirror with map light are a few of the reasons the Range Rover has become the vehicle of choice for so many.

CAR OF THE WEEK

An improved alarm with remote keyless entry is standard on County for '93. And for added protection, a newly designed load space cover protects the rear cargo area from view.

Fixing a minor problem can be cheap or costly

This week, Auto Weekly introduces Ask the Auto Doctor, a question and answer column by car specialist Junior Damato. Damato's column will be featured every three weeks.

Damato, an ASE Master Automotive Technician with 25 years experience, owns and operates a seven-bay garage in Boston His talents are twofold: repairing cars and verbalizing problems. As a result, Damato has a nationally syndicated "Auto Talk" radio show broadcast six hours every week. Damato can be heard on WHDH in Boston Sundays from 4-6:30 p.m.

ASK THE AUTO DOCTOR

By Junior Damato

Dear Doctor: I have a problem with my 1987 Mercury Grand Marquis, which is minor compared to the others that I read about in your column. Both front vent windows are hard to open. It seems that the glass sticks to the rubber molding, especially when the weather is warm. Can you help me?

Gertrude J. Needles, Calif.

Dear Gertrude: There are two ways to repair the problem. The first is easy and inexpensive. Open both vent windows and apply clear pressure-sensitive tape to the window rubber molding. The second method is more expensive to repair: replace the complete molding: Ford Part No. E8AZ19627-A.

Dear Doctor: I got a problem-stumper for you. I purchased a used 1990 Lincoln Continental from a private party. The heating/air-conditioning fan sometimes switches to a high speed, and I am unable to shut it off. If I turn off the ignition and restart the car, the fan may work properly for a week or so before the problems occurs again. Do you have any suggestions?

George G. Jacksonville, Fla.

Dear George: This sounds like a stumper, but I had a similar problem a few weeks ago on a 1989 Continental. After a quick observation, I noticed water leaking out of the air conditioning evaporator drain hose. This was usual because the car had not been running and it was stored inside my shop overnight. Upon closer inspection, I noticed a lot of rust around the heater box containing the system's programmer. Water was entering the box from the cowl vent causing the fan to operate erratically. To fix it, remove the cowl vent and reseal the box with silicon.

Dear Doctor: Fall is here and it is time for me to put my summer cruiser away. My question is about the gasoline. Do I drain the fuel tank by running the car until it runs out of gas, or do I fill the tank?

Bob H. Springfield, Mass.

Dear Bob: Don't feel badly, spring is only five months away. I have the same situation with my lawn mower, boat and car. I use a product made by Gold Eagle called Sta-Bil. It prevents the gasoline from deteriorating and it prevents the buildup of gum and varnish. It is inexpensive and it works with both gasoline and diesel fuel. Just make sure you run the engine for about 15 minutes after adding the solution to the fuel tank to be assured that it gets into the carburetor or injectors. Yes, it is wise to fill the tank before storing the car. This helps to reduce condensation buildup inside the tank.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1989 Honda Accord and I have a problem putting gas in the tank. No matter how slow I fill the tank, the nozzle keeps clicking off. Have you any suggestions?

Sandy L. Orlando, Fla.

Dear Sandy: Honda is aware of this problem and they should make the repair at no cost to you. Contact your local Honda dealer.

Dear Doctor: I am both an avid reader and listener to your "Talking Cars" radio program, so I have confidence you can help me with my problem concerning my 1986 Ford F 250 pickup truck with the 351 V-8 engine. I would like to buy a used engine from the local salvage yard and rebuild it with high performance components. Do you have any advice?

Tom P. Plymouth, Mass

Dear Tom: There are many products available for doing a rebuilding job, and there are many shops that can help you with the selection of the right parts. Too often, car and truck owners buy the wrong products. For example, just buying a bigger camshaft and carburetor alone will only slow you down. When building an engine, there are many factors to consider, and they must adhere to the state's emission tests. The emission system should not be altered, including the catalytic converter. Depending on the level of engine modification involved, the rear end axle may also require changing. Ford has a performance division called Ford Motor Sport. Contact your local speed shop or your Ford dealer and get the Ford Motor Sport catalog.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1985 Ford Crown Victoria with a 302 V-8 engine. My problem is that the motor oil turns black approximately 1,000 miles after the oil and filter have been changed. I have changed the oil and filter every 3,000 to 4,000 miles, and have owned the car since it was new. What's the problem?

Bob L. Dover, Del.

Dear Bob: Engine oil will discolor after an oil change, especially if the car has high mileage on it. The oil contains a detergent and is formulated to clean out any sludge buildup — which darkens the oil. There are products that you can put in your crankcase to help in cleaning this accumulation of sludge.

LUCKY WINNER

PAUL KAPTEYN PHOTO

Marlboro resident Leonard Wilson poses with a $10,000 'check' he used to purchase a new 1993 Nissan Maxima at Glick Nissan in Westboro last week. Wilson won $10,000 toward the purchase of a new car in the Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers $10,000 Giveaway. Glick sales representative Bob Keeman looks on.

GOOD FORTUNE

Bill Palli, general manager of Main Street Ford in Waltham, right, presents Barbara Nagy of Newton a Custom Cruiser Wagon, which she won in a special Main St. Ford car give-away. Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers' account representative Rob Medwar, left, looks on.

How to keep your car looking young

There's a theory that if you ignore a smudge of jelly on the kitchen wall you'll hardly notice it within a week. It's still there, big as life, but your mind has tuned it out.

So it is, too, with those minor blemishes that can cause premature aging of a car. A parking lot scratch on the door doesn't go away, it just rusts. A tear in the upholstery, for example, or a worn arm rest which gradually gets worse, seem to become part of the decor.

With normal use and care of mechanical systems, and barring accidents, a car should last far longer than its typical average age of about eight years, reports the Car Care Council, pointing out that there are nearly 12 million 15-year-old or older cars still in use. Providing information to extend the useful life of our nation's vehicles is the council's principal role.

Aging often is a cosmetic factor. The vehicle may be functional but its body, inside and out, is in such dire need of rehabilitation that it ends up in the junk yard. The car has been neglected; the owner gives up on it.

Preventing (or reversing) creeping deterioration of a car's appearance is the subject of a free pamphlet offered by the council. Entitled "How to keep your car looking young," it covers the vehicle from sun visor to carpeting, illustrating the various procedures that can add years to a car's life.

The pamphlet points out, for example, that the floor covering in one's vehicle takes a lot more punishment than in the home. Worn or stained carpeting can be replaced with original-contour carpeting equal to or better than original quality to upgrade the vehicle's feel and appearance.

For a free copy of their illustrated pamphlet send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to car Care Council, Dept. N., One Brande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

1993 Volkswagon EuroVan

Four decades later, the 'perfect van' is ready

Forty-three years after inventing the passenger van, Volkswagen is once again defining this vehicle segment with the introduction of its all-new, front-wheel-drive, 1993 EuroVan.

Available in three different models — the CL, GL, and MV — the 1993 EuroVan i has been completely re-designed from the inside-out; still, it retains an important element that has always been the hallmark of Volkswagen vans through the years: it provides the room of a full-size van in the outer dimensions of a much smaller vehicle.

Inside, the EuroVan, comfortably seats seven adults and holds their luggage, with a total cargo volume of 201 cubic feet, over 35 percent more room than can be found in the average minivan. In addition, the step-in clearance on the EuroVan is among the lowest of any van on the market at just 14-and-a-half inches.

The EuroVan is powered by a new in-line, transverse-mounted, "broad-torque," 2.5-liter, 5-cylinder, fuel-injected, 109-horsepower engine that provides 21 percent more power and 20 percent more torque for improved towing capacity. It is matched to a sporty five-speed manual transmission or an available electronically controlled, four-speed automatic with shift mode switch.

Volkswagon EuroVan CL

For the precision handling and added driver control expected in a Volkswagen, the EuroVan features rack-and-pinion power steering and comes standard with 15-inch steel-belted radial tires. It is also the only van on the market to offer four-wheel independent suspension — a performance feature that helps minimize cross-wind sensitivity and enhance the active safety of the vehicle during emergency maneuvering.

The new EuroVan offers a full range of safety features including a larger crumple zone in the front section, three-point safety belts on all outboard forward-facing seats, adjustable head restraints on all seats, a safety fuel tank, child safety locks on side and rear doors, a center, high rear-mounted brake light and a safer interior design that has no sharp edges.

The EuroVan has passed all four National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) crash tests and also passed eight internal standards, including a fixed barrier front impact test involving 36 percent more crash energy than NHTSA requires. The result is a van designed to help withstand impacts from every direction.

The 1993 EuroVan is one more example of this commitment. Its air conditioning system is free of ozone-depleting refrigerants (non-CFC). Only water based paints are used in the priming process of the EuroVan and its top coats contain no lead chromates or cadmium pigments.

With an EPA highway estimate of 21-miles-per-gallon and a larger fuel tank, the new van is more fuel efficient. Its brake and clutch linings are asbestos-free and many of its parts are made from recycled plastics.

Car conveniences reflected in rearview mirror technology

Rearview mirrors that automatically dim are changing from mere convenience gimmicks to important comfort and safety devices.

Motorized rearview mirrors have been around since Gentex Corp. introduced them in 1983. They automatically flip down a darkened mirror when struck by headlights from a following vehicle.

Now the breakthrough is an exterior mirror — the driver's side outside passing mirror.

Those mirrors were noisy and hard to set precisely. "But they taught us it would be neat to get a mirror that would adjust more completely," says Kenneth LaGrand, executive vice president of Gentex, based in Michigan.

Using light sensors, electrical current and chemical reactions, a Gentex mirror operates with a "reflectivity" or darkness setting ranging from bouncing back only 6 percent of the light hitting for nighttime headlights to 75 percent for regular day use.

"We feel it's really a safety feature," LaGrand says. "If we can protect the driver from glare, it removes distractions. As we age, our eyes change dramatically An older person's eyes make them more susceptible to glare. Pupils are slower to close and people are blinded for longer periods of time," he says.

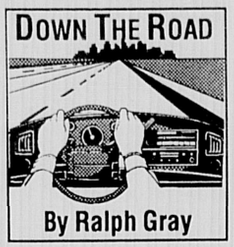

As new technology, the mirrors fit right in with luxury cars whose owners skew older and more light sensitive. So the first mirrors went on 1988 Lincoln Continentals. People liked them. Cadillac started using the mirrors a year later.

Now the breakthrough is an exterior mirror — the driver's side outside passing mirror. The Lincoln Continental will get both inside and outside mirrors, and the Lincoln Town car, Lincoln Mark VII, Mercury Cougar and Ford Thunderbird will have the Night Vision Safety mirrors only in the interior.

At General Motors Corp. the inside-outside systems go on the Cadillac Fleetwood and DeVille, the Oldsmobile 98 Touring Sedan and Regency, and the Buick Park Avenue. The Cadillac Brougham, Seville and Eldorado, Oldsmobile Toronado and 88 and the Buick Riviera will feature them only on the inside.

Chrysler Corp. uses the interior only on the Chrysler Imperial, Fifth Avenue and Dodge Dynasty.

The interior system goes on BMW 735, 750, 850 and 5-Series, as well as Mercedes-Benz S class and 300 series.

For the first time, the interior mirrors will be on a truck, albeit the Ford Aerostar minivan is technically considered a truck.

LaGrand would like to see his mirror technology transferred to items like sunroofs and other windows, but the technology isn't there yet. He'd also like to see the mirrors offered as regular after-market kits sold through neighborhood store. But for now, the mirrors are available only on new cars or from car dealers who install them on an after-market basis.

LaGrand believes sunroofs may come a little faster than getting dimming exterior mirrors. He says, "I've been trying to do those exterior mirrors for 25 years. There always was the manual day/night mirror for the inside, but nothing for the outside — it had a fixed reflectivity setting of 55 percent. That wasn't bright enough on a dark day and it wasn't dark enough for bright halogen headlights at night."

The side mirror works as a slave unit from the main rearview mirror which has two sensors. One looks rearward with a fast trigger for changes. It's tilted a little to, in effect, look over the driver's shoulder. The sensor has a time delay so it isn't fooled by a car's headlights passing through the "blind" rear vision spot.

A second sensor looks forward to read average light levels of the car. During daylight it tells the other, quicker sensor to turn off. It wakes up the rear sensor at dusk.

The rear sensor is also told to operate more slowly on brightly lit city streets and more quickly on dark county roads.

"We try to make the sensors correspond to the way the eye sees light," says LaGrand.

The sensors take the light and electronically gauge the glare. Another circuit shoots electric current through the electrochromic mirror itself. The mirror cell consists of two layers of glass with a mirror coating on one. In between is a thin layer of gel. When electricity goes through the gel, it changes from being fully transparent to fully opaque. The amount of electricity passed through determines the transparency and the darkness.

"It's a little like photochromatic sunglasses that darken when exposed to sunlight. We get a bigger range and do it much faster. We can go fully dark in two seconds and fully light in six seconds," LaGrand says.

Unlike the sunglasses, the mirror materials don't work well in daylight. But for sunroofs and windows, daylight operation is normal and there's the problem, the executive says. "We need material with better ultra violet light stability. The ultra violet light destroys the electrochromic effect over time in sunroofs. It becomes discolored and then won't darken. But Gentex is making good progress.

Chevy limits fabled Corvette ZR-1 to 380 per year

The fabled Chevrolet Corvette ZR-1 will become a truly limited-production sports car beginning in 1993, with a maximum of 380 units per year available for sale in the U.S. through 1995, Chevrolet General Manager Jim C. Perkins revealed today.

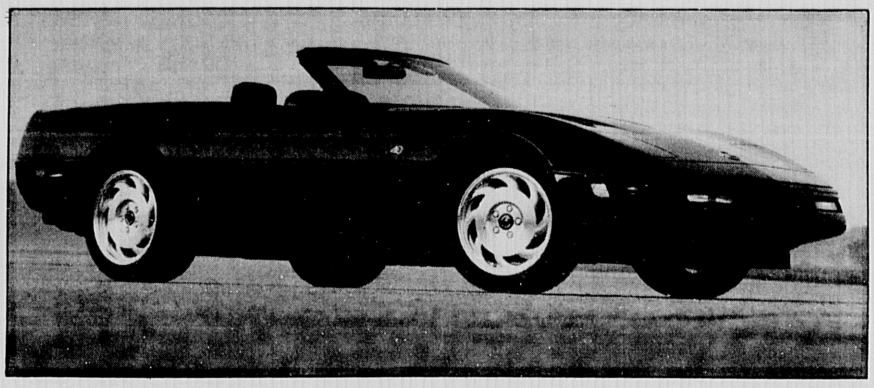

"The ZR-1 option is a great image-builder for Chevrolet." It allows us to showcase technology that just isn't available anywhere else," Perkins said.

"However, the ZR-1 competes in a very limited market niche, and our decision to limit production reflects that reality."

Originally equipped with a super-sophisticated 375 horsepower V-8 dual overhead cam engine built by Mercury Marine, the ZR-1 has been touted as a "tiger or a pussycat," because it can deliver gut-wrenching acceleration one minute, yet get a respectable 25 miles-per-gallon in steady-state highway driving.

The 1993 ZR-1 is uprated to 405 horsepower.

The Corvette, billed as America's only true production sports car, celebrates its 40th anniversary in the 1993 model year. The millionth Corvette was built July 2 at the GM Bowling Green Assembly Plant.

Chevrolet's x1993 Corvette

The ZR-1 became a legend even before it went on sale in the fall of 1989 as a 1990 model, attracting unheard-of attention from news media around the world. Enthusiast magazines did some 40 glowing cover stories on the car, with headlines like "The Corvette from Hell."

About 4,800 Corvettes equipped with the ZR-1 option have been sold since the car was introduced. Beginning with the 1993 model year, approximately 300 dealers in the U.S. will be qualified to sell and service the Corvette ZR-1.

As if two major milestones are not enough for the Chevrolet Corvette — the manufacture of the one-millionth and a 40th anniversary edition — America's number one sports car adds a third milestone to its summer roster: starting with 1993 model year production, the Corvette becomes the first vehicle in the North American automobile industry to use recycled sheet-molded-compound (SMC) body panels.

"Corvette lovers know full well that Corvettes last forever," said Chevrolet General Manager Jim C. Perkins. "But our Corvette engineers have gone the extra step to use this recycled SMC material in lightweight, low density inner panels. Our goal is to keep every Corvette on the road forever as well as produce environmentally correct parts for the Corvette."

The recycled material consists of the same resins and strength characteristics as virgin material. The material is ground to a particle size that is compatible with the processing equipment normally used in the production molding process.

Use of recycled SMC in low density inner panels on the 1993 Corvette is the first recycling program outlined and completed by the SMC Molders Alliance.

"GM's test bed for this new technology resulted in an outstanding team effort on the part of Chevrolet Motor Division, the Corvette platform, GM's Advanced Engineering, GM's Materials Engineering, the Bowling Green Assembly plant and the SMC Molders Alliance," Perkins said.

"Corvette has always been recognized as the innovative leader in technology, performance, styling and excitement. The use of recyclable body panels in the 1993 Corvette is significant, since previously this material would have gone to landfills."

Choosing winter tires

Following are some tips from the Tire Industry Safety Council for cold-weather driving.

- Never attempt to increase traction on snow or ice by reducing tire pressure. Your tires will be seriously underinflated, and it doesn't increase traction anyway.
- Check tire pressure more often during the winter. Whenever the temperature drops 10 degrees Fahrenheit, the air pressure inside your tires goes down about one pound per square inch.
- Don't make sudden turns when the road is slick; rather, make smooth, gradual turns. To slow down or stop, pump lightly on the brake, gradually slowing the car. If you start to slide, keep your foot off the brake until you regain control.
- Never stand near or behind a spinning tire while trying to push a stuck vehicle.
- If one of the drive wheels becomes stuck, don't race the engine. Otherwise, the free spinning wheel will spin at twice the speedometer reading. This creates tremendous centrifugal force which could result in the tire exploding or disintegrating.
- If your car gets stuck in snow, gently rock the car back and forth, alternating between forward and reverse gears, each time with a little pressure on the accelerator. If your tires start spinning, you're probably only digging yourself in deeper, so ease off the accelerator.

Jaguar has history of high performance

Jaguar as a manufacturer was founded in 1922 by William Lyons and William Walmsley as the Swallow Sidecar Company. From motorcycle sidecars they branched into custom-bodied automobiles and, in 1931, into their own line of high-performance cars called "SS" cars.

The first use of the name Jaguar was for the 1935 model year and the various products of the Coventry factory were known as "SS Jaguars" until after World War II when the name was changed simply to Jaguar.

The most famous pre-war Jaguar was the SS-100 two-seater sports car but the company had a reputation for rakish, high-performance sedans as well. Following WW II, Jaguar built pre-war models until 1948 when the XK-120 sports two-seater was introduced. Revolutionary in design, the XK-120 was also the first Jaguar to use the XK twin-cam engine, Jaguar's standard power plant until 1987.

Jaguar grew in strength and popularity with a new range of sedans starting with the MK 7 in 1951 and a series of XK sports cars. In 1956, William Lyons was knighted for his services to the motor industry. The new world-beater from the Company came in 1961 when the E-Type sports coupe and convertible appeared at the Geneva show. No other car in modern times caught the eye of the public in the way the E-Type did and even today, although out of production since 1974, it is frequently the model that people think of first.

Jaguar was one of the first British car companies to begin exporting to the United States and began shipping cars in quantity right after WW II. After several years of using distributors, Jaguar formed its own company in New York in 1954. This company later merged into the British Motor Corporation in 1966. The resulting firm, British Motor Holdings, merged with the Leyland Motor Corporation in 1968, forming British Leyland Motors which marketed Jaguar along with other British cars such as MG, Triumph and Austin.

This organization continued in existence in England under various names and is now known as The Rover Group. Jaguar became a separate company with the issue of shares in July, 1984. The company was acquired by Ford Motor Company at the end of 1989.

After 18 years of production in various forms, the original XJ6 sedan was replaced in 1987 by the "new XJ6" which continues in production. In addition to having a completely new body and suspension, the new XJ6 has an all-aluminum, twin-cam, four-valve engine, code named AJ6, which replaced the original XK engine.

Jaguar also builds the XJ-S range of grand-touring cars, which for 1993 uses the all-aluminum 4.0 liter AJ6 engine.

Jaguar's US subsidiary, Jaguar Cars Inc., is the outgrowth of the old British Leyland company in the United States.

Jaguar was one of the first British car companies to begin exporting to the United States and began shipping cars in quantity right after WW II.

Dodge Shadow

Product refinements, enhanced performance at an affordable price

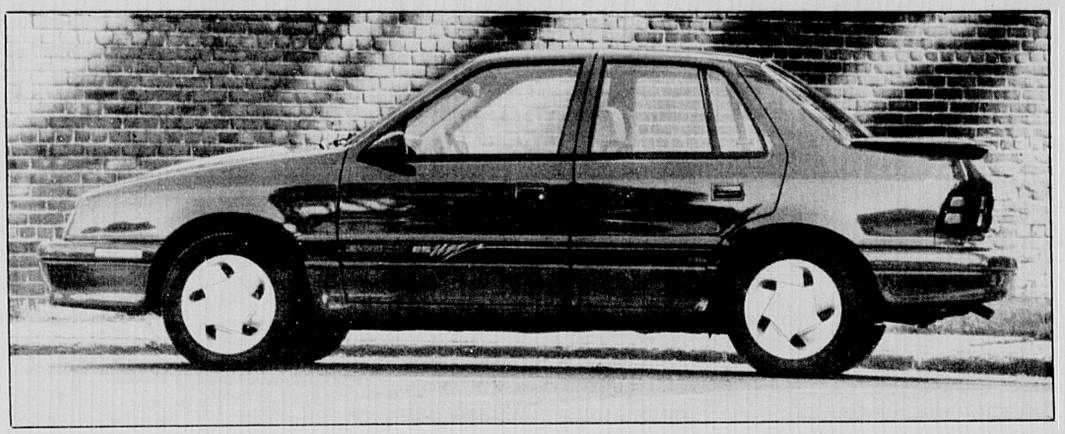

Another example of affordable performance within the Dodge passenger car lineup for 1993 is the inexpensive, but well-equipped Dodge Shadow with prices starting under $10,000.

The value-packed Dodge Shadow is available in 2-door coupe and convertible or 4-door sedan models — Base and ES.

In addition to its standard, electronically fuel-injected 2.5-liter 4-cylinder engine, the Shadow ES offers the option of a 3.0-liter SOHC multi-point injected V-6 engine.

This powerplant delivers an impressive 141 horsepower at 5,000 rpm and 171 pound-feet of torque at 2,400 rpm, and a 0-60 time of 8.5 seconds when equipped with the standard five-speed manual overdrive transaxle. An optional four-speed electronic transaxle is also available.

A high performance torque converter has been added to both the Base-model 2.2-liter and 2.5-liter engines, while the intake manifolds and timing belt covers also have been redesigned. The V-6 engine idle speed has been reduced for smoother performance.

1993 Dodge Shadow

Shadow product refinements for 1993 include optional anti-lock brakes; standard stainless steel exhaust system; and premium sound insulation.

Standard features on the front-wheel-drive Shadow ES models include driver-side air bag; three-point unibelt seat belts for all window-seat positions; power-assisted front disc/rear drum brakes; power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering; sport suspension; power hood bulge; AM/FM stereo radio and two speakers; front reclining cloth bucket seats and power windows.

The Shadow ES Customer-Preferred Option Package (CPOS), which is based on a history of the best-selling model options nationwide and continuously refined to meet customer demand, includes air conditioning; AM/FM stereo radio with cassette and four speakers; premium sound insulation; electro-mech-anical instrumentation with tacho-meter; deluxe variable intermittent windshield wipers; and a full center console with forward storage bin, cup holders, cubby bin, and center armrest with storage bin.

Shadow ES 2-door, 4-door and convertible models feature front and rear fascias in accent color, front fascia with integral fog lamps, accent-color sill moldings and lower bodyside appliques, power bulge on hood, one-piece rear spoiler.

Crescent Melt-A-Ways

Mix to form a dough: two sticks of margarine, two cups flour and one 8-oz. cottage cheese (small curd). Refrigerate for at least one hour.

Melt 1/4 cup margarine and set aside.

Mix together: 3/4 cup brown sugar, 1 tbsp. cinnamon, and 1/2 cup chopped walnuts.

Cut dough into fourths and roll out each piece to size of pie shell. Spread melted margarine on dough and sprinkle with brown sugar mixture. Cut circle of dough into eight pieces (slice as you would a pie). Roll up each piece starting at wide end.

Place on greased cookie sheet. Brush each crescent with a combination of one egg and 2 tbsp. water.

Bake at 400° for 15 to 20 minutes, or until golden brown. This is a single batch, which makes 32 crescents. They are very tasty and low in calories.

Vegetable Bake

3 cans kidney beans
1/2 cup onion
1/2 cup green pepper
1/2 cup celery
1 (4-oz.) can green chiles
2 or 3 red tomatoes
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup (or more) mayonnaise
1 tsp. salt
2 tsp. chili powder
1/2 tsp. pepper
Tostada, crushed

Drain and rinse kidney beans. Chop onion, pepper and celery. Put all in 9"x13" casserole (spray Pam on bottom for easy clean-up). Add chiles (I use mild, but medium can be used if desired).

Chop tomatoes. Mix all together with cheese, mayonnaise, salt and pepper. Crush chips (I use tostados) and put on top.

Bake at 350° F for 30 minutes. Vegetables can be varied (use fresh in summer from your garden).

Pink Lady

1 large package strawberry Jello
2 (store bought) jelly rolls
1 pint heavy cream
2 boxes frozen sliced strawberries
1 cup boiling hot water
1 1/2 cups juice from berries, with water

Line a 9"x13" pan with wax paper. Thaw and drain strawberries, saving the juice. Combine juice and water to make 1 1/2 cups liquid. Put Jello into boiling hot water and mix well; add juice-water combination. Put in refrigerator.

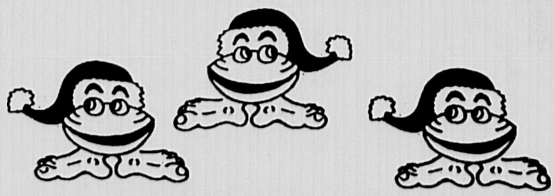

Whip heavy cream (I use a little sugar and vanilla, too). When Jello gets "jiggly," fold in whipped cream and strawberries. Cut jelly rolls into slices and line wax-paper-covered pan with slices. Pour Jello/whipped cream mixture on top of jelly roll and refrigerate until firm.

You can decorate with a little whipped cream and a few berries, if desired, but it is delicious as is, too.

Holiday cheers

Santa Claus spreads some holiday cheer when he rides in on a fire truck following the annual tree lighting ceremony on the town common. Throngs of children crowded the roadway to catch a glimpse of the much-awaited visitor. Organized by the Winchester Chamber of Commerce, the event officially kicks off the holiday season for many residents.

Town told to pay MRI $438,776

By E.H. Stockstill and Deborah Trask
HARTE-HANKS STAFF

Winchester faces a fiscal hurdle of $400,000 to be paid to the operator of the North Andover waste-to-energy facility where the town sends its trash, an arbitration panel recently ruled.

The town's share in the initial settlement, $438,576, is due to be paid by the year's end. Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer said the town received notification on the settlement Dec. 4 and requested additional information on the formula used to calculate individual community payments.

A Nov. 25 arbitration ruling awarded Massachusetts Refusetech Inc. (MRI), which runs the Wheelabrator site, $18 million in additional revenues that will be paid by the 23 members of the North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC).

MRI had originally demanded $75 million in payments.

The arbitration panel denied MRI's claim that NESWC's trash has caused an increase in operating costs at the Wheelabrator, but it also found that MRI deserved some revenue compensation due to an unexpected plunge in energy prices.

The three-man panel of Rudolph F. Pierce, Thomas R. Kiley, and Ronald A. Shapo was chosen by both groups involved. The decision is final and binding.

"What is final is the bottomline number, $18 million; what is not final is what each individual community owes," said Maurer. Maurer said the settlement had not been budgeted for this year and that the financial impact would not be known until the NESWC provided more information on the formula.

However, according to Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt, a congressional act pending would make the settlement payable over a period of 10 years if passed.

"We have some difficulties with the way the formula was derived," said Schmitt in a telephone interview. "For example, Burlington is much larger and they end up with a lower allocation (of the settlement)," he noted. Schmitt said town officials continue to meet with the lawyers in the case, Palmer and Dodge, and will explore any political pressure the

Officials apply temporary fix to North Reservoir

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Water in the North Reservoir will take a longer route and receive more disinfection before it reaches some residents in the East High area, say town officials.

In a move to counter criticism of the town's North Reservoir disinfection process, water valves were closed on three streets — Alben Street, Reservoir Street and Appalachian Road — on Dec. 3. The temporary solution was uncovered as town officials prepared for a public hearing to reconsider the operation of the North Reservoir.

The East High area is the area of town east of Main and Washington Streets.

According to Weston and Sampson engineer Alan Silbovitz, the change effectively increases the water's exposure to chlorine for disinfection by forcing water down Hillcrest Parkway before it reaches residents, a solution which costs the town no

T budget cuts may strand Winchester bus riders

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Some Winchester residents might find themselves out in the cold as the MBTA considers eliminating a bus route that runs down Cambridge Street to the Red Line.

In order to deal with a large budget deficit, the MBTA is considering eliminating 20 bus routes with the lowest net revenues. According to MBTA reports, among those in that category is bus route No. 350 which runs from Burlington through Winchester and Arlington to the Alewife Red Line station in Cambridge.

Although the route is near the bottom of the list in net revenue, it services 1,300 area riders per day according to Selectman Peter VanAken, who sits on the MBTA Fiscal Advisory Subcommittee.

VanAken said that the MBTA's decision to eliminate the route is an illogical one. VanAken said that with the Central Artery-Third Harbor Tunnel project under construction for at least the rest of the decade, it is unreasonable to remove access to public transportation for such a large number of people. "If (net revenue) is the only criteria that's used, it's a very odd way of looking at public policy. It is a time to encourage public transportation more than usual," said VanAken.

> "If (net revenue) is the only criteria that's used, it's a very odd way of looking at public policy. It is a time to encourage public transportation more than usual."
> Peter VanAken

VanAken pointed out that one reason why a route can carry a large number of people and not be as profitable as other routes is because of T passes and senior discounts.

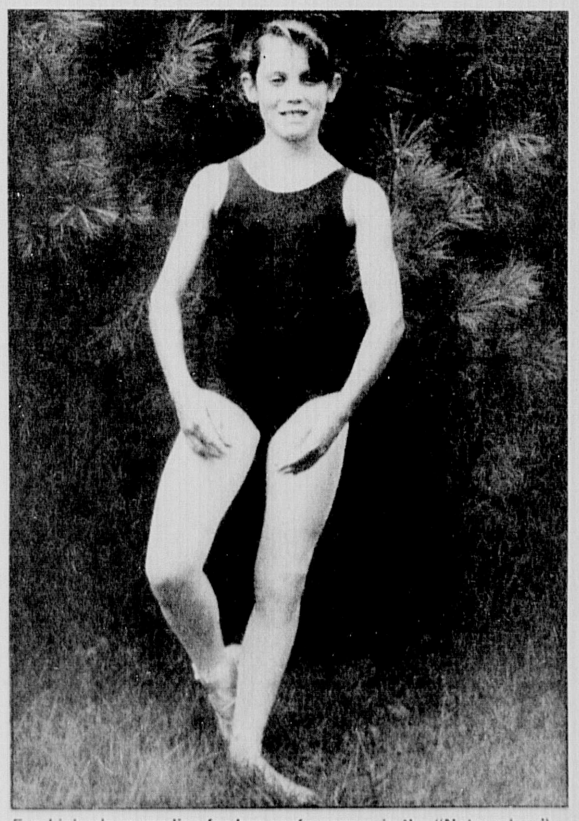

"If you make your decision based on net income, then it's going to take more seniors to produce more net income. You should be counting bodies," said VanAken.

VanAken said that a final decision on the elimination of the 20 routes was placed on hold when Transportation Secretary Richard Taylor resigned earlier this fall. Now that a new secretary has been appointed, VanAken said the plan to eliminate the routes is "up for grabs" and bus route No. 350 is "in limbo."

VanAken said he will lobby the MBTA Board of Directors to change their policy regarding the possibility of eliminating bus routes. "I hope the T board will reconsider what they're trying to encourage and discourage," said VanAken.

VanAken said the board should consider ridership, potential growth, and how a public transportation route fits into the master plan of the Central Artery project before eliminating any routes.

The MBTA also services Winchester residents through the train line which travels to North Station. VanAken said the line is "not a good alternative" to the No. 350 bus route. He pointed out that the center of town, where the Winchester train stop is located, is not easily reached by those who live on the west side of town. He added that the train line is more expensive and does not offer direct service to the City of Cambridge. "The riders are cut off from access to the Red Line," said VanAken.

They made it out of rough times now they help others

The holiday spirit of giving and generosity remains in the hearts of Gretchen Gillibrano and Ernest Foster Jr. every day of the year.

But both will pledge that the impetus for volunteer work is not only to service others. It is a mechanism of self-healing, a tool to soothe the soul.

Both Gillibrano and Foster have volunteered at the Salvation Army Community Center for three years. The work has moved them to understand others, they will say, and has become a distraction from thinking about themselves.

"I went through quite a critical illness a few years ago. I was having difficulty walking and ... well, I did not want to be bed-ridden," said Gillibrano.

As she slowly recovered from her illness, she found herself trapped within the confines of her house. "I would become extremely depressed and now, I know that to prevent that, I just had to get out."

She started donating her services once a week in 1989, "and then they started to ask if I'd be there the next day." So she was.

"I decided you can't sit down and start feeling sorry. I can't afford to feel sorry for myself." Gillibrano, 64, now spends about six hours a day,

Oil truck springs leak during home delivery

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The town's water supply is in no danger, say officials, after oil from a truck leaked into the street and found its way into a storm drain.

At 4:30 p.m. on Dec. 4, a Federal Heating Company oil truck sprang a leak while doing a home delivery on Ridge Street by Hutchinson Road. The operator of the truck, a 40-year-old New Hampshire man, stopped at the house and then discovered the leak.

There were contradictory reports on how much oil actually leaked from the truck. According to Fire Department reports, up to 40 gallons of fuel leaked from the pump valve under the truck. Police reports say 20 gallons leaked. Al Tucci, Chairman of Cyn Environmental Services, who was on the scene, told the Star it was "less than 100" gallons. Tom LaPointe, a supervisor at Federal Heating who was also on the scene, told the Star the amount was closer to 10 gallons.

LaPointe also said no oil made it into any of the town's storm drains. But fire and police reports said that the fuel traveled about 50 yards north down Ridge and into a storm drain or catch basin. Although there is no recorded amount of how much oil went into the storm drain, the Police Department reported that a "considerable amount" had entered the storm drain. The storm drains eventually lead into the town's water supplies.

Tucci said oil leaked into one storm drain but was contained and cleaned out by workers on the site. "There is no danger to the water system at all," said Tucci.

According to police reports, the oil from the Cross Street company's truck leaked onto the street and into the front yard of a Ridge Street residence. Tucci said that some soil containing oil was dug up, placed in a 55-gallon drum, and taken away.

The Fire Department used "Speedi-Dry", sandbags, and oil absorbing packs to contain the flow of oil as it moved toward the storm drains.

Cyn Environmental Services , the DEP, police officers, and fire fighters were called into the cleanup, which ended at 7 p.m.

No changes made in tax classification

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

The cost of housing, according to the board of assessors, has dropped considerably in the past three years, but residents will not see a corresponding drop in their property tax bills.

Dan McGurl, director of assessments compared the housing market of 1990 with today's market in 1992 during a recent meeting with the Board of Selectmen on tax classification and setting the new tax rate. According to McGurl, a home which sold for $325,000 in 1990 has dropped to $268,000 in 1992.

Selectmen approved a new rate of $13.86 as compared with $12.79 in the previous year. The new rate represents a ten percent increase.

During a discussion on changing the tax rate for commercial properties, Board of Assessors member Mark Lombardi said he didn't see any positive benefit to changing the rate Winchester charges its commercial property owners, or tax classification. McGurl explained that Winchester's tax levy is 92 percent residential, five percent commercial, and two percent industrial, thus there is a limited amount of money to be made by upping the commercial rate.

"I feel we are doing a good job on the appraisals," said Lombardi. The feeling amongst board members is we feel we're getting an equitable deal," said Lombardi, although he said no formal vote on tax classification had been taken.

Compared to last year's assessment the town experienced a five percent drop. McGurl said the drop was considerably less than the drop experienced in 1990.

Christmas activities in full swing at Jenks Center

By Mary Kelly
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

Intergenerational visits from both the High School and McCall Middle School have been planned for this holiday season. The High School Orchestra's appearance on Dec. 9 was enjoyed by all, and the Middle School Orchestra, also under the direction of Conductor John McCann, will present its program on Friday, Dec. 11, at 11:30 a.m.

The special Christmas prime rib dinner will be held on Friday, Dec. 11, at noon, after the Middle School Orchestra concert.

The Italian Culture Group will hold its Christmas party on Monday, Dec. 14, at 1:30 p.m.

The Eating Together Christmas Luncheon, planned for Wednesday, Dec. 16, at noon, will present the Jenks Center's Glee Club at 11:30 a.m., singing music of the season and encouraging sing-alongs. The Recorder players have been practicing for this holiday party and will entertain after dinner at 12:15 p.m.

On Dec. 18, at 11:30 a.m., the kindergarten class at the Ambrose School makes its third annual Christmas visit to the Jenks Center. As part of the day's activities, the kindergartners do a musical skit, and bring gifts to the seniors who, in turn, give gifts to the youngsters. Linda Preston and Linda Ray are the children's teachers. There will be music, and dancing, and gifts for the seniors and the nearly 40 children who visit. Parents and younger siblings are welcome at the performance.

Our own seniors will be the entertainers on the 16th and, on the 18th, the young people will be the entertainers.

On Monday, Dec. 21, Sarah Thayer will bring an all-women singing group, called "The Aberjonas," to entertain at Eating Together at 12:15 p.m.

On Wednesday, Dec. 23, the Swing ing Seniors band will be playing from 10 a.m. to noon.

Italian Culture Group Christmas party

The Italian Culture Group will hold its Christmas Party on Monday, Dec. 14, at 1:30 p.m. Included in the festivities will be a "Mystery Swap" of an inexpensive, wrapped gift which each person is asked to bring. Holiday refreshments will be served. All seniors are invited to attend, and all are encouraged to bring a gift of non-perishable food which will be donated to the Food Pantry run by the Woburn Council of Social Concern.

Vacancy on Council on Aging

Dr. Albert Dietz, who has made many valuable contributions during his tenure on the Council on Aging, has resigned. He will remain on the Board as an associate member. A vacancy now exists on the Council on Aging and it is desirable that the vacancy be filled as soon as possible.

The mission of the Council on Aging is to identify the needs of all seniors in town and to develop programs to meet those needs. Issues of housing, intergenerational relationships, health care and economic security are paramount on the Council's agenda.

Any town resident who is interested in joining the Council on Aging in addressing these issues should send a letter to the Board of Selectmen containing a statement of interest and of one's accomplishments, requesting appointment in order that this vacancy may be filled as soon as possible.

Volunteers lauded at Appreciation Coffee

The Jenks Center's annual Appreciation Coffee for desk and driving volunteers was held recently and officers and staff at the Center were happy to be afforded another opportunity to say "thank you" to these hardworking and dedicated people who contribute so many hours of service to Winchester seniors.

In addition to the social aspects of these annual meetings, an opportunity is given to the volunteers present to hear reports from the chairpersons of the committees involved, the Transportation Committee, chaired by Jenness Eugley and Eleanor Farrell, and the Information/Referral Committee, chaired by Ruth Ayres, as well as Administrator Barbara Ciampa.

Ruth Ayres reported on the myriad tasks performed by the desk volunteers, including, but not limited to, acting as receptionist, answering telephones, maintaining various logs, answering inquiries on activities, services, classes, and much more.

This sort of volunteering goes on, year after year, quietly, efficiently and unobtrusively.

Jenness Eugley spoke for his committee, addressing the value of the services of the drivers to the senior community. He reported that the past year had been another good year, marking ten years of service. A total of over 5,000 miles of driving was logged for the year. He said that substitute drivers are always needed, and expressed his gratification at the good work done by the committee over the past year.

This Appreciation Coffee has become an annual event when procedures for both groups are reviewed, and people meet to get acquainted.

"Reading Aloud/ Reading Together" program

As mentioned previously in this column, a new program, "Reading Aloud/Reading Together," has been proposed, with a starting date in January. Sponsored jointly by the Winchester Public Library and the Council on Aging, this new program would involve a group of seniors who would meet at the Jenks Center and read aloud from a particular book to group members who would follow along.

It is expected that such a program will provide pleasure and enjoyment to seniors and, especially, to those who may have vision problems.

We regret that there has been no response as yet to this program. It will not be scheduled unless there is interest shown.

If you are interested, there is a sign-up list at the Reception Desk at the Center. Call Barbara Ciampa of the COA, at the Jenks Center, 721-7136, or Richard Welton, at the Winchester Public Library, 721-7171, if you have any questions.

"My Fair Lady" is musical treat for holiday

by Elaine Tassinari
Special to the Star

Watching the students of the McCall Middle School perform "My Fair Lady," residents were treated to a musical extravaganza.

Adult characters were so convincingly protrayed one forgot that the performers were seventh and eighth graders.

From the versatile stage, which required little changing between scenes, to the nine-piece orchestra, the production was a professional one down to the last detail. All the dancers were in synch, and the cockney accents were especiallly impressive. The three months of practice with the children spent by Catherine Alexander, Senior Cooperative Theater of Winchester's director, really paid off.

The play opened with Eliza Doolittle, played by Liz Kearney, selling flowers to Colonel Pickering, who was played by David Lerman. Her Cockney accent was so strong that her words were hardly distinguishible as English. Kearney's strong presence and convincing acting as this Cockney character set the mood for the game that followed as Pickering and Henry Higgins, performed by Paul Kuttner, try to transform her into an aristocrat.

All three characters effectively showed the differences between the two classes of 1912 England, by their accents, clothes, and behavior. The cockney chorus, consisting of about 27 children, broke into song, with Eliza as their lead, singing "Wouldn't it be Loverly." This was just the first of many songs that displayed Kearney's clear and powerful voice as well as showing off the dancing and singing talents of the chorus. The chorus was also used as part of the set design. By having 30 children as cocknies behind Eliza, there was little need for a set to make the scene believable. Their presence conveyed the feeling of living on the street and selling flowers for a living better than an elaborate stage could have done.

Alexander also used about the same number of children as aristocrats in another chorus that supported Lerman and Kuttner. The most elaborate setting during the play was Higgins' home. These scenes mostly took place in his study, which consisted of draperies, two staircases, a sofa, two china cabinets, and some coffee tables and chairs. In these scenes he was supported by his maids and butlers.

After several weeks of Eliza living and studying with Higgins and Pickering, she finally accomplishes the aristocratic English accent. One of the funniest moments in the play is when Eliza, Higgins, and Pickering begin singing the famous "Rain in Spain" song in celebration of her accomplishment. Eliza dances with Higgins, but Kuttner, as Pickering, breaks into a convulsing version of a toreador's dance, which throughly amuses the audience.

Supporting actors, who also showed off their dramatic flair include Malinda Ellwood as Mrs. Higgins, Henry's mother and Justin Kingstad as Mr. Doolittle, Eliza's father. Kingstad was well received by the audience during his "Get Me to the Church on Time" song. Ellwood played the part of the down-to-earth aristocrat who sided with Eliza and felt embarassed by her obnoxious son.

The play consisted of 60 children which were broken up into two casts, the Higgins cast and the Doolittle cast, which played alternate nights to give the leads a break from their two-shows-a-day schedule. When the students were not playing a role one night, they were supporting in the chorus parts on the other night.

The performers were: Jimmy Pallotta and Ryan Magee as the Buskers; Christy Nealon and Emilie Tournier as Mrs. Eynsford Hill; Liz Kearney and Lauren Corkery as Eliza Doolittle; Benjamin Howe and David Swartz as Freddy Eynsford Hill; David Lerman and Matt Proch-Wilson as Colonel Pickering; Afsoon Afshar and Annie Marotta as Bystanders; Paul Kuttner and Turner Kniffin as Henry Higgins; Betsy Malcolm and Meghan Dowd as Selsey Woman; Sarah Boll and Karen Marmon as Hoxton woman; Diana Merritt and Shannon DeCapo as Another Bystander

Also: Mike DeLuca as first Cockney; Betsy Malcolm and Meghan Dowd as second Cockney; Pauline Lugira as third Cockney; Jimmy Palotta and Justin Serpone as Bartenders; Mike Dodge and Ryan Magee as Harry; John Bett and David VanAken as Jamie; Diana Fuisi and Haddas Lev as Angry Woman; Justin Kingstand and Colin Simson; Allison Wallwork and Tam Willey as Mrs. Pearce; Diane Soboski and Meg Sobkowicz as Mrs. Smythe; Kate Flaherty and Susan DeYoung as Mrs. Hopkins; Ryan Carroll and Justin Pappas as the Butler; Malinda Ellwood and Laura Montgomery as Mrs. Higgins; Mike DeLuca and William Leiserson as the Chauffeurs; Michael Black-Shaffer and Justin Fisher as the Footmen; Paul Arena and Mark Swartz as Lord Boxington; Kate Bradford and Sarah Freeman as Lady Boxington; Justin Serpone and Jimmy Pallotta as Zoltan Kaparthy; Linnea Johnson and Meggie Burr as the Queen of Transylvania; Susan Donovan and Kerry Floatley as the Maids; Leida Capone as Onlooker 1; Lauren Gately as Onlooker 2; Yoni Zamiri as Onlooker 3; Katrina Frongillo and Lauren Mavardy as Mrs. Flowers; Sarah Dakubu and Sarah LaPointe as Mrs. Yorkshire; Julie Shcoll as Mrs. Childs; Jessica Pirani as part of the Aristocrat and Servant Choruses and "Without You" dancers.

Selectmen pick neighborhood rep.

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Making a decision among three qualified residents to serve on the newly formed Mystic School Committee proved too much for the Board of Selectmen; so they appointed all three.

Interviews for the Committee to study the use of Mystic School as elderly housing were conducted during the Nov. 31 and Dec. 7 Selectmen's meetings. Resident Erna Lawrence, the latest application prompted Selectman Peter VanAken to suggest that two earlier candidates be appointed along with Lawrence.

A resident for 13 years, Lawrence has an extensive financial background and works as Asst. Vice President at Scudder, Stevens and Clark, an investment management firm.

Selectmen were looking for a member to act as a neighborhood representative and the committee was formed in response to the School Committee's transfer of the school out of their jurisdiction. The Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS) also targeted any schools no longer being used as prime candidates for reuse as elderly congregate housing.

To be comprised of members from existing town boards, Selectmen are also looking for an architect, builder or engineer to work on the committee. Members from lanning Board, Housing Authority, Seniors Association and the Council on Aging will participate in the study. Community interest in the school is strong, according to officials.

Carol Burdick, of Madison Avenue, was the first candidate interviewed. She said since she lives across from the school she "would like to see the neighborhood setting preserved." Burdick has worked on an advisory committee on Mystic school for the past several years and was instrumental in drafting new guidelines for the current lease. According to Burdick, the neighborhood was troubled by the amount of noise and the hours the business was conducted. Formed two and a half years ago, the Mystic School Advisory Committee eventually made traffic recommendations and started having regular meetings to make suggestions on the use of the school.

"I have spent a lot of time and energy on this and I want to stay involved," said Burdick.

Selectman William O'Leary asked what type of usage for the school she would prefer. "I would desire a less intensive use then it is currently under," said Burdick.

The second applicant Winfield Knopf said his interest stems from several directions. He works as a senior fellow at the New England Board of Higher Education in Boston and lives in the neighborhood of Mystic School.

"I'm interested in the highest and best use of the property," said Knopf while acknowledging that his interest in education prompted him to get involved.

Asked by Selectman Peter VanAken whether he could forsee the reuse of the school as elderly congregate housing Knopf said, "In general I am very sensitive to the needs of elderly people who may not be able to stay in Winchester.

VanAken noted that the Housing Partnership Board felt there was the greatest need in the elderly housing area. "We found that (for many elderly) as long as you're in your house your fine and you are not ill, there are very few choices in this tone. I make no bones that I hope that school will fill that need," added VanAken.

ANNOUNCING THE OPENING OF THE CHESTNUT HILL LANGUAGE-LEARNING CENTER.

While most parents would go to the ends of the Earth for their children, you need only go to 830 Boylston Street, Chestnut Hill.

That's the address of our newest Center. And it means that now there's a professional environment close by to assist your child.

WE ENCOURAGE YOU TO ENCOURAGE YOUR CHILDREN.

If your child is not picking up the basic skills, the reason could be a language-based problem. In a relaxed, comfortable environment, we encourage children of all ages — from elementary through high school — to develop their speech, language, and learning skills.

Our experience has clearly shown that children do better when parents get involved and play a positive role by encouraging development, no matter how young the child. And that's just one area where our expert guidance will prove beneficial.

FROM SPEECH AND LANGUAGE DEVELOPMENT AND ACADEMICS, TO TUTORING, WE'RE THOROUGHLY PROFESSIONAL.

The staff at the Center consists of some of the finest clinicians in the field, including licensed speech/language pathologist and special education professionals. They will evaluate, diagnose and treat your child's specific problems.

Who might best benefit? Children with language-learning problems, that require specialized attention for speech/language development and academics. Quite often, the student isn't learning disabled, but does need extra tutoring to improve his or her academic standing.

Our staff will evaluate and treat your child's communication and learning skills. Treatment is provided in individual and classroom-style settings and may include the use of computers (including those modified with large keyboards, switches or speech synthesizers) and other innovative techniques.

The Chestnut Hill Language-Learning Center is also supported by a network of resources including neurologists, neuropsychologists, occupational therapists, and audiologists.

WE MAKE TIME FOR WORKING PARENTS.

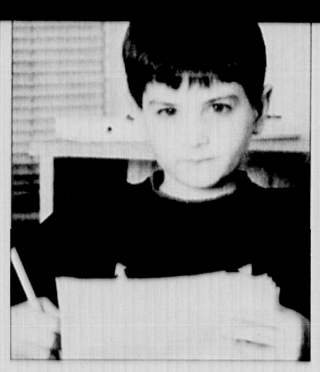

The Chestnut Hill Language-Learning Center is community-based. Parents and children need only travel short distances to receive top quality service. Once inside, we nurture an atmosphere that's slow-key and non-threatening.

Because we promote parental involvement, we stay open into the evening, to suit your busy schedule.

If you feel that your child can benefit from our program, please call us for more information.

It is quite possible that the caring, professional help your child receives at the Chestnut Hill Language-Learning Center will be beneficial for life.

IF YOUR CHILD HAS LANGUAGE OR LEARNING PROBLEMS, WE'RE HERE TO HELP YOU

Advocates discuss education

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Local education advocates held a forum on what trends, issues, and practices lay ahead for the school system of the future.

Approximately 50 parents and teachers attended the Dec. 7 forum, sponsored by Advocates for Winchester Education (AWE). They heard Winchester High School Principal Dr. John Ritchie and Ambrose Elementary School Principal Rick Rogers discuss the topic of "Beyond the Basics, Are the 3 Rs Enough?"

Rogers said that there is more to education in the '90s than reading, writing, and arithmetic. To illustrate his theory, Rogers used a survey of Fortune 500 companies that listed the most desirable qualities for employees. While writing, reading, and arithmetic were in the top 13, they were below skills like leadership, teamwork, oral communication, and problem solving, Rogers pointed out. "The 3 Rs are not enough for the job market of the '90s," said Rogers.

Skills like oral communication and temwork are fostered, Rogers said, through a "community of learners" — a term he used throughout his presentation. Rogers said society must understand that education is not an individualistic experience but a cooperative one. "We sink or swim together," said Rogers.

Rogers said that the more successful public schools and almost all of the private schools "articulate a strong sense of community through tradition and a clear sense of purpose."

One example of the trend toward an emphasis on skills like problem solving and creative thinking, Rogers points out, is the new Massachusetts Education Assessment Program (MEAP) test. The MEAP test received extra attention this year because of the addition of open-ended essay questions in addition to the standard multiple-choice questions.

On the subject of mathematics, Rogers said less emphasis should be put on arithmetic. Rogers said that calculators have made the ability to compute less crucial. He said despite protests from some parents, "calculators are here to stay" and children should be taught how and when to use them. "Calculators free students up from laborious computations when the emphasis of the exercises is problem solving," said Rogers.

Rogers said the School Department should "invest money in the continued growth and development of its teachers." He noted that the standard amount spent on professional services is 2.5 per cent of the total school personell budget.

Rogers was skeptical of Entrepreneur Chris Whittle's and former Yale University President Benno Schmidt's proposed for-profit school system. "Project Edison", the much-publicized plan calls for 1,000 such schools by the year 2000.

Rogers said the for-profit schools could succeed, but only by not accepting those children who are more difficult and costly to educate. Rogers said the theory that these for-profit schools will improve public education through competition is unfair. "Public schools must work with any student who walks in the door ... One element missing is: Are they willing to work with all the members of society," said Rogers.

High School Principal Ritchie told the audience that more integration of subject areas is needed in a school system that wants to be comprehensive.

Educators must see that subjects like art, music, and sports are as important as English and math, said Ritchie. All of these subjects are of equal importance and should be taught in relation to each other, he said.

Ritchie said that although subjects like art and theatre are considered frills, they often do something mainstream classes neglect to do: promote hands-on experimentation and practice. "The value of sports is that you get to see kids doing things, practicing and demonstrating what they've learned," said Ritchie.

Parental involvement is a key t- the school curriculum of the future, said Ritchie. He said school systems, often inadvertently, omit parents from school decisions. "The community could be and should be more involved than it tends to be in most communities," said Ritchie.

Ritchie said there will be a major change in the school system in the near future when a large block of older teachers retire and are replaced by younger teachers with different methods of teaching. "This is not a backhanded slap at teachers who are about to retire ... It's hard to teach all one's life and remain fresh and creative," said Ritchie.

Ritchie said that there are more to the school's problems than lack of money, but he added that he would like the Winchester school system to have "enough money so that we're not fighting about the little edges all the time ... (and) we could get some momentum."

Holiday stress, it's a family affair

By Jennifer B. White
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

"Peace on earth and goodwill to men." These are nice sentiments, but the realities of holiday stress can be less than cheery. Family therapists suggest the holiday season may accentuate family conflicts. From the youngest to the oldest, everyone in a family can be affected by the stress of the season.

John C. Pakstis, Phd., who runs the stress management program at Winchester Hospital, says the holidays are usually an opportunity for family members to reunite. However, a reunion can also result in highly stressful situations when family members rehash old problems or attempt to cope with new conflicts. For example, parents and their college-age children who return home from the holidays, may have difficulty readjusting to living situations together.

"Hollywood paints a picture of how our holidays should be," says Dr. Pakstis. "The expectation is that our family gatherings will turn out to be like something on television or in the movies -- everyone gathered around the table, sharing a laugh or two and talking about meaningful things." Dr. Pakstis explains that when reality falls short of what was hoped for, disappointment may result.

What can abate some of these stress-provoking situations? First, don't count that your family gathering will be something out of "It's a Wonderful Life". If you find that at the end of every holiday season you feel considerably let down, you may not be realistic of what to expect when your family assembles.

Second, knowing exactly what you would like to get out of the holidays may also help alleviate stress. Be specific about what you want whether that means spending private time with your grandfather, baking your favorite traditional, holiday dessert or playing a game of chess with your cousin. At the end of the season you'll feel better knowing you did the one or two main things you set out to enjoy.

Dr. Pakstis even suggests keeping a holiday notebook "Write down the things you did, and the things you wanted to do, but didn't get a chance to do," says Dr. Pakstis. "At the end of the holidays, evaluate how things went. What did you enjoy and what didn't you enjoy. Determine if the holidays met your hopes and expectations. If they didn't, find out why. Was it too much work hosting Christmas at your house so that you didn't get a chance to visit with family members? Were you so busy that you didn't get a chance to decorate the house or listen to holiday music and felt you missed out on the festivities? Did you start shopping too late and felt frantic as Christmas approached?"

Hold on to the notebook so that next holiday season you'll know more specifically what you can do to make your holidays more enjoyable. For instance, if shopping was a major cause of stress to you and your family, you may want to consider alternatives to store malls, such as shopping by catalogues, or even buying and storing gifts all year long.

For those who are hosting the holiday get-together, Dr. Pakstis suggests getting as much help as possible from others. "There's usually an extraordinary amount of work that goes into hosting a gathering. Don't expect to do it all yourself." Dr. Pakstis suggests getting family members involved in chores, such as cleaning, cooking, shopping, and decorating. To cut down on some of the cooking, ask your guests to bring certain dishes. "Most people are happy to help out, they just need to know where they are needed," says Pakstis. The key is to ask for help, instead of becoming stressed and resentful afterwards because the holidays didn't turn out as you had planned.

Dr. Pakstis says one of the most important things to remember during this season of stress is "Don't forget yourself. It's easy to become overwhelmed by family obligations, juggling parties and appointments -- but remember to take time out for yourself. Get plenty of rest and exercise and eat healthy. A good, healthy balance will help keep holiday stress at a minimum."

Dr. Pakstis leads a stress management program at Winchester Hospital which can help participants with pre and post holiday stress and make relaxation an effortless part of life. To find out more, call Winchester Hospital at (617) 756-2220.

Doctors and elder abuse

The elderly woman knew she wasn't being treated right, but she didn't know whom to tell. Not her family, who lived in another state and had arranged for the caregiver she now distrusted. Not her neighbors, who rarely talked to her. And not her doctor, who always acted so busy she didn't want to bother him.

Because of a recommendation by the American Medical Association, people like this woman and other older people facing a variety of abusive situations may now get help from their doctors. The AMA has issued guidelines to its member physicians encouraging them to be on the lookout for signs of elder abuse.

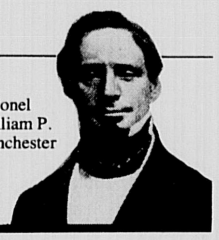

Placing doctors on alert for their elderly patients makes a lot of sense. Physicians often have more contact with older people than their own kin, and in many cases people will open up to doctors more than to those closer to them. Doctors who are prepared to ask a few key questions should be able to identify not only physical signs of abuse but also psychological and financial mistreatment as well. Making such inquiries also could help doctors recognize whether any of the patients' problems are the result of self-neglect.

With 270,000 members, the AMA should be able to make significant inroads into reporting and intervening in instances of elderly abuse and neglect. An estimated 2 million older people are mistreated annually.

The voluntary guidelines are part of the AMA's campaign against family violence, which has also included guidelines on child abuse and domestic violence. The efforts are commendable, as long as doctors make the time to ask the questions.

A time to share

Life with its frenetic pace is often at odds with the human condition — even more so during the holiday season. We just haven't time!

Up at McCord-Winn-Textron ("The Watch Hand" to most townies) management and employees have together made the time to adopt a local family in need during the Christmas holiday.

Working with Linda Scott of Woburn Council of Social Concern, Barbara C. Browne, Director of Human Resources and Services at McCord-Winn, and Mary Griffin, Chairman of the Employee Activities Committee, have found such a family.

Active employee involvement began this week as a large decorated box for food appeared in the plant cafeteria. At the same time, informational flyers were distributed to all departments along with collection boxes.

The well-known Council for Social Concern is charged primarily with the local distribution of food baskets — but that wasn't enough for McCord-Winn.

The company decided to provide Christmas toys for the children — and employee contributions will assure nourishing food and much-needed clothing for the family.

The "adoption" has been enthusiastically received by all employees.

Tom Sullivan, a manufacturing engineer with the company, said, "With the increase in unemployment more local families will need support now more than ever. I think it is a great idea."

Quality Control Inspector, Christine Manoli, said, "At least we have a job and it's nice to be able to help someone else."

This outpouring of goodwill is really nothing new to McCord-Winn. The collection box makes its rounds frequently for new retirees — or any employee in need, and the company has just completed a very successful United Fund campaign.

It may be remembered by readers that two years ago when a neighborhood cat became entangled in the outside electrical transformer, employees rallied together and raised a considerable sum to help the owners with veterinary expenses. "Princess" is alive and well today.

In her office this week Barbara Browne offered: "We've made it through some tough times in the automotive business and we'd like to be able to share some of our success. We've been blessed — and it's time to share."

With that philosophy, this venerable old company along the river in Winchester Highlands will continue to rack up points in community spirit — just as it has done since 1872.

Tips for surviving the season

GUEST COLUMNIST

By Terry Marotta

In last year's holiday snapshot, our second-grade son is shown standing between his various real and honorary brothers and sisters.

He is bald, due to the fact that only days before, he cajoled us into getting him a buzz cut, or rather a cut so short it makes a buzz seem positively Einsteinian. As a result, he looks like a very old prisoner-of-war, or perhaps a denizen of one of those asylums of the last century with a name like The Lonely Tree Institute for the Indigent, the Feeble-Minded and the Googly-Eyed.

As I study this picture now, it occurs to me that his billiard ball 'do seems strangely appropriate. You might as well be shown without hair at this time of year, because by now, you've begun tearing it out in large handfuls. Were I in the snapshot, my head too would doubtless show telltale patches.

In deference to the season, then: For those hoping for peace on earth — or at least in their living rooms — let us run down a quick list of Do's and Don't's.

•DON'T walk in the front door of the Mall. There you will be accosted by the Useless Gifts Mound and come out an hour later $200 poorer with only (a) a bottle of bath splash, whatever that is; (b) little boxes covered in floral cloth which are just that: empty boxes; and (c) note paper (this at a time when George Bush may prove to be the only person in the galaxy still writing notes.)

•DON'T even TRY stringing popcorn and cranberries. The latter stain like hell, and they took the meat out of popcorn years ago, probably about the time they took the coca juice out of Coke, and the bellies out of Howard Johnson's fried clams. Try stringing these babies and all you get is sent to your room for using language not befitting the holiday season.

•Do keep the crafts simple. The magazines are filled with holiday crafts, Victorian dollhouses you can make out of toilet paper rolls and tinfoil, etc. Don't believe them. If you don't have access to robotic machines such as they have in automotive plants where the shiny new '93s are being assembled, stick with something simple. I recommended Shrinky Dinks, which you can buy cheap, color in, and then cook in the oven 'til they melt down to tiny figures the size of your fingernail.

•DON'T try using the country-kitchen cooking tips you remember from your grandparents' day. They don't work for us. I found this out on Thanksgiving, when I dragged down a vintage cookbook which suggested it was OK to place a brown paper bag over the turkey to keep it moist. This I did, and ten minutes later was greeted with a wall of orange flame when I opened the oven to see where all that smoke was coming from. It was like a scene from "Backdraft".

•DON'T be afraid to call the folks manning the Turkey Hotline. They will tell you that people today are confounded by game birds: Some actually cook their birds still in the plastic. Basically, people these days are cooking-impaired. (I once opened a canned ham, saw all that gelatinous goo it was swimming around in, thought it had gone bad, and threw the whole thing in the trash.) More people than you'd believe cook their turkeys with their little packaged organs still in them. One of the chief generational changes in America today — besides the fact that grandmothers now say "orgasm" on network TV — is that nobody has Clue One about what giblets are and how they came to be called that. I don't know myself.

•so DO buy an empty naked bird with the tiny plastic stake in its heart that pops up and tells you when it's done. If God had meant us to decide when the turkey was cooked, he wouldn't have invented smoke detectors.

•Also, DO keep a sharp eye on the Christmas tree. Every year ours falls down, even when we lash it with cables to the walls. One year it fell on my mother who, pushing 80, was watching the touching ritual of tree-trimming from her spot in the wing chair. (Luckily she had a scream like a banshee, and the tree, thinking better of the plan, shot back up again and stayed there, by God.)

I could go on, but family members have begun the gathering that signals the time has come to take this year's Christmas picture. Ominously, Googly-Eyes has just talked us into another baldy. A final thought: if you too tear your hair out, Do save it. I hear you can use it for your own easy-to-make Little Mermaid doll.

ON THE RECORD

The School Committee will discuss hiring an aide for three first grade classes at Lynch, which average 24 children a class, at its Dec. 22 meeting. Acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald will recommend that the committee hire the aide starting Jan. 4 using money from the professional services budget. Parents had requested the School Department hire three aides or at least one full-time aide. But Fitzgerald said that because of fiscal conditions, he will only recommend the hiring of one aide at 17 hours a week, which will cost $3,000. "We're really squeezing to come up with the $3,000," said Fitzgerald.

The School Committee will be reconsidering its policy with regard to substitute teachers. Chairman Mark Lombardi said he has received several complaints from substitute teachers that there is no policy for choosing substitutes from a list of 186 available teachers. Some teachers say, for instance, that they have never been called, while others sub often. Some said the system could be ripe for patronage. Another area of concern to the committee was the way in which teachers call in sick. Presently, teachers leave a message on a machine if they are not going to be in work. "You're less inclined to take a day off you're talking to your boss then when you're talking to a machine," said committee member Constance Makhoul.

The so-called "Lynch problem", which was supposed to have been assuaged by the redistricting plan passed by the School Committee last June, looks like it may be back. The "Lynch problem" refers to the theory that a larger percentage of students at Lynch need special services and therefore are putting more demands on the Lynch teachers. One parent asked the School Committee at its Dec. 8 meeting that the committee look into the class makeups of the different elementary schools.

The School Committee is beginning to resemble Town Meeting. At the beginning of his tenure Chairman Mark Lombardi was quick to gavel situations that seemed to be getting out of hand, but recently some parents have spoken more at meetings than committee members. At the last meeting, Acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald became visibly upset after he was interrupted four times by a member of the audience while he was discussing the budget.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Borggaard offers a few birthday wishes

To the editor:

I had a birthday recently. Suffice it to say that I am "getting up there." However, there are at least three things that I would like to have happen before I bow out.

One — I want to see the beach at Wedge Pond reopened so little kids in Winchester can learn to swim.

Two — I want to see some kind of official recognition of the fact that the whereabouts of the old Symmes Grant Northeastern Boundary line, lost for lo these many years has, at last, been rediscovered. Mr. Luther Symmes tried to tell us where it was, but unfortunately he "misspoke." He said "south" when he meant to say "north" as is evidenced by the text of the second half of that sentence. "And then continuing along the northern side of Prospect Street." "Three hundred feet north of the old Black Horse Tavern" would have put the line exactly where it is today, cutting off the left rear corner of the old Connor house, continuing on up the hill, cutting off Hillside Avenue then doing the same to Summit Avenue, and so on to cross Highland Avenue through the yard of 333 Highland and so on parallel to Ledgewood and thus into the Fells to a stone marker on the line with Medford. Three hundred feet "south" of the line would have put the line 600 feet away from a point from which it could have continued along the northern side of Prospect Street.

Three — I want to see the old Lincoln School converted to senior housing. It is the most logical place in town for many of our elderly citizens, most of whom no longer drive cars and must walk to where they want to go. After all, most of them have paid taxes for many decades, and in view of that fact who could possibly have a better claim than they.

C.S. Borggaard

Waste Committee exhorts residents to use caution in recycling

To the editor:

Valuable tax dollars are being wasted by some of our citizens. In the past five months the town of Winchester has had to pay for disposal of recyclables that could have been recycled for free or for less cost. The reason? Contamination of certain recyclables caused by some of those using the Transfer Station.

Here are the details:

Glass cannot be recycled if it contains items other than bottle or jar glass. Since July two loads of glass have been rejected by a recycler because of contamination. The town paid $760 extra to get rid of this glass. Contamination is caused by ceramics (for example, plates and cups), plate glass (window glass) and metal caps. When these items are placed in the glass collection bin, the entire load becomes contaminated. It cannot be used for recycling. Thus, valuable recyclables become trash.

Yard waste that contains trash such as rocks, wire, plastic, metal pieces, paper, soda cans, sticks, bags and the like cannot be processed into valuable compost without great expense. This fall the DPW rented a tub grinder to grind into small pieces all of the yard waste in the town's large compost pile. A tub grinder is a powerful piece of equipment. It grinds up yard waste, including sticks of considerable size, with ease. It cannot grind up metal, rock and trash. The machine jams and has to be repaired. The entire pile of Winchester's compost could have been ground up in two weeks at a cost of $2,500. Because of the trash contaminating the compost, it took four weeks and $5,000 to accomplish the task. The $5,000 does not include the two weeks of extra town employee time needed to clear the compost area for this season's pile of leaves and yard waste.

Stop wasting your tax dollars and the town employees' time by improper recycling. Remove all lids from jars and bottles before recycling this glass. Do not recycle any other types of glass (window glass or glass and ceramic products). Keep trash out of your yard waste. Carry a bucket when you rake leaves or clean up the yard for soda cans, wire, string, plastic, paper, rock, etc. Do not be tempted to contaminate because you do not have a waste container with you.

Thank you for your help. Together we can recycle and compost.

To the editor:

On behalf of my husband Bill (William G. Maggio Sr.), my sons, Richard, Billy Jay, Bob and Wayne Maggio, my daughters-in-law and my grandchildren, I send to you, the citizens of Winchester, who responded to our recent severe automobile accident on Nov. 18, my grateful expression of thanks, sincere gratitude and love. Because of you we're still here.

To "Winchester's Finest," the Winchester Police Department, Fire Department and the "Jaws of Life" for their prompt response, professionalism and concern, so our thanks. A special thanks to Officer Romeo, Sgt. Fisher, Lt. Pierce and Inspector Gray of the police department, and EMTs Thomas Cavaretta and Joseph Nicosia of the Fire Department. Your professional training and comforting demeanor is greatly appreciated.

To the Woburn Fire Department whose ambulance also responded to the scene, especially EMTs Billy Lavacchia and Rocky Gomez, go our thanks for saving my husband with their expert knowledge, training, and compassionate efforts.

A very special thank you to Mr. John Perry for getting me out of the car and to Lynn Prower for staying with me until I was transported to Winchester Hospital. I don't know you, but I hope to meet the two of you in the near future. Your kindness and thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated. To the many people of Richardson St., Main St., and the Dairy Barn who assisted at the scene of the accident, go our thanks.

Last but not least, goes our prayers of thanks each day to the first person to reach my husband, who immobilized my husband in a safe position until the EMTs arrived. He saved Bill from becoming a quadriplegic. We do not know who you are, but you are in our thoughts and prayers every day. Thank you.

Bill has a long hard road to recovery, but thanks to all your efforts Bill has the chance to recover.

To the above mentioned and anyone we have omitted, again, thank you. We wish all of you healthy, happy holidays.

Lorraine "Ginger" Frongillo Maggio

Resident questions Star coverage of story

To the editor:

While I am not of the habit of writing letters to the editor, I feel I must respond to "Stolen car ends up in town's water supply", which you felt worthy of the front page of your December 3, 1992 edition.

I have to wonder how many of your readers ever made it past the first two paragraphs of your story on the stolen car found in the Winchester water supply to discover that this incident was more than merely a situation of a car "ending up" in the reservoir. It was only by reading the story in its entirety that one discovered that this theft had all the earmarks of a serious hate crime involving anti-Semitic graffiti and extreme vandalism.

It was in the same issue of the Star, perhaps tellingly only meriting page 5, in which your same staff writer reported on a recent local forum on racism in Winchester in which some blamed the town authorities for a complacent attitude toward racism. In light of such an accusation, I find it more than interesting that the discovery of a vehicle, severely and wantonly damaged and with a swastika, not drawn or painted, but carved into its hood, is interpreted by one of our selectmen as simply "an attack on our water supply" and virtually rubber-stamped as such by the Star without any apparent further investigation.

Just as all Winchester residents deserve a local government that is responsive to their needs for a community that has zero tolerance for discrimination, so all of your readers are entitled to more than the superficial reporting that was evidenced by this article.

Michael H. Arwe

Reader suggests a broader scope for special ed articles

To the editor:

I commend The Star for initiating the series on Special Education in Winchester but suggest you broaden its scope in future articles to include perspectives from Massachusetts special education advocates and parents whose children receive services both within Winchester and in outside placements.

It would be helpful for the general public to have a greater understanding of the issues faced by the teaching staff and families who have children with learning, behavioral and physical disabilities in Winchester.

Many questions need to be asked:

How does Winchester compare with other communities in the scope and cost of services offered? Are we using the most up-to-date, appropriate, and cost-effective methods to meet the needs of our students with learning differences? Are we providing our teaching staff sufficient educational opportunities to incorporate these methods in the classroom? Will increased programming in Winchester decrease the need for more costly outside placements or provide more opportunities for these students to return to the Winchester schools once they have completed their more specialized programs?

Now is not the time to lay blame or pit one group of students against another. Instead, we as a community need to work together with our teachers and school administration to develop creative solutions so that all students achieve their fullest educational potential.

Conscom thanks REACT for work on Nature Park

To the editor:

The Winchester Conservation Commission and the Vinson Owen Parent Association would like to thank the members of the Winchester High School environmental club, React, for their recent efforts in improving the trail at the Vinson Owen Nature Park.

Due to the efforts of Lauren McKinley, Rachel Gallery, Amanda Armstrong, Jon Rotolo, Ruchika Mandyhan, Deidre Murdock, Anna McCall-Taylor, Anya Schoenegge, Nicole Levesque and Crystal Lacouture, the trail has been made more accessible to the elementary school children who use it as a learning resource.

We appreciate their interest, applaud their efforts, and look forward to working with them on other projects to improve the local environment.

LIBRARY LINES

Learning to use the public access catalog lesson one: things to remember

In the next few installments of Library Lines we will offer brief, simple lessons on how to use the Winchester Public Library's Public Access Catalog, or PAC. You can clip the lessons and bring them to the Library with you.

In this lesson, I would like to explain some of the things that people find confusing about the PAC. Understanding some of the terms used by the database and how it works can make your search a successful one. Here are some things to remember:

1. You search by using terminals in the Reference Room or Children's Room. These consist of a screen, or monitor, and keyboard.

2. You type your commands into the terminal just as you would type into a typewriter. Press the "Return" or "Enter" key after typing your command.

3.The terminals are always left on, but they go blank when they are not used in order to keep from damaging the screen. If the screen is blank, press the "Start Over" key and the startup screen will appear.

4. You can begin a search whenever you see the double arrows () at the bottom of the screen. When you finish searching, the computer will display this symbol to show that it is ready for the next search. There is no need to clear, shut off, or disconnect the terminal.

5. The database lists holdings for Winchester and for all the other libraries in the Minuteman Library Network. Materials owned by Winchester will be highlighted.

6. Be sure to read all of the instructions on the screen.

7. Typing "P" ("previous") backs your search up one step. Typing "B" ("backup") takes your search back to the beginning.

Here are some of the terms you will see that describe the status of an item:

Available: The item is in the library.

Out: The item is checked out.

Missing: The item cannot be located.

Hold: The item is reserved for a patron.

Route: The item is in transit between libraries.

Next week we will start our first search: a search by author. Until then, please feel free to try the PAC or ask at the Reference Desk for help.

Library to collect "food for fines" during holidays

Here is a good opportunity to clear up your Library records while helping the needy. From Nov. 23 through Dec. 24, the Library will accept food donations instead of money as payment for overdue fines. Patrons who return their overdue materials with a donation of non-perishable food will not be charged a cash fine. The following rules apply:

1. Only non-perishable foods will be accepted.

2. The food items collected should be of comparable value to the fine usually imposed: $5 per day for videos 5 cents per day for books, periodicals, and all audio-visual material other than videos.

3. Current fines on overdue material returned to Winchester and older fines on previously returned material are eligible.

4. Fines on overdue museum passes, lost books, and audio-visual equipment are not eligible.

All food donations will be given to the Woburn Council for Social Concern, who will distribute the food to those in need. Last year over 80 bags were collected. Help make this another successful year.

"Book some time with your kids" will be December theme for children's room

"Book Some Time With Your Kids" will be the Winchester Public Library Children's Room's theme for December, in order to encourage reading aloud in the home. Families will sign a pledge indicating the number of hours that they plan to read together during the month, and will receive a "Read-Aloud" log to keep track of their reading. Certificates will be awarded to families who fulfill their pledge, and there will also be a special "program treat" in January. For information, please call the Children's Room at 721-7140.

If you have a question or comment about anything mentioned in this column, please call the Community Services Librarian at the Winchester Public Library, 721-7171.

Quality caring
"When Donald was diagnosed with cancer, I didn't know where to turn. After surgery, when his doctors said he could come home, I was scared. I knew that was best for him, but I had to work and Donald needs around-the-clock care. Since Caretenders has come into our home, I don't feel guilty about leaving him to go to work. The home health aide and his nurse take care of all his needs, and they stay in touch with his doctors. Thanks to the wonderful people at Caretenders, Donald is at home with the people he loves and he receives the quality caring he deserves."
From our specialized nursing to our home health aides and companions, our business is quality caring.

President of Winton Club, Kathleen Neuner, presents Eugene Loubier, president of Winchester Hospital, a check for $15,000 for patient care services.

Winton Club presents donation to Winchester Hospital

At the November meeting of Winton Club, held in the Kingsbury Room of Winchester Hospital, Kathleen Neuner, the club's president, presented Eugene Loubier, president of Winchester Hospital, with a $15,000 check for patient care services. This check represents the first half of a pledge Winton Club has made to the hospital.

Winton Club's main purpose is support for Winchester Hospital. Club members perform volunteer services in the hospital gift shop and coffee shop. The hospital gift shop and the annual cabaret are the sources which help Winton Club raise the funds for patient care services.

Loubier, the guest speaker at the meeting, brought the members up to date on Winchester Hospital activities and state-wide changes in the health field. He spoke enthusiastically regarding the hospital's involvement and participation in the needs of Winchester and the surrounding communities.

After a brief business meeting, the members enjoyed dessert, coffee and shopping at the mini Christmas fair.

WHS students attend conference

Six students from Winchester High School attended the "Actions Speak Louder" Leadership Workshop in Boston on Nov. 19. They were juniors Phil Vita, Sean Vernaglia and Amy Albert; and sophomores Emily Del Pino, Genevive White and Emily White. Guidance counselor Kay Tiffany, Social Studies director William O'Connor, and Multicultural Network members Kaye Nash and Sandy Thompson accompanied them. The workshop was sponsored by the National Conference and was attended by representatives from 35 schools in the greater Boston area.

National Conference Associate Director Susan Musinsky welcomed the participants and said that the day was an effort to "set in motion plans to turn our communities into places where problems and solutions work hand in hand." The students attended workshops dealing with racism, homophobia, cultural differences and violence, and ended the day by working together to brainstorm ideas to bring back to Winchester High School. Amy Albert helped facilitate the closing event of the day — a sharing of the ideas from each of the schools present. Emily Del Pino presented for Winchester.

Final remarks from one of the student organizers of the conference highlighted a quote from Malcolm X: "If you are not part of the solution, you are part of the problem."

Here's something you just can't bear not knowing.

Every year an estimated 5,000 to 7,000 infants in this country are born with cerebral palsy, permanent brain damage that usually occurs before, during, or shortly after birth. They will spend the rest of their lives learning to meet the challenges of a variety of disabilities affecting their ability to walk, use their hands, to hear, speak, or see.

There is no cure for cerebral palsy, but by avoiding tobacco, drugs and alcohol, mothers-to-be can dramatically reduce the risk of giving birth to a brain-damaged baby.

Whether you're pregnant now, or ever plan to have children, United Cerebral Palsy can provide you with vital facts on the importance of being healthy at the time of conception, and practicing proper pre-natal care. You'll find them worth bearing in mind.

Officials apply fix to North Reservoir problem extra money. In a telephone interview, Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer called the solution a "temporary fix" until plans for a water treatment plant are completed.

"We have never had a bacteria outbreak," said Maurer. "This is really a minor issue in the whole problem. Basically what we've done is improve contact time for the Winchester Hospital." Winchester Hospital is the first recipient of water in the East High area. Maurer said Winchester's water quality is continuously monitored for any signs of bacteria. According to Maurer, the hospital itself serves as a testing site and has never experienced a problem with water quality.

Weston and Sampson engineers explained new state regulations to a group of 30 residents at the selectmen's meeting on Dec. 7. Engineer Bruce Adams gave an analysis of disinfection at the town's reservoirs while engineer William Gagney explained new laws governing surface water. The company offered six options to solving the contact time problem, but noted that only the one presented, implemented after approval from the MWRA, would not conflict with plans to build a filtration plant.

A renewed analysis of chlorine contact time at the reservoir took place when Board of Health Chairman Randall Swartz, Phd. sponsored four warrant articles for Fall Town Meeting. The articles concentrated on removing the North Reservoir from operation since water is only exposed to lower than recommended contact by the new Surface Water Rule to go into effect in 1993. Swartz maintained that such a low contact time, critical to killing certain bacteria, was inadequate.

Town officials have said the water was never unsafe and that Swartz was advancing regulations not yet in force on the community.

At that time, although the Board of Selectmen opposed the warrant articles, Town Meeting voted to bring the contact time at the reservoirs to a public hearing.

One resident was concerned about the flap caused by the public's attention to contact time. Resident Judie Muggia said, "I discussed this information (on the threat from the North Reservoir) with my husband, who is a gastroenterologist. He was unhappy with the information because he felt it was inflammatory and not complete."

Muggia added, "We are pleased with the water system because there hasn't been an outbreak ... There are very few viruses that are carried through the water system ... I hope the selectmen will take the planned route for filtration and not consider spending any additional money on public hearings."

Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt noted the option of closing off three streets and forcing the water to travel farther was not available to the town prior to last week. Schmitt said the addition of the Forest Street hookup, with its pressure reduction valve, allowed the town new flexibility in the East High area.

Town to pay

town can bring to bear.

One of several problems with the settlement, according to Schmitt, centers on the rates paid by commercial haulers. Schmitt said the fact that commercial haulers paid spot market rates in effect guaranteed that NESWC communities subsidized the commercial rates.

This ruling saves the NESWC communities from possibly paying a higher award, said NESWC Acting Executive Director Robert Maroney.

According to Maroney, the shortfall NESWC must make up comes as a result of an economic drop off. If energy use and prices had gone up as predicted in 1981, the cost to the member towns to dispose of their trash would have been very little, he said.

NESWC members now are faced with the problem of covering the payments. At the end of this year, around $7.3 million due Wheelabrator will be outstanding. The communities, once given proper authorization, would have the option of borrowing the money as part of the NESWC consortium or borrowing independently of the consortium.

According to Schmitt, legislation is now pending at the state level that would authorize NESWC communities to borrow in order to make the payments.

Currently, NESWC is also seeking to refinance bonds that helped pay for the construction of Wheelabrator, yielding savings of as much as $34.5 million, Maroney said.

The savings due to the reduced arbitration amount are difficult to pinpoint, said Maroney.

Wheelabrator charged the NESWC communities with causing an increase in operating costs because of the make up of the various town's trash.

Surabian thanks the community for support

To the editor:

As the chairperson of "The Chocolate Sunday," I want to thank all those who made it the huge event that it was — Lily Yamamoto of LMY Studio for the graphic design of our posters and tickets; Irving Rawding of Watson Mailing for all of the printing; Paul Gillespie of Festive Occasions for the tables and linens; Bob Johnson of H.P. Hood Inc. for the milk; Annette Kennedy for the calligraphy; Bob Terjian for the 'Lucky' picture; all of the chocolate vendors and a fabulous committee.

We especially want to thank Mahoney's Garden Center for allowing us to hold our "Chocolate Sunday" in their "enchanted forest." And a round of applause to all the chocoholics who attended and to those who missed it, see you next year.

Freya Surabian

Resident says state should redefine standards for review

To the editor:

One of the state Legislature's first actions since Election Day has been to offer a 13 percent across the board raise to all state employees. The governor has proposed a five percent increase in state wages subject to employees meeting a minimum standard which the governor has expressed that all except the most dismal employees can meet. I will not debate whether state employees are deserving of a fiver or a 13 percent across-the-board wage increase, however, this seems like an opportune time for the Legislature to redefine the standards for which state employees receive raises.

The private sector typically provides wage and salary increases based on a performance scale. For example, a manager may receive a 5 percent payroll increase to pass along to employees. Employees performing poorly receive no increase or at most a small increase. Average employees receive a five percent increase, and excellent employees receive an increase over five percent.

How would everyone benefit from this type of system? Good employees would finally receive the extra benefits of doing an exceptional job, and overall employee morale would improve. Poor performing employees would have more motivation to improve their performance. The consumer (the taxpayer) would receive better service. Better service would result in less resistance to state wage increases.

It seems like business as usual as the Legislature hustles through a 13 percent across-the-board wage increase without changing the archaic state payroll system. It is again up to the taxpayer to pass the word to Senator Shannon and Representative Casey that changes are needed to improve the quality of state services and state employee morale must be accompanied with any wage increase.

Paul Natalizio

Aiello thanks local voters

To the editor:

I want to express my sincere thanks to the voters of Winchester who gave me their support in the election for Governor's Council. Thanks to them, I was able to win in the town even though I did not win in the district.

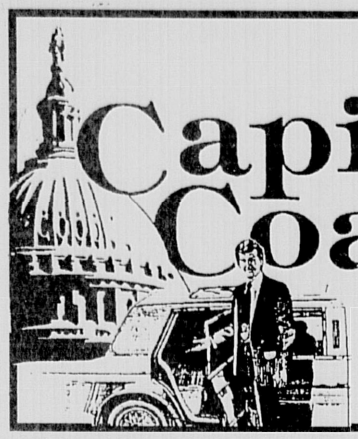

The district is very large and the office did not receive much attention, but the race gave me the opportunity to meet hundreds of people and make many new friends for which I shall be always grateful. I especially want to say thank you to all who took time out of their days and lives to work in the campaign.

I think that the Governor's Council is important and, if properly utilized, can enhance our government in general as well as improve our judicial system. I intend to continue working towards judicial change in the future.

Again I want everyone to know how much I appreciate the support I received during the campaign.

Monday through Friday, at the facility. She arranges donated food in family-sized packages for people to collect throughout the day.

Gillibrano said she sees people of all ages and ethnic backgrounds coming through the center's doors. "There's older men and women, younger men and women, children ... and some of them are people who are just starting jobs and haven't yet received a paycheck."

She said some people come in and offer to work for food, while others work out of gratitude for the food they've already received. "The way I feel is, I'm helping the best way I know how. And when people come in and empty that (food) table, you know you're doing good for people," Gillibrano said.

Like Gillibrano, Foster's service for the soup kitchen started after he decided he needed to escape mostly from himself. "I used to be an alcoholic and I stayed in a shelter, " he said.

After visiting the soup kitchen every night for food, he decided to ask if they needed any help. "I started cooking on the first Thursday of every month." Now he cooks four or five times a week.

Foster, 49, is proud to cook for community center visitors because "it's what I have learned over the years. This is what I can give, the best way I know how."

Donating time to the underprivileged is something Foster will never abandon. He can't, he said, because he knows what it is to be homeless ... and more importantly, he knows what it is to be homeless with nowhere to go.

"I had a mental breakdown, so I'm not employed ... but I'm sober now and I'll never go back. You know, some people go to AA meetings. My AA meeting is seeing people the way I used to look," Foster said.

His world is different now, he said. "This is the first time I really have my own apartment, all on my own. And you know what? If I don't like the bedroom, I go into the living room. You just don't know ... it means a lot."

Foster said his pain from his past now serves as inspiration for the present. "I had a pretty rough childhood. I try to do things to forget, well, that's not here nor there. It just reminds me I have something to give." said Foster.

WHS gymnasts vault to respectability

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Steady improvement.

That's the goal of coach Mim Quine and the Winchester High School gymnastics team, as they look to make a move to the upper division of the powerful Middlesex League.

Under Quine, the Sachemettes improved from 1-7 in 1991 to 4-4 last season, while the team's average score rose from 112 to 117. This season, with just one senior lost to graduation, the squad has set new goals.

"It's really hard to project a record of wins and losses," said Quine, "because you don't know who the other teams are getting. But you can set a goal for scoring. We have a great group of athletes. We should be able to average around 120."

Winchester will count on five seniors, including co-captains Rachel Gallery and Kim Ciano, to lead the way. Gallery is a beam and floor specialist while Ciano works the beam, bars and vault and has added a floor program which makes her a candidate for the all-around competition.

Seniors Cheri Frost (vault, beam), Andrea DeStefano (vault, floor, bars) and Jeannette Cross (beam) give the Sachemettes needed depth and skill.

Already aware that she had a solid group of returning gymnasts, Quine got the added surprise of having an unexpected boost from the freshmen class, which sent five new tumblers to tryouts. Of the newcomers, Marissa McCarthy and Jennifer Clark are ready to jump right into the starting lineup, while Debby Gallery, Cristina Lovet and Sarah Bond aren't far behind.

Quine's heavy hitters are junior Margaret Boettcher and sophomore Megan Foley, who will compete in the all-around. Foley, fresh off an appearance at last summer's Bay State Games, was one of the Middlesex League's top freshmen last year and has accelerated her training.

"She's been working out year-round," said Quine. "She should be able to pick up the all-around for Alyssa (Berman, the Sachemettes' graduated star)."

Quine already has her lineup set for the league-opener, in Wakefield on Dec. 21 against the Lady Warriors. Boettcher and Foley will compete in the all-around while Frost, Ciano and DeStefano will vault. Clark, Ciano, Frost, Rachel and Debby Gallery and Cross will be on the beam; Clark, DeStefano, Rachel and Debby Gallery, Bond and Lovet will do the floor exercises; and Ciano, Clark and DeStefano will perform on the uneven parallel bars.

The only Sachemette not competing in the Wakefield meet is McCarthy, who is overcoming some lower back pain as a result of an injury last summer.

Quine is optimistic about this season, and it appears her attitude has reached the other gymnasts.

"I think it's going to be a great season," said Quine. "I'm really, really excited about this team, and I know they're really psyched for the year. We have a lot of potential. Even though we lost a lot of skill with Alyssa, we should do well with our new people."

Though wins and losses are obviously important, Quine knows exactly what she wants from this year's club.

"Steady improvement," she said. "If we keep working on that average score, we'll be OK."

Wrestlers grapple with inexperience

Team's surprise returnee: its coach

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Winchester High School wrestling coach Larry Tremblay wants to make sure nobody is expecting another championship season from the vaunted Sachem matters.

Tremblay, who led WHS to 12 straight winning seasons before retiring last March, will return to the helm due to the sudden departure of newly named head coach Joe Lawrence. (Lawrence, who was the Sachem captain in 1984 and '85 when the team won consecutive sectional championships, accepted a job offer in New Jersey.) After WHS athletic director Bill Colella was unable to find a replacement for Lawrence, Tremblay agreed to return for his 13th season.

The team Tremblay and assistant coach Tony Fortunati return to is a far cry from the 15-2 squad they left last March. Seven league champions, including two state and New England champs, have moved on to college. The team is dominated by underclassmen, with just four juniors and four seniors among the 27 team members.

The graduates include two of the best in a long list of outstanding WHS wrestlers. All-America grappler Chris Ebanks, who was

Sachem swimmers among league's elite

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

When the Winchester High School swim team suffered the loss of graduated heavyweights Scott Manahan, Zack Gaumer, Mike Shannon and Jeff Maney, it appeared the team would be facing an uphill battle if it wanted to contend for a Middlesex League championship.

But while Winchester coach Rich Cheney was losing the bulk of his most talented swimmers, so was the rest of the league. There is no clear favorite to win the 1992-93 Middlesex League championship. Cheney, therefore, expects his team will be as competitive as any other, and might even stand a chance of sneaking away with the banner.

"There's some uncertainty about who's bringing in new people," said Cheney, "but our goal is to finish in the top two. Compared to the entire league, we are one of the best teams."

This isn't to say that the Sachems don't have some big voids to fill. Gone is diver Shannon, a consistent winner last season. Gone also is Manahan, who made it to the sectional in both the 500 freestyle and the 100 breaststroke. Add in Gaumer and Maney, and the nucleus of the team has been seriously disrupted.

Winchester High soccer products shine in college ranks

Older French-Oliver duo keys Brandeis

By Jerry Spar
SPORTS EDITOR

While Shaun Oliver and Peter French were leading Winchester High's soccer team to the Middlesex League title this season, another Oliver-French combination was having success at the college level.

COLLEGE NOTEBOOK

Vandy French, who started his collegiate career at Division 1 Brown, resurfaced to lead Division 3 Brandeis to a 10-8-1 record and the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) playoffs before losing 3-1 in overtime to eventual champion Connecticut College (French scored the Brandeis goal).

French, a junior forward who started all 19 of the Judges' games, was the team's top scorer with 17 goals and seven assists. At season's end, he was named second team all-New England Division 3 and first team all-University Athletic Association (UAA).

French was held to just an assist in his first four games. He then scored at least one goal in 11 of the team's last 15 games, including five multiple-goal games. He recorded a hat trick against UMass-Boston.

"A lot of people were questioning why he hadn't scored in the first few games, but he hadn't played in over a year, when he was out of school," Brandeis 20th-year coach Mike Coven explained. "He did everything I expected him to. He's a natural goal scorer, He just has a knack. It was just a question of getting comfortable. He ended up having a great year.

"I think next year too, after he plays indoors with us, he should have another strong year."

According to Coven, French has a special goal-scoring ability.

"Certain people just have that knack for scoring goals, like Phil Esposito in hockey," Coven said. "Vandy strikes the ball well with his feet and he's good in the air, where he scored a lot of his goals. He stays very composed and gets in the right place at the right time. He has size and speed — he has breakaway speed and can get behind the backs with that speed.

"When it's a one-on-one situation with the keeper, a lot of players rush their shot. But he's got the composure to wait for the keeper to make his move and then he puts it behind him."

One keeper who does not have to worry about French scoring on him in a game is Kris Oliver. Oliver, a Brandeis freshman, was an understudy to New England all-star Rob Bilsbury, who compiled a goals-against average of 1.45. Oliver, who is the front-runner for the starting job next season, played parts of three games this past fall and allowed one goal. He combined with Bilsbury for one shutout.

"I think Kris will be a very good goalkeeper," Coven said. "He comes off the line well, he's very quick and strong, he has quickness, he's a good athlete, and he has good hands. He did a good job coming off the bench. I was a little worried about our goalkeeping situation with Rob leaving, but I have a lot of confidence in Kris. Athleticism is very important in a goalkeeper, and he's got it all — agility, speed, strength."

Oliver, who reported that he is battling a bout of mononucleosis, said he learned a great deal playing behind an all-star his rookie season. Oliver also learned from his own mistakes.

"I didn't have enough confidence," Oliver said. "But I guess that's going to happen with a freshman coming in. I had a lot of expectations. I set them pretty high.

"Coming off the bench is hard, but I've done it in other sports. I did realize that (Bilsbury) is one of the best in the country. Coming out of high school I thought I knew a little more than I did. I learned a lot attitude-wise and picked up on some of the intangibles."

Coven is impressed with the players Winchester High has sent to Brandeis. He continues to recruit at the school and is indicated he would be pleased to have the younger French and Oliver players join their brothers at the Waltham school.

Said Coven, "When you go out and recruit, if you find kids coming out of a good program, you know they have good coaching and they've played with and against good players. The programs that are continually good every year, you know you'll get a good player from them."

Winchester products Kris Oliver (left) and Vandy French helped the Brandeis soccer team advance to the ECAC Division 3 tournament.

Youth soccer wraps up

A total of 112 boys on eight teams in the under-14 age group recently completed an enjoyable, competitive fall soccer season.

The highlight of the competition was Saturday's playoffs, which involved seven 20-minute games, on a single-elimination basis, with a shootout format if the games were tied.

Four of the games involved exciting shootouts. The top-seeded Red Team, undefeated in regular-season play and coached by Vandy French and Ken Tarbell, maintained its unblemished record with two solid 2-0 victories in the tournament and an exciting shootout win over a talented Gold Team coached by Doug Cromwell and Steve Ednay.

Excellent teamwork, stellar goaltending by Danny Notartomaso, a staunch defense spearheaded by Mark Rowe, and an opportunistic offense epitomized by the shootout quintet of Chris French, Scott Brooks, Brian King, Ken Tarbell and Fritz von Mering were the keys to the Red Team's fine play.

Congratulations are also in order to the Light Blue Team, coached by Rob Howe and Justin Magee, who finished fourth during the regular season but played highly spirited soccer during the tournament in order to reach the final.

The league offered special thanks to all the players for their commitment to their teams, to the coaches for their hard work, and to coordinator John Alberts for all of his efforts in organizing the teams, planning the schedule (including the playoffs), and keeping everyone informed on a week-to-week basis.

— VANDY FRENCH

league, sectional, state and New England champ at 152, now wrestles at Wesleyan College. Will Thilly, who also swept the four championships and competed for All-America honors, has moved on to Florida State University.

League champs Chuck Held (Syracuse), Hugh Turcotte (University of New Hampshire), Jeff Do (Columbia), Bill Branley (Union) and Campbell Foster (Cornell) are also gone, leaving gaping holes in the Winchester program.

"Key losses?" Tremblay laughed. "How about the whole team. We have good athletes, but the biggest thing we lack is upperclass leadership and experience."

Most of that leadership will have to come from senior captain Jeff Edmands, who could challenge for league and sectional honors in the 189-pound or heavyweight classes.

"Hopefully he'll gain his personal honors," said Tremblay. "He could contend for a sectional title."

While Tremblay is reserved about the Sachem chances in a league which should be ruled by a powerful Woburn team (9 returning starters), Edmands said he thinks the Sachems have an edge on other teams because of Tremblay.

"Having the coach come back is going to make us all better," said Edmands. "He's one of the best coaches in the state. He works us twice as hard as anyone, but he'll make us better than anyone else could."

Though young, Winchester could fare pretty well in the middle weights. Sophomore Jon Worthen, who was sixth in the sectional meet at 119 pounds as a freshman, has added weight and will move to 125 or 130. Dave Carr will wrestle at 130 or 135 and sophomore Dan Boffo, who has impressed Tremblay with his outstanding work ethic, will be at 145 or 152.

"The whole sophomore class is good," said Tremblay. "We're sort of bunching up in the middle, so it may take a few weeks for us to sort out who's best where."

The Sachems need help at the "bookends," the upper and lower weight classes. Senior Peter Rinaldi, a first-year grappler, could fit in either the 112 or 119 class. Sophomore Nat Haskell could hit leadoff from the 103-pound class. Above 152, the Sachem picture is murky.

"I've always said you win your championships on the ends," said Tremblay. "We're looking for some size. We really need help in the upper weights."

Tremblay forecasts a long year for the young WHS team, which he says will be hard pressed to contend with the dual meet records of the past (Winchester's worst record under Tremblay was 11-5 in 1980, the coach's first year).

"We're nowhere near as talented as we have been in the past," said Tremblay, "but we have a solid nucleus of talented athletes in the freshman and sophomore grades. We'll pay our price on a rebuilding year, but we'll reap our benefits next year."

Captain Edmands, however, sees things a bit differently.

"I'm going to look to keep everyone motivated and working hard throughout the season, even if we are losing," said Edmands. "We're going to surprise a few people this year."

Winchester High swim team pools its talent

"Everyone lost a lot of people," said Cheney. "Everyone graduated their big horses."

The cupboard isn't bare, however Cheney welcomes back Nick Lippman, Mark Waterbury, Pete Gustin and the multi-talented Kevin Eppig among his returning swimmers. All four represented Winchester at last season's North Sectional swim meet, with Eppig advancing to the state meet in both the 500 freestyle and the 100 backstroke.

As in the past, Winchester has three captains, seniors Lippman and Jim Potter and junior Eppig, who indicated that he thinks the Sachems will fare pretty well against the rest of the league.

> "We're a little inexperienced, but the kids really do know what they have to do to win."
> Rich Cheney
> WHS swim coach

"We have a good chance of winning the league," Eppig said. "Everyone is down a bit. No one has a bunch of outstanding swimmers."

Lippman agrees.

"We have some good additions, both freshmen and seniors," he said. "I think we have a strong team. We don't have a lot of depth, but we have a good chance to take the league."

The Sachem lineup, though a bit cloudy at this point, is top-heavy with upperclassmen. Potter and Lippman will be counted on by Cheney to swim a variety of events, depending on the strength of the opposition. Senior Chris Rucker is a breaststroker and free stylist, while classmate Waterbury specializes in backstroke but can do any stroke.

Two senior newcomers, football player Roy MacMillan and golfer Jon Rotolo, will add depth and experience to the lineup.

"Most of the kids are veterans," said Cheney, "and having seniors like Roy MacMillan and Jon Rotolo come out just adds leadership and experience to the team."

The Sachems carry five juniors, with Eppig the most notable. Andy Hall is a sprinter, John Magee a backstroker and sprinter, and Mark Richter and Ben Rotolo freestylers. Sophomore Gustin, another sprinter, and freshmen Jim Whitaker and Pat Magee (the team's lone diver) round out the squad.

"I feel we have a good chance to win," Cheney confirmed. "We're a little inexperienced, but the kids really do know what they have to do to win."

The Sachems have just over one week of practice before their first test, the Middlesex League Relay Carnival at Belmont High School on Thursday, Dec. 17. Winchester's first dual meet is at Burlington on Tuesday, Dec. 29.

Tree of Hopes and Dreams for Zoo

During this Holiday season the Friends of Stone Zoo will sponsor a "Tree of Hopes and Dreams." Here's an opportunity for everyone to be a part of the future of our Zoo. Each gift will be identified by an ornament to be hung from the tree in our Gift Shop throughout the holiday season. The tree will be a visible sign of support for the future of Stone Zoo and all gifts will be acknowledged.

Here's a chance to remember family and friends who have enjoyed Stone Zoo during its long history of more than 86 years. It's a way to recognize someone who has been helpful to you over the past year, as a special gift for someone on your list or in touching memory of a loved one.

Everyone who participates is invited to the official lighting ceremony at our Gift Shop in the Redstone Shopping Center in Stoneham. So be sure to join "Santa Bear" and take part in this festive event on Sunday, Dec. 13 from 5 to 6 p.m. For more details drop by our Gift Shop on Thursdays and Fridays from 6 to 9 p.m. or Saturdays and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call 944-8389.

January Lecture Series

Two delightful speakers, Richard Lederer and David Smith, are scheduled to head off the post-holiday January doldrums for weather-weary Winchesterites. Sponsored by Friends of the Winchester Public Library, admission is $5 each, or $8 if you wish to purchase both tickets at once, in advance.

Richard Lederer, best-selling author of "Anguished English," "Get Thee to a Punnery," "Crazy English," "The Play of Words," and "The Miracle of Language," broadcasts regularly on radio channels across the country. Elected 1989-1990 International Punster of the Year by the International Save the Pun Foundation, Lederer's talks and workshops have been called "as much a performance as a presentation." Also the Grammar Grappler for "Writer's Digest," his work and wit have appeared in "The New York Times," "The New Yorker," and "People," among other recognized publications.

David Smith, a longtime educator at Shady Hill, and recipient of the "Breaking the Mold Award" by the U.S. Department of Education, gives us geography in his "Mapping the World by Heart" and the forthcoming "Profile Village." Termed a brilliantly educated, well-read, contemplative man with a versatile and powerful intellect," Smith conducts a hands-on workshop for young and old, for travelers, and for dreamers. According to enthusiastic reviewers on NBC's "Today Show" and in "Time," this dynamic lecturer gives you no less than the world.

Richard Lederer will speak on Sunday, Jan. 10, 1993 at 3 p.m.; David Smith will speak on Sunday, Jan. 31, 1993, also at 3 p.m. Both lectures will take place at Winchester High School Auditorium. Advanced sale tickets to Richard Lederer's Heals Over Head in Love with Language (Sic) and David Smith's Maps. Lies and Dreams are available at Bookends, Henderson's, and the Winchester Public Library. Books and materials will be on sale at both lectures. For further information, call 729-1346.

Crawford Holiday sale to be held Dec. 11

A Holiday sale will be held at Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church, at Church and Dix Streets, on Friday, Dec. 11, from 2 to 8 p.m.

There will be a continuous snack bar featuring homemade chicken vegetable soup and chili, hearty breads, hot dogs, peanut butter sandwiches, chips, brownies, and beverages.

Gifford Hall will host Fred's Fabulous Finds (gifts from many lands), new books from "The Learning Tree," "Discovery Toys," "Mary Kay" cosmetics and gift items, jewelry and tables of Crawford Collectables and Treasures.

The hallway will be filled with the wonderful aromas of homemade food items: baked goods, Christmas candies, plates of assorted cookies, flavored fudge sauces, breads and much more.

Many hands have been busy creating the Christmas ornaments, decorations, gifts, stocking stuffers, wreaths and other goodies which will be available in the parlor. Look for the ripple afghan in shades of peach, the baby afghans and the small arrangements of greens and holly.

This Holiday sales will be a wonderful opportunity for last minute gifts and for getting goodies for the holidays.

Youth Center news

StarShare coupon change

If you are planning to support the Youth Center with a StarShare coupon from the late fall brochure, change the number on it to 10734.

One youth says, "The Youth Center is a place for kids to go where they can relax after school. You can talk with your friends and make new friends." Another says, "I have met a lot of new people and friends and I can even do my homework. Nobody judges you here and that's important to me." Yet another says the "Youth Center is a place where friendships grow, problems are solved, and memories are made." Winchester's Youth Center, located at McCall Middle School, provides not only an attractive drop-in space for adolescents, but the necessary social support, thereby strengthening the family and our community. We just need to fund it.

Shop at any Star Market on Dec. 8 through 10 and present the StarShare coupons when you go through the register. Five percent of your receipt will go to support the Youth Center.

Middle schoolers to Karaoke dance

On Friday, Dec. 11, from 7:30 to 10 p.m., all middle schoolers are invited to attend the third friday night event: Karaoke Kapers, which includes "Batman Returns" in the auditorium, and the Youth Center if it's open.

Winter 1992 brochure

Look for courses to put a spark into long winter evenings. Learn new skills to improve or decorate your home in courses taught by our knowledgeable instructors. Create personalized gifts for your special Valentine in one of Madeleine DiCiccio's classes. Try new epicurean delights. Work off the extra calories in our expanded Focus on Fitness developed by Judy Whitney and Gail LaRocca. Expand your horizons and learn to express yourself in a new language.

The new 1992 winter brochure listing the courses available through the Recreation and Community Services Department will be available during the last week of December.

Instructors wanted

What's interesting, and fun to do at night or in the afternoon and can bring in a little money? Come share your talents with others by teaching a class for the Recreation and Community Education Department. We are in the process of putting together our winter and spring brochures and would like to include new ideas. We are especially interested in having instructors in the field of cooking and music for adults. Our children's program is always seeking new programs and events to offer the community.

Classes can be for fun or educationally stimulating. They can be for one session or several. The design and scope of the class is left to the individual instructor. Instructors do not have to be a certified teacher, but should have a through knowledge of the subject matter. Class dates and times may be arranged to fit the instructor's schedule. Call or send a class outline to the Recreation Department at 721-7125.

RELIGIOUS NEWS

Violet Myrvaagres and Peggy Ogilvy prepare to play recorder and cello at the Advent Services on Wednesday at noon at the Second Congregational Church. Services are held Dec. 16 and 23 at 485 Washington St. The community is welcome.

Second Congregational holds services for meditation during holiday season

The Second Congregational Church will hold a series of brief services on Wednesdays at noon throughout the month of December. The first part of the service includes prayers, the reading of poems and scripture, and singing. The second half of this service is a concert of seasonal music played by cellist Peggy Ogilvy and Violet Myrvaagnes on the recorder. The music sets the stage for a time of prayer and private meditation. The services are planned as a resource for busy people who want to plan space in their schedules each week to enjoy the luxury of quiet peace, and conversation with God.

The series will be held on Wednesdays, Dec. 2, 9, 16 and 23, at noon. The church is located at 485 Washington St., at the corner of Washington and Cross Streets. If you would like to attend and need child care, call 729-1688 to reserve space.

Lessons and Carols

On Sunday afternoon, Dec. 20, at 5 p.m. The Parish of the Epiphany in Winchester will present a Candlelight Service of Lessons and Carols. The centuries-old traditional service, from Kings' College in Cambridge, England, intersperses familiar Biblical passages with anthems and congregational carols of the season. The three choirs of Epiphany will present anthems by Pinkham, Holst, Darks, Vaughan Williams and Rutter. Guest artists will include the Aolus Brass Quintet, organist Louise Mundinger and mezzo-soprano Marion Dry. Rounding out the service will be many familiar congregational carols and carols in procession. The public is invited to this musical celebration of this most musical season.

Lieberherr has chosen a good time to make her debut on the Boston stage, this year's production of "The Nutcracker" will mark the 100th anniversary of the first performance of Tchaikovshy's ballet, which was first performed in 1892 in St. Petersburgh, Russia.

Lieberherr, who has been taking ballet lessons since she was 10 years old, told the Star that she was surprised at being selected to perform in "The Nutcracker" since she only joined the Boston Ballet School this fall.

Lieberherr's mother, Ruth, said her daughter almost didn't even get into the Boston Ballet School when she applied in June. "They told her she's to old to start," said Ruth. "We didn't have much expectations of getting in 'The Nutcracker.'"

Although Lieberherr said she is not nervous about performing in the play, she found the auditions tense. "It was nerve wracking," said Lieberherr about the auditions for the show.

Ruth remembers that her daughter was almost in tears after the first of two auditions and was reluctant to go to the second one. "I told her that the worst thing that can happen is they say, 'Sorry, we can't take you this year,'" said Ruth.

Both Lieberherr and her mother credit her former ballet teacher, Karen Bernard, for the success they are now enjoying. Bernard taught ballet for many years through the Winchester Recreation Department and now runs her own ballet school in town.

Beside ballet, the sixth-grade student at the Waldorf School in Lexington also enjoys tap, jazz, and riding. She also plays the violin in the String Training Orchestra at the New England Conservatory.

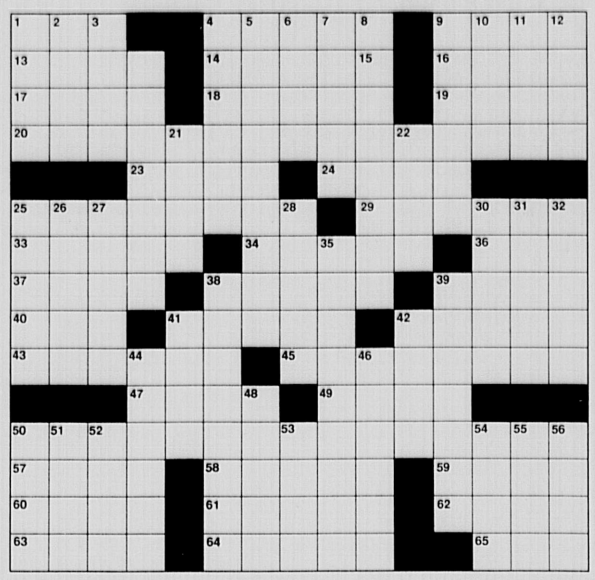

Ruth says she thinks her daughter first became interested in "The Nutcracker" when she saw the performance at the age of three. "She stood through the whole performance, fascinated," said her mother. "She told me next year she would be down there performing." Lieberherr's dream took a little more than a year, but she's finally there.

Rental & Apartment Living Q&A

by Century 21 Winchester Realty

Q. Are there any changes contemplated in the State's "Lead Paint Law"?

A. Yes, the Legislature's Health Care Committee, chaired by Representative Carmen Buell, has recommended major changes in the state's Lead Poisoning Prevention Act.
The committee's bill, H.5867, An Act to Amend the Lead Paint Statutes, would strengthen the state's resolve to protect children from lead poisoning by helping owners comply with requirements that their property be "lead-safe."
First, the deleading tax credit would be increased to $2,500 per unit and broadened to cover the cost of window replacement and restoration work. The credit also would be assignable and could be carried forward for seven years.
Second, the bill would establish a system of interim control measures, abatement plans, and inplace management plans pending approval by the state of encapsulating material which could be painted or sprayed onto a surface. The legislation urges the state's lead poisoning control director to allow owners to apply encapsulants in their own properties and requires the director to report to the legislature by January 1, 1993 on new technologies, including encapsulants, which have been approved or are likely to be approved in the near future.
Interim control measures would address urgent lead paint hazards such as chipping, peeling or flaking paint that contains a dangerous level of lead and the problems of highly contaminated lead dust.
Recommended changes in the liability provisions of the law affect the agents of owners, the parents of a lead-poisoned child, property insurance companies and the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency when it provides home improvement loans for deleading. Also among the 33 pages of proposed legislative changes are clarifications in the state's program to identify emergency lead poisoning areas and in the reporting requirements of lead paint inspectors.
The proposed changes in the strict liability provisions of the current law would allow an owner greater opportunity for a court defense. Violators of the law, however, would be made subject to stiff penalties, up to $1,000 per unit per day and a three-month prison term.
Tenants and Landlords with concerns about the current law or the proposed changes, should contact their local legislator.

Geo Prizm

Chevrolet/Geo offers head-turning styling for 1993

Chevrolet/Geo dealers this fall will bring to market the first of a second generation of Geo models - the all-new 1993 Geo Prizm.

Built at Nummi, the GM-Toyota joint venture in Fremont, Calif., the Prizm has been the best-selling car in the Geo lineup since the Geo brand was established in 1988.

For 1993, the new Prizm offers head-turning contemporary styling, several dramatic under-the-skin improvements, styling cues reminiscent of successful import luxury sedans, and a continued emphasis on quality.

The combination of a stylish, new shape and a longer wheelbase makes the new Prizm sleeker and smoother.

Key features on the new front-wheel-drive family sedan include: a longer wheelbase and overall length for a roomier interior; moves from subcompact to compact class; quieter passenger compartment; standard driver-side airbag with five-position vertical front seat belt adjustment; available anti-lock brakes; all-new optional 1.8-liter fuel-injected engine; new radios; improved ride and handling.

The combination of a stylish, new shape and a longer wheelbase (two inches more than the '92 model) makes the new Prizm sleeker and smoother. The doors on the

David Rosenblum overcomes drugs and shifts into high gear on the race track

By Karen Buckley
HARTE-HANKS NEWS SERVICE

David Rosenblum never imagined he would make his mark in life as a race car driver.

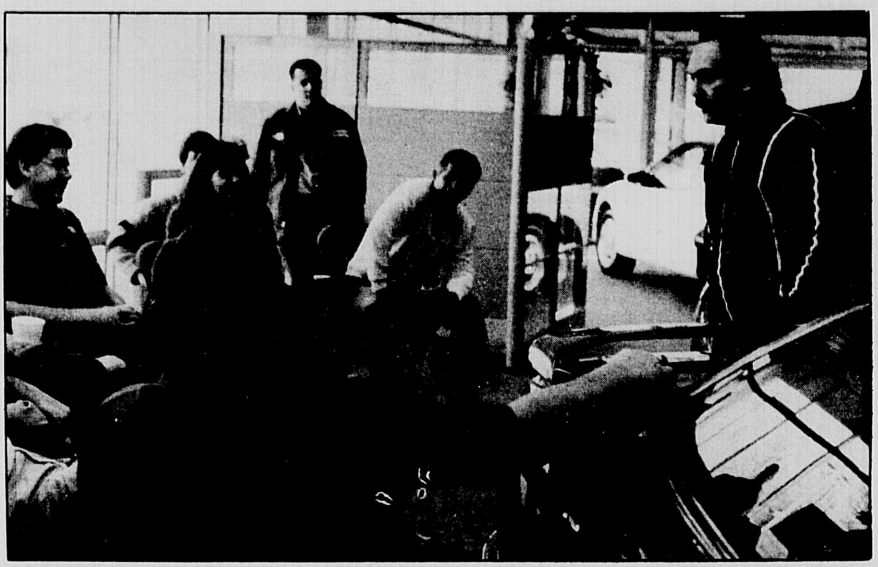

When his cocaine addiction brought him tumbling down in 1983 at the age of 34, that dream seemed even less realistic.

But today, Rosenblum is respected on the race car circuit, and is a spokesman for Valvoline, one of his sponsors, as well as Saturn, maker of the cars he races.

Rosenblum was on hand at Saturn of Natick last week to talk to sales representatives about Saturn cars, and to help them explain the vehicles in simple terms to their customers.

During a break from the talks, Rosenblum shared his personal story - his love of cars and his 17-year battle with cocaine.

Talking about cars - and in particular Saturns - is something Rosenblum enjoys. "I think Saturn's an excellent automobile," he said.

"It's really nice to be involved with a company that, when I say things, people listen, they take it into consideration." In addition, Rosenblum said, the people who build the cars take great pride in their work. Rosenblum related the story of one worker at the Tennessee plant who, while on vacation in Florida, left a note on every Saturn she saw saying, "I helped built this car."

Said Rosenblum, "I've never heard of anything like that at any other car company."

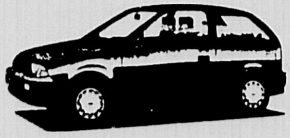

Talking about cars in general is nothing new for Rosenblum, who developed a love for cars early in life.

The son of Holocaust survivors who immigrated to the United States after World War II, Rosenblum worked in his father new Prizm extend up into the roof line, a technique used by many luxury car builders to improve fit and finish quality and reduce wind noise.

The Prizm is available in standard and LSi trim levels. (The GSi model is discontinued.)

Other major improvements designed to isolate the Prizm's passenger compartment from engine, wind and road noise include use of new sound-deadening material, a sandwich-type dashboard construction, hydraulic torque axis engine mounts and additional floor insulation.

All Prizms have a driver-side airbag, active 3-point safety belts and rear child safety door locks. The airbag design allows horn operation from the middle of the four-spoke steering wheel, eliminating fumbling for thumb-shaped horn buttons. The front belts have a five-position vertical height adjustment for added comfort. GM's award-winning ABS-VI – anti-lock brake – system is optional.

The '93 Prizm has more rear head, leg and shoulder room than its predecessor – yet is only one inch wider. New firmer reclining bucket seats with adjustable head restraints improve lateral and back support. All fabrics and carpets have Scotchgard (TM) fabric protection.

Creature comforts in the new Prizm – as with its more expensive import competitors – are smartly executed. They include climate controls that have new rotary dials with positive detents so eyes can remain on the road, a spring-loaded cupholder that recesses neatly into the dash when not in use and bountiful storage space that includes a 13.8-cu.-ft., low-liftover trunk.

Delco designed two high-function radios for the '93 Prizm – an AM/FM stereo cassette with digital clock and an uplevel dual compact disc/cassette system. Features of the new design include a back-lit LCD display, a preset graphic equalizer for pop, rock, classical and news broadcasts, a "PSCAN" button for scanning preset stations, a tuned speaker system and – for the CD/cassette system – an "RDM" button that plays CD tracks in random order.

CAR OF THE WEEK

All Prizms have a driver-side airbag, active three-point safety belts and rear child safety door locks. The airbag design allows horn operation from the middle of the four-spoke steering wheel, eliminating fumbling for thumb-shaped horn buttons.

Lincoln Mark VIII

All-New 1993 Lincoln Mark VIII is years ahead of its time

Mark December 26 on your calendar as Mark VIII Day. That's when Lincoln introduces a new luxury coupe that will drive right into the next century.

KEANE ON WHEELS
By Tom Keane

The reason is that this car is as good as it gets; they don't make them any better. What I like most about the Mark VIII is that it is a luxurious coupe with definite sports-car handling characteristics. The Mark VII was somewhat a luxury car with sporty features, but it didn't excel in either area. This new car, with its great handling and strong engine, makes driving fun.

This is the eighth in a series of Mark cars that began back in 1940. The first car had a spare tire housing on the trunk lid and the identifying tradition continued through the years. The 1993 version, however, is hardly noticeable.

The new Mark has long, sleek lines. The overall length is longer than the Mark VII and the wheelbase is five-inches longer, too. But it handles easier and doesn't seem as big. I suspect the ease in handling is the result of better visibility. The instrument panel and hood seem lower and the drivers seat higher — even though this model has a lower roof line compared to the Mark VII. How Lincoln accomplished this, I don't know.

There are numerous ingenious designs in the new Mark. The curb weight is lighter than the Mark VII, but the ride feels heavier and more solid. The trunk lid is lower than the lid on the old Mark, but has more usable storage space. However, it still has limited storage capacity. The back seat is easier to get into, too, but I'd recommend it only in emergency.

The bucket-type front seats are delightful. They are covered with leather that matches the surroundings. Although the entire interior clothing store, located on the north side of Philadelphia, seven days a week. "I learned how to make money, and the first thing I bought was a car," Rosenblum said.

But growing up in the 60s posed its own set of challenges, namely exposure to drugs. "It was a way of expressing your rebellion," he said. "What we didn't realize in those days is what an addicted person is. You're a drug addict for life."

Rosenblum spent 17 years on a cocaine rollercoaster. And although he tried to make it as a race car driver, "I was the hobbyist that never had his act together," he said. But Rosenblum checked into a rehab, and soon realized he had to develop other interests in order to keep from falling back to his old habits.

"After a year of sobriety and my parents giving me Tough Love, my desire to go racing came back," he said. Rosenblum said he needed a way to race cars without falling back to the people, places and things he had known throughout his addiction, as well as a way to be a role model.

That's where the concept of his race car team, ICY (Inner City Youth) comes in. Rosenblum established the team as a way to help inner city youth in the Philadelphia area, to keep them from falling into bad habits as he did.

Rosenblum has requirements for his program, however: that students not be involved in drugs, do well in school and have an interest in auto mechanics. Today, Rosenblum has 10 kids on his team, a few of which travel with him to each race. "I know their parents, I know their habits," Rosenblum said of his race crew.

Rosenblum recalls one program participant who "had failing grades, a bad attitude, he had it bad at home and was hanging around with drug dealers. I finally said, 'you're not on the team if your attendance doesn't go up, and if you don't try.'

"Six months later he made the honor role. He graduated with good grades and went into the Navy and became crew chief," Rosenblum said.

Success stories like that "reinforce my sobriety," he said. "I can't do anything for anybody if I'm still out there."

As of Dec. 2, when he was at the Saturn outlet, Rosenblum said he has been clean for eight years, 11 months and 28 days. "My memory of my last high is as visible as the M&Ms I ate last night. It never goes away," he said. "What most people don't realize about drugs ... people thinks it makes you steal, get in accidents," said Rosenblum.

But Rosenblum has a different perspective. "It makes [people] lose their ability to be patient and plan goals," he said. As a drug addict, he said he "wanted everything right away," needing to calm his cravings. That mentality carried over into his racing career, which throughout his addiction was far from successful.

"I always wanted to be a champion yesterday," he added. "I was never able to do things a day at a time, a step at a time ... that's what hurts kids, hurts our country. They're impatient, not willing to wait, not willing to see things."

Today, Rosenblum lectures 20/30 times per year in high schools, and visits Saturn dealerships even more often.

"Race car driving takes a lot of concentration, mental reservation. I never had that when I was doing drugs," he said. "To do something that well and for that long ... it's such a relief.

"(When I was on drugs), I was on the spectator side. I could never get over that hurdle ... This is beyond my wildest dreams," he said.

But what Rosenblum does regret is the time he lost to drugs. "If you're lucky enough not to end up in jail, crazy or dead, the one thing you can never get back is the years you lost."

Tracking trends of truck buyers takes circuitous route

If you are shopping for a new pickup truck, you'll find that the trends vary from one manufacturer to another. For example, if you buy a Ford Ranger compact pickup truck, the odds are that you'll get it with a manual transmission, a four-cylinder engine and a snappy set of wheels.

Should you decide upon a Chevrolet S-10 compact pickup truck, the probability dramatically increases for a V-6 engine, automatic transmission and standard issue wheels.

Go for a Dakota midsize pickup and it's nearly unanimous that you will get a V-6 or V-8 engine, automatic transmission plus the fancy wheels.

The import trucks are almost the reverse. Nearly 90 percent of Toyota pickups are four-cylinder engines with manual transmission, and Nissan pickup trucks figures are about the same. Wheels are basic with both manufacturers.

The figures were compiled by the authoritative trade publication, Wards Automotive Reports.

Compared with two years ago, the imports in model 1990 haven't changed much. Chevrolet S-10 buyers are moving steadily away from manual transmissions (58 percent in 1990, 53 percent in 1992). Ranger buyers, however, are going just as steadfastly toward manual gearboxes from 61 percent two years ago to 71 percent now. The trend to styled wheels also is increasing from 66 percent to 82 percent.

Dodge Dakota is shifting to automatics — 76 percent in model 1992 against 69 percent. Fancy wheel selection jumped from 15 percent to 66 percent.

Two years ago, half of Chevy S-lOs came with the 2.5-liter, four-cylinder engine with the rest V-6. Now it's 78 percent V-6 engine fueled by the powerful 4.3L V-6 which accounts for more than half of all S-10 engines. The 2.8L V-6 has the 23 percent and the four-cylinder 22 percent.

Yet the basically similar GMC Sonoma hasn't budged on four-cylinder engines. About a third of the power plants are the 2.5L four-cylinder. Manual transmissions are becoming more popular rising to 60 percent of all installations from 43 percent just two years ago. Sonoma doesn't echo the big S-10 jump in speed control installations, either. S-10 went from 26 percent to 90 percent speed controllers while Sonoma inched up to 35 percent.

With the Ford Ranger, the 2.3-liter four-cylinder engine is holding its own with 45 percent of installations and the rest 2.9-liter or four-liter V-6 engines .

Only 4 percent of Dodge Dakotas came with the 2.5-liter, four-cylinder engine in model 1992. Another 70 percent or so percent run with the 3.9-liter V-6. The big change is the V-8 engine. None were offered in the Dakota two years ago. Now the V-8 takes is used in a quarter of all installations.

If the Chevrolet S-10 is heading to bigger engines, the full-size Chevrolet C-K 1500 is going the opposite direction. More buyers are opting for the 4.3-liter, V-6 in the big truck. Installation is up to nearly 30 percent from 21 percent.

Sales of pickups will rise 5.1 percent to 2.2 million units from 2.1 million in model 1992, predicts Ward's Automotive Reports.

The same is true to a slightly lesser degree in the Ford F-150 where six cylinder engines, in this case the straight I-6 with a massive 4.9-liter engine now accounts for 46 percent of installation up from 41 percent two model years ago.

The big change for full-sized Dodge pickups is how the 5.9-liter turbo diesel has supplanted the V-8. In the heavier duty 250 and 350 model the six cylinder in-line turbo was at 88 percent of engines installed in model 1992.

Your next pickup truck may have a spacious option — a back seat or at least room for one. They are extended cabs, lengthened to accommodate two or three people (preferably small people.)

At Ford, their SuperCab accounts for 35 percent of Ranger and F series up from 15 percent a few years ago. Industry-wide, the extended cabs are at five percent and some see that rising to 40 percent later this decade.

"It's an extension of a truck being used for more personal use. The benefit of the small back seat is primarily a place to put your stuff — groceries, brief case, fishing pole, etcetera," says a Ford truck spokesman. Pickup truck sales are expected to trail model 1993 sales for all light trucks. But they'll still be far and away the most popular vehicles made.

Sales of pickups will rise 5.1 percent to 2.2 million units from 2.1 million in model 1992, predicts Ward's Automotive Reports. Large pickups will fare better than small ones, increasing sales 10.8 percent to nearly 1.3 million while small pickups post a 1.5 percent decline to 997,000 units.

Sport utility vehicles will increase 12.4 percent to 1.1 million and vans go up 14.2 percent to 1.4 million units. Total light truck sales are estimated by Ward's at 4.9 million up 9.4 percent.

Lincoln Mark VIII

isn't covered with leather, it looks and feels like it is. What rubs off is the feeling of wealth.

The ergonomics are perfect. All the instrumentation is just where you'd expect it to be and easy to reach. I like the appearance of the instrument panel. It has a circular design that runs from one door post to the other with clean, uncluttered lines. The area in the center contains the controls for the automatic heating/air conditioning system and sound system.

I appreciate the location of the radio. Even though it requires more design ingenuity to place the sound system above the climate control system (because of the air ducts) Ford Motor Company engineers and designers found a way to do it.

That thoughtfulness can be found throughout this car, such as sentinel lighting, rearview mirror dimmer, trunk lid lockout, keyless entry, finger-tip speed controls. Of course it has all the latest safety features including dual airbags

I've been saving the best features for last: the engine and the handling. This car has an all-aluminum V-8 engine. It has 32 valves that produce 280 horsepower and 285 pounds-foot of torque. That's tremendous power.

andanti-lock brakes. It's worth the $37,000 or whatever the final price will be.

On the other hand, I wonder why there is no express down button on the driver's side power window, and why the horn toots so loud when the security system is armed through the button on the key ring.

I've been saving the best features for last: the engine and the handling. This car has an all-aluminum V-8 engine. It has 32 valves that produce 280 horsepower and 285 pounds-foot of torque. That's tremendous power.

The torque makes the car surge ahead at the demand of a heavy foot. It's a little noisy under hard acceleration, but the sound adds to the thrill.

A quick lane change in this car is a piece of cake. The handling compares with the best of sports cars, yet the ride is medium-firm and comfortable.

If you're busy on Dec. 26, don't fret, this car will be in your dealer's showroom — for many years to come. It's a winner.

SPARE PARTS

SMART DUMMIES: General Motors conducts most of its crash testing using the advanced Hybrid III family of dummies. These dummies represent real people better than older models. They are capable of making more sophisticated measurements of what happens in a crash.

The additional data helps GM formulate strict internal guideline for crash-worthiness of its cars and trucks.

SOLVING PROBLEMS: The American Automobile Association has a third-party arbitration service called Autosolve. It offers car owners and manufacturers and alternate to costly and protracted legal action in a dispute, with decisions binding only on the manufacturer.

Since 1985, the program has settled more than 10,000 cases in the ten states it has arbitration agreements. It is used by Toyota, Lexus, Hyundai, Subaru and Porche.

BRAKE FIRST: Should you encounter slick or icy roads, always do your braking on the straightaway before you enter the curve. Coast around the curve and steer smoothly. Accelerate when you are coming out of the curve.

Books become Book bundles

Books are the perfect holiday gift, and they become "Book bundles" when combined with related toys or objects. The Children's Room has a list of suggestions based on paperbacks currently available in local bookstores. For example, AMELIA BEDELIA'S FAMILY ALBUM by Peggy Parish, and a small personal photo album; or any weather book and an outdoor thermometer to attach outside their bedroom window. Come pick up the list in the Children's Room and get the idea!!

Selectmen fight against NESWC fines

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Selectmen are preparing to do battle in light of a $400,000 assessment by the operator of the North Andover waste-to-energy facility where the town sends its trash.

At their Dec. 13 meeting the selectmen refused to consider backing Senate Bill 1758, a bill which would authorize communities to borrow to deal with the financial punch delivered by the large settlements.

"I think we could specifically vote not to have anyone take any action on payment of this while it is under litigation," said Selectman William O'Leary. He further cautioned members against making any comments at the NESWC meetings.

A Nov. 25 arbitration ruling awarded Massachusett Refusetech Inc. (MRI), which runs the Wheelabrator site, $18 million in additional revenues that will be paid by the 23 members of North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC). The first payment on the $18 million is due in December. While denying some of MRI's claims, the arbitration board found they did deserve some revenue compensation due to an unexpected drop in energy prices.

According to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, the Joint Legislative Committee on Natural Resources held a hearing on the arbitration funding bill. Concern raised at that meeting centered on bringing the issue into the public spotlight prior to borrowing money to finance repayment on the settlement.

"There are some concerns that we have on how the NESWC Board arrived at the distribution (of payments) between NESWC communities," said Maurer. Maurer said the chief complaint is the settlement for each community is arrived utilizing a different formula.

Snowstorm hits community hard

By Stephen Olivieri and Deborah Trask

Winchester is back on its feet after being hit by a major snowstorm over the weekend that resulted in numerous downed power lines, tree limbs blocking streets, school cancellation, and one snow-related death.

Friday's rain turned to snow early Saturday morning and didn't stop until 12 inches had fallen on Winchester by Sunday morning. Most residents were homebound over the weekend, listening to storm news and cancellations in between trips to shovel out waist-deep snow.

There was one snow-related casualty from the weekend storm. A 78-year-old Bellevue Avenue man died Sunday morning, Dec. 13, after removing some snow at his residence. According to police reports, the man came into his house after removing the snow and complained of dizziness. He died shortly afterward.

Power outages and downed lines were kept to a minimum due to monitoring by Boston Edison. According to spokesperson Sheila Eppolito, there were 626 customers in the Highland Avenue area without power from 10:30 a.m. on Dec. 12 until 4 p.m. Another 318 customers were without power on Dec. 13 from 10 to 3 p.m. in the Winchester center and Mystic Valley Parkway area.

"There are presently no major problems; however, with the heavy snow, it's still possible for some wires to be knocked down," said Eppolito during the cleanup effort on Monday.

Boston Edison marshalled some 53 additional crews to assist the crews already working around-the-clock.

Eppolito said the worst will be over in the next few days but cautioned parents to continue warning children about downed wires. "Parents need to tell their children to assume that any downed wire is live and call the Fire Department to report them," she added.

Couple keeps their faith during these tough times

By Carlene Hempel
HARTE-HANKS STAFF WRITER

Joe and Denise are doing their best to uphold the standards of what he calls the "great American thing."

It's just not enough these days.

Denise has worked odd jobs in the past but has been unsuccessful in finding employment now while Joe has been out of work since July, laid off from his machinist's job. After mailing scores of resumes and following up by phone, he thinks he might have a shot at working for the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. But the interview was last week, and he still hasn't heard anything.

"You feel like you're being squeezed," Joe says, as he clasps and unclasps his hands. Denise exhibits the same discomfort. "With the money being so low from unemployment, you have to go out to see if you can get help," she said.

And so they did — for the first time in their lives.

Denise, 40, said she never knew what services the Salvation Army provided. She never really thought about it. "The only time I thought about the Salvation Army was at Christmastime when you see those people out there with their little bells."

Joe, 44, said the moment he and Denise stepped into the Waltham Salvation Army, they thought, "maybe we should just go home. Maybe it's not as bad as we thought."

"I just didn't want to go. I, um, I don't know ... maybe it was pride. You know you have to go but you think, you never had to do this before and here you are," Denise said.

Thinking about the well-being of their 18-year-old daughter and 16- and 10-year-old sons, Denise

Town officials set policy guidelines for rabid raccoons

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

In response to the discovery of a rabid raccoon in nearby Belmont, the Winchester Police Department has issued policy guidelines to its officers on how to deal with reports of suspected rabid raccoons in Winchester.

The Police Department policy, "The Safe Handling of Sick or Rabid Animals", states in part that police officers will shoot any animal they suspect of being infected with rabies. According to Police Chief Joseph Perritano, officers have shot four animals in the last few months suspected of being ill.

Another new procedure in the policy, which went into effect Dec. 10, requires that officers shoot the body of a rabid raccoon, so the head can be sent to a state lab to be tested for rabies. Health Director Joseph Tabbi, who worked with Perritano to formulate the policy, said that since these tests were never done before, he does not know if the four ill animals shot by police officers were suffering from rabies. Tabbi said that some raccoons exhibiting similar symptoms as those of rabid animals might be in fact be suffering from distemper.

Joseph Tabbi

The long-expected spread of rabid raccoons into Massachusetts has been even more swift and pervasive than state officials had predicted. The first infected raccoon in Massachusetts was discovered in September. Since then, 37 raccoons have tested positive for rabies. At first, the problem was limited to western Massachusetts, but it has quickly spread to the Greater Boston area where two infected raccoons recently tested positive for rabies in Belmont.

Exxon takes steps toward cleanup

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The Conservation Commission and representatives of an abandonded Exxon station might finally reach an agreement on the cleanup of the Main Street site.

Geologic Services Corporation (GSC), which is overseeing the cleanup, is currently implementing a system which will clean undergroud water contaminated with gasoline and oil. The system includes a soil vapor extractor and a treatment pump, which will extract the underground water, filter it, and pump it into a storm drain.

Conservation Comission Chairman Joshua Alper told the conservation commissioners at their Dec. 14 meeting that Exxon was undergoing "what appears to be a remediation in progress." Since 1987, Exxon and the Conservation Commission have disputed, often in heated disagreements, the progress of the cleanup of an underground fuel plume in the water, which was a result of a storage tank leak at the Exxon station.

Several commissioners charge that Exxon has dragged out the cleanup and that the town's water supply could potentially be endangered.

The Conservation Commissioners said they are pleased what they considered long-overdue remediation is taking place, but they want the Board of Health to look into some of the methods being used. Alper questioned what happens to the volatile organic compounds (VOCs), which are a byproduct of the water cleanup.

Alper said he was worried about vapors being released into the air in an area where there is a large amount of pedestrian traffic and residents. "A stripper typically puts these things into the air depending on which way the wind's blowing," said Commissioner Richard Maggio.

Alper also questioned the pumping of treated water into the storm drain. He asked whether GSC had received municipal permits to dump water into the drain and also tear up a section of the sidewalk to implement the pipe. There are no available numbers for the amount of water being pumped into the storm drains, but Alper told the commissioners the water in the pipe is currently "going along at a good clip." The pumping process has already been initiated.

Conservation Administrator Elaine Vreeland told the Star that the GSC had done testing which shows that the vapor extractor scheduled go on line in January should filter any VOCs.

Vreeland said she believed that GSC has received federal approval for pumping the water into the storm drain. But Alper said federal authority "doesn't supersede municipal authority over what goes into municipal drains."

This is the first step toward remediation that has met with the commission's satisfaction. Vreeland said she believes this new system will eventually lead to a full cleanup, but she doesn't know how long it will be.

Mark Sleger, project manager for GSC, could not be reached for comment.

Third-quarter housing numbers show slow but steady recovery

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Third-quarter numbers for 1992 show the Winchester real estate market is recovering well from the bust of the late —'80s. But the market will likely never repeat the boom of the mid —'80s, add local real estate officials.

The number of residential sales in Winchester in 1992 has already surpassed the total of 1991, according to the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. Last year, 189 houses were sold; 241 have been sold in 1992, with the fourth quarter numbers still to come in.

Ninety-seven houses were sold in the third quarter of this year, which ran from July to September. That is a 19.8 percent increase over the third quarter of 1991, in which 81 homes were sold.

Median home prices in 1992 are down slightly from last year, $221,000 to $214,000. However, third-quarter numbers in 1992 were up substantially from last year, $246,000 to $275,000, meaning the final median price for 1992 may eventually end up higher than last years' median price.

The average price for homes has gone up substantially this year from $272,678 in 1991 to $317,791. Don Coughlin, sales associate at Hunneman & Company — Coldwell Banker noted that average price is not as good a measurement as median price because the sale of expensive homes can throw the number off. Helen Babcock, vice-president of Carlson Real Estate, said this has been a successful year for selling houses at the upper end of the price range.

The continued availability of low interest rates has been the main catalyst for the rising number of home sales over the last two years, according to Babcock. Home buyers can take out a 30-year fixed mortgage at 8 — 8.5 percent.

Home sellers also received good news from the third-quarter report. The number of days on the market for single family homes has substantially dropped over the last few years. In 1990 the average number of days on the market for a home in Winchester hit a high of more than 100. In 1991 the number had gone just below 100, and this year it has dropped considerably to an average of 79 days on the market.

Part of the reason for the quicker sales, according to Babcock is that sellers are adjusting to the post real estate boom era. "Sellers are a lot more realistic ... Their houses are not going to sell unless they are priced competitively," said Babcock. Buyers are also adjusting to the recession, according to Babcock. "A lot of pent-up buyers came into the market this year," said Babcock.

While real estate companies are glad to see the housing market recover, no one is predicting that the market will be the same as it was in the mid-'80s. "We're not going to see what we saw in the mid-80s. Prices won't be going up in great leaps," said Babcock.

Most brokers see the next few years as a steady, yet slow, recovery. "I'm very optimistic about next year," said Coughlin. "Interest rates are still doing well, and there is a high demand for housing in Winchester."

All the real estate officials said that the town of Winchester always draws a lot of interest on the housing market. Its small town aura, along with its proximity to Boston, make it one of the more desirable places to leave in the state.

The educational system in Winchester is also a major reason why many come to Winchester, according to several real estate brokers. "People always want to know about the school system. It's the biggest single factor in people relocating," said Babcock.

Residents work toward compromise

Residents with septic systems will receive an adjusted sewer bill, say town officials.

In response to an outcry following the posting of the first sewer bills to residents not connected to the municipal sewer, Selectmen voted 4-0 on Dec. 15 (Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt was not present) to charge these residents a flat $100 per year or $25 per quarter.

According to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, the payment was developed taking into consideration the population of Winchester and with input from the families concerned. By dividing the per capita costs among the 57 households on septic systems the payment would come to $145. The residents, according to Maurer, proposed a payment of $100 per year, which would generate a total of $5,700 annually.

A group of taxpayers brought their objections to the sewer billing to the Nov. 31 selectmen's meeting. At that meeting High Street resident Phillip Hollzman acted as a spokesman for the residents who questioned the decision, made at last fall's Town Meeting, to bill customers even though they do not have access to the sewage system. Hollzman agreed to meet with other residents and discuss alternatives to be brought up at the next selectmen's meeting. No objections were raised following the vote by selectmen to charge a flat fee.

"Our MWRA assessment is based on a variety of methods; some is based on effluent, but a big portion of the MWRA assessment is based on population, so whether a residence is connected to septic or not doesn't enter into it," said Maurer.

However, Maurer noted that the fee represented a compromise for both parties. Any resident affected should call the town manager's office to settle any billing questions, said Maurer.

"I made the case that I thought it was in part an issue of equity," said Selectman Peter VanAken. VanAken said the residents, though not connected to the water system, did benefit on services, however indirectly.

"I think their willingness to make a payment is laudable," said Selectman Stephen Powers.

Were you or your kids at the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony on Dec. 3 ? Have you been shopping in the Center or at local malls? Does your house have a Christmas light display outside? Maybe your house was covered with tree limbs on Dec. 13. If so, you may be one of the many stars of the series premiere that airs this coming Wednesday.

Included are interviews and highlights from the Tree Ceremony on Dec. 3, as well as a Christmas video of local holiday displays. Also included is an interview with a local business owner on the season and how the economy has affected holiday shopping. Finally, numerous reports from around Winchester after the big snow storm of Dec. 13.

It's not too late to express holiday sentiments

Those, who have waited till now to mail their holiday cards and gifts can still get them there before Christmas by using priority or express mail.

Priority mail offers two-day service at very reasonable rates.

To send a two-pound priority mail package costs $2.90, a three pound parcel costs $4.10, four pounds $4.65 and five pounds $5.45. for parcels over five pounds the rate varies according to the destination zone.

Chairmen go it alone in upcoming elections

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The upcoming town elections promise to be interesting as the chairmen of the town's two major boards — the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen — will both be up for reelection.

Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt, now serving his second term, and School Committee Chairman Mark Lombardi, serving his first term, will both be up for reelection in March should they decide to run.

Both the School Committee and the Board of Selectmen have five members who serve three-year terms. Every year, one-third of the seats on the boards are up for election. This year's election is special in that only one member from each board is up for reelection, and they are both chairmen.

Both Lombardi and Schmitt told the Star that they would not make a final decision until after Jan. 1 as to whether they will run for reelection. "I'm going to wait until the beginning of next year (before deciding). With the holidays and the new child, I haven't had time to give it a lot of thought," said Lombardi. Schmitt also said he would make his decision shortly after the first of the year. Nomination papers are available after the new year.

Lombardi was first elected to the School Committee in 1990 and was unanimously voted chairman after last year's March elections. Under Lombardi's chairmanship, the School Department last year had it triumphs and frustrations. Although being chairman brings added power, it also brings added accountability for Lombardi and Schmitt.

If challenged in March, Lombardi will face questions about the resignation of Superintendent Charles Mitsakos, who had held the position for eight years; the implementation of a major redistricting plan, which some claim did not answer the problems that forced the redistricting in the first place; and the constant battle to balance the School Department budget, including having to appeal to the Finance Committee for money from the reserve fund in order to fill a budget shortfall with only a month left in Fiscal Year 1992. Many of these situations were inevitable, so the answer voters will look for is how successful was Lombardi when these situations arose during the year.

Lombardi could benefit from committee member Constance Makhoul's statement that she will not seek reelection in 1994. Some potential candidates may find it worthwhile to wait a year to run for an open seat rather than try to replace an incumbent chairman.

Lombardi, who had served on the Finance Committee, won the election in 1990 by beating incumbent William Jervey.

Schmitt has a record twice as long as Lombardi's to debate with any opponents he might face, having first been elected in 1987. The end of his term this March closely mirrors his reelection bid in 1990. In that election also, Schmitt was the chairman of the selectmen and was holding the only seat up for election.

The Board of Selectmen's agenda under the chairmanship of Thomas Schmitt has focused on the town's water system, legal cases, and recycling questions — issues perhaps not as emotional as the school's issues, but important issues nonetheless.

Schmitt defended his seat in a tough battle against Ann Matarese in 1990. The focus of that election was a Prop 2 1/2 override question. The race was closer than expected, in part because of Schmitt's support for the override, which was rejected by the voters.

Schmitt first captured a seat on the Board of Selectmen when he beat out Stephen Powers, now a colleague on the board, by 150 votes. The incumbent at that time, Wade Welch, had decided not to run for reelection.

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, a non-profit agency, responds to an average of one fire per day in the greater Boston area. Red Cross Disaster volunteers, on-call every day, 24 hours a day, help 1400 families each year. 7 out of 10 fire victims assisted by Red Cross are from urban areas in Boston and surrounding cities. Red Cross annually spends over $350,000 in local disaster relief.

In response to these fires and an increased awareness about fire safety, Red Cross encourages all residents to plan and get ready to handle a fire emergency. Preparing yourself and your family can save lives and property. The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay is a valuable resource to help prepare for and cope with fire emergencies and to learn what safety measures to apply when fire happens.

SENIOR NEWS

FROM THE JENKS CENTER

Celebrating the season at the Jenks Center

by MARY KELLY
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

As the Christmas season advances, the celebrations continue at the Jenks Center. On Dec. 9, the Winchester Seniors Association's annual Christmas party was held. There were songs, gifts, Santa Claus, refreshments, friends and entertainment. The Winchester High School Orchestra, under the direction of Conductor John McCann on Dec. 9, and the McCall Middle School seventh and eighth grade orchestra, also conducted by McCann, on Dec. 11, delighted seniors with their presentations of classical and traditional music. A special Christmas prime rib dinner was held on Friday, Dec. 11, after the Middle School Orchestra concert.

Linda Preston and Linda Ray, teachers at the Ambrose School, will bring their kindergarten class to the Jenks Center for its third annual Christmas visit on Friday, Dec. 18. Seniors are urged to sign up for lunch and enjoy the children's songs and entertainment which will be presented at 11:30 a.m. Remember, those who wish to stay for lunch at noon must sign up beforehand. However, it is not necessary to have lunch in order to come and enjoy the children's presentation.

The Aberjona A Cappella Women's Ensemble will entertain on Monday, Dec. 21. This group is Winchester based and takes its name from the Aberjona River that runs through town. They have performed throughout the region and they will be singing for the seniors at 12:15 p.m., immediately following Eating Together. The group is composed of Debra Basile, Kate Conley, Margo Sprague, Barbara Talcott, Sarah Thayer, Jeanne Thomases, and Ellen Wilson. Their program will consist of "The Coventry Carol," "Good King Kong," "The 12 Days of Christmas," "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," "Pat-a-Pan" and "The Wexford Carol."

Larry Zuk and his Swinging Seniors will present their own brand of music and entertainment, especially designed for seniors, on Wednesday, Dec. 23, from 10 a.m. to noon. Those who wish to stay for lunch must make reservations on Tuesday, Dec. 22, by 11 a.m.

Come to the movies at the Jenks Center

A special treat is planned for Wednesday, Dec. 30, at 1 p.m. The musical "Guys and Dolls" will be shown at the Jenks Center. This singing, dancing and fun-packed movie starred Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Jean Simmons and Vivian Blaine. There is no charge for the showing.

Help for special low income Medicare beneficiaries

A new benefit for low income Medicare beneficiaries will become effective in January. To qualify for the new benefit as a special low-income Medicare beneficiary (SLMB), a beneficiary must be entitled to Medicare Part A, have resources under $4,000 for an individual, or $6,000 for a couple, and have income at or below 110 percent of the federal poverty level ($7,491 in 1992).

If an individual qualifies as a SLMB, the state will pay the individual's Part B Medicare premium. The monthly premium for 1993 will be $36.60.

Interested individuals who believe they qualify for this benefit should contact their local state welfare office beginning in January to file an application.

Pictured above is Bob Lake, one of the drivers of the Senior Van which transports seniors three times a week to the Eating Together programs at the Jenks Senior Center. This service is furnished by the Armstrong Ambulance Service, through the generosity of the Salter family, on two of those days each week. For the enjoyment of his passengers, Lake has adorned the van with seasonal decorations.

H. 5721, the "Hearing Aid Bill"

The Massachusetts Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing advises that there is a "Hearing Aid Bill" in the state legislature right now which is very important to older people. H. 5721 is important because hearing aid dispensing is the only health care related service in Massachusetts for which state licensure and standards of practice do not exist; and consumers too frequently experience fraud, poor fitting, financial exploitation and lack of satisfaction when attempting to purchase hearing aids in Massachusetts. One out of 10 people in the United States has a hearing loss; and the elderly population represents a very high proportion of persons in need of hearing aids.

The commission states that, although a bill has been filed with the legislature for the past three years, nothing has been enacted into law. While legislators and lobbyists argue over the proposed bill, consumers remain unprotected. To express concern, seniors are encouraged to contact their individual representative to support H. 5721, and contact their individual senator to support H. 5721 when it gets to the Senate and pass it this year.

Your rights under Medicare law

Joan Butler-West, executive director of Minuteman Home Care, in a monthly question and answer column, poses the following question of interest to seniors:

Q. "I'm having surgery next month. Will I be sent home from the hospital too soon? What are my rights under Medicare?"

A. Under Medicare law, when seniors are admitted to a hospital, they must be given written information about their rights to medical care. Medicare recipients must ask the hospital to give them or their family a copy of "An Important Message from Medicare," which explains their rights as a hospital patient and informs how to contact the Peer Review Organization (PRO) in Massachusetts. The PRO is a group of doctors and health care professionals who review hospital patients' need for care.

Those who believe they are being forced to leave the hospital too soon can ask for a written "Notice of Non-Coverage." This notice will explain how they can appeal the decision to discharge them from the hospital and their appeal rights to the PRO. Patients contacting the MassPRO within 24 hours of receiving their denial notice will not be financially liable for any hospital charges until the PRO informs them in writing of its decision on their appeal.

For more information about medical rights, or how to handle a Medicare appeal, call the MassPRO at 1-800-252-5533 or the Medicare Advocacy Project at 1-800-323-3205.

LIBRARY LINES

By Richard Welton
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

Library to adopt six-day schedule starting on Jan. 25

For the first time since the Fall of 1989, the Winchester Public Library will soon be open six days a week. As of Jan. 25, the Library hours will be as follows: Monday and Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Wednesday, 1:30 to 9 p.m.; Thursday and Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; closed Sunday. The Children's Room hours will be: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Wednesday, 1:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; closed Sunday.

The new schedule is designed to be more convenient for all patrons, but should be especially helpful for students. Although the total number of hours remains the same, the library has been able to increase the number of days that it is open by redistributing them differently throughout the week, opening at times which are most convenient for the public, and remaining closed at slower times.

Learning to use the public access catalog: lesson two: Searching for an Author

To search for works by a particular author, you first have to tell the computer that you are searching for an author. One way is to press the preset "author" button on the keyboard. The computer will respond as follows:

Enter author:

Simply type in the author's name in the following format: last name, space, first name. For example:

Enter author: dickens charles (return)

Press the "return" or "enter" to see a list of holdings.

Instead of using the preset buttons, you can indicate an author search by using "a" with an "equals" sign. For example adickens charles (return)

If you are not sure of the author's exact name, try shortening the name.

ahemingwa (return)

That's enough for now. We will learn more about the author search next time. Until then, many happy "returns."

Friends of the Library to present speakers in January

Richard Lederer was elected 1989-1990 International Punster Of The Year by the International Save The Pun Foundation. He is also the Grammar Grappler for Writer's Digest. His wit has appeared in the New York Times, the New Yorker, People and other publications.

David Smith, a longtime educator at Shady Hill and winner of the U.S. Department of Education's "Breaking The Mold" award, will present the lecture "Mapping The World By Heart," at Winchester High School on Jan. 31, at 3 p.m. He presents a hands-on workshop for young and old alike.

Tickets to the lectures are $5 for each lecture, or $8 for both lectures. They are available at Book Ends, Henderson's, and at the Library.

For information, call 729-1346.

Vaccinate your pets

We've all known for a long time that rabies has been ineluctably working its way into and through Massachusetts. Until now, however, the nearest reported case was in Fitchburg, where a cat was recently infected by a rabid raccoon. The discovery of at least two rabid raccoons in Belmont is the first time the disease has been reported in the west suburban Boston area, and indicative of how fast rabies is spreading.

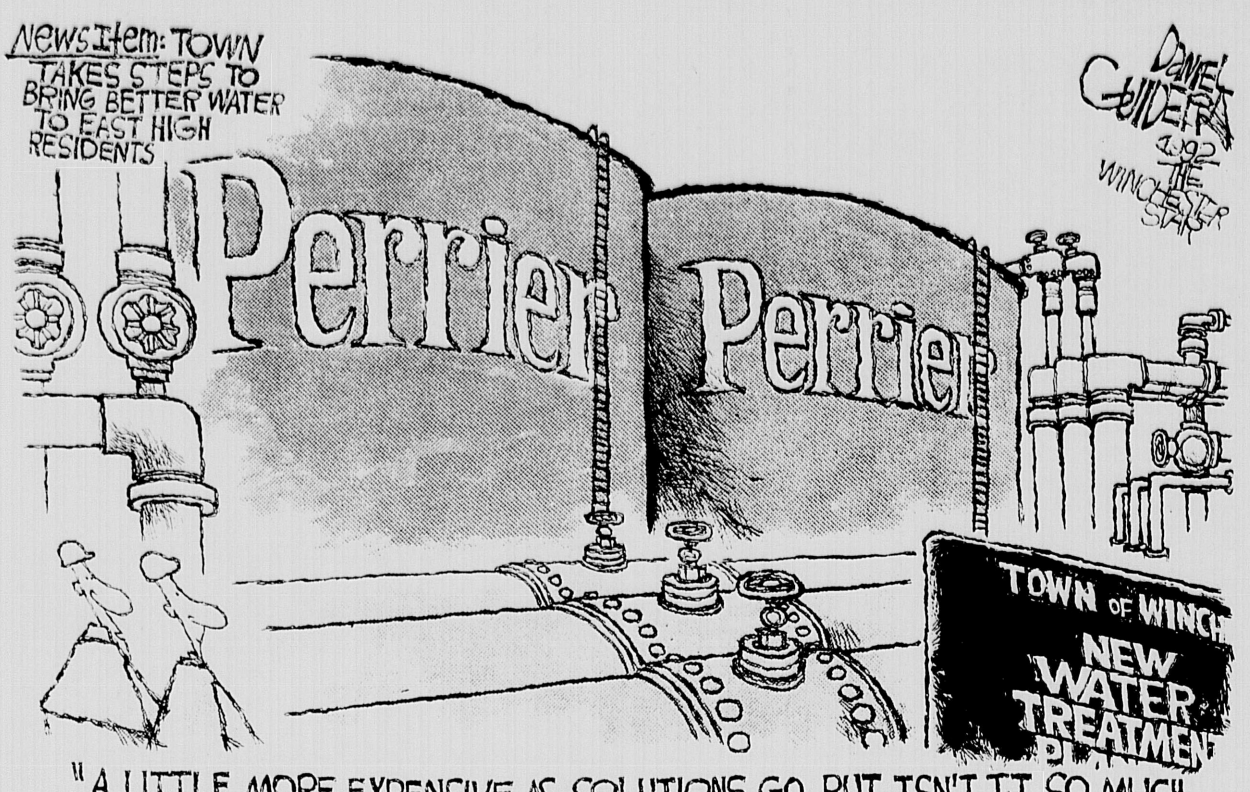

The Health Department has moved into top gear in dealing with the problem, working with the Police Department to protect residents. It is also informing residents of the dangers and how to address them. However, no amount of good advice or hard work from town officials will protect residents who fail to heed the Health Department's warnings.

The medical facts are simple: untreated, rabies is nearly always fatal; but if a case is treated early enough, a cure is almost certain. But who wants to wait and see if they can be cured? In this instance, the old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is apposite.

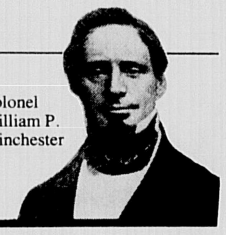

Residents should take every step possible to protect themselves, their children and their pets.

The most important single precaution, state and town health officials agree, is to have your dog or cat vaccinated against rabies. Quite simply, pets are far more likely to interact with rabid animals than their owners, and are a prime vector for passing the disease to humans. Anyone who fails to vaccinate their pet is putting at greater risk both themselves and anyone else who comes into contact with the pet.

As health officials have stressed, residents should not panic. But they must be aware of the dangers, and modify their behaviour accordingly. Failure to do so is foolhardy in the extreme.

A Carol for The Fortnightly

On Dec. 19, Winchester's venerable Fortnightly Club will celebrate its 111th birthday — less than a week prior to its traditional Christmas Eve carol sing.

To those not so well versed in town affairs it might appear that the seasonal warblings on the Common are the singular raison d'etre of the club.

Not so — and since 1881 the women of The Fortnightly have been concerned not only with improving and elevating themselves both mentally and physically — but have existed, in the words of part of their charge, "for the elevation of the community."

This they have done more than admirably and the list of accomplishments is long and proud.

The club over many years has been responsible for establishing a visiting nurse association; for sponsoring physical and manual training in town — long before their inclusion in the cirriculm of Winchester Schools; for impetus in the formation of The Studio Guild; for setting up an evening school to help adults and foreign born improve themselves; for reorganizing the Winchester Historical Society and for awarding scholarships to deserving Winchester students.

Old timers may remember that the Visiting Nurse Association, prompted by The Fortnightly so many years ago, was directly responsible for the founding of the original Winchester Hospital back in 1912.

The original hospital building, the former home of the Todd family, stands today partway up the hill between Lincoln Street and Governors Avenue - and is once again a private residence.

The Fortnightly was also extremely active during the local war efforts bringing relief during World Wars one and two.

And innumerable instances have seen members of The Fortnightly support many political issues which have added greatly to the quality of daily life in Winchester.

This then is our personal carol to The Fortnightly for its unselfish support of Winchester these 111 years!

And yes — once again on Christmas Eve, Fortnightly members will dash about the chilly Common handing out carol sheets, as a brass quartette and citizens "of voice" will carol our town into a renewed commitment of peace on earth, goodwill toward men.

Holiday greetings and a year-end recap

GUEST COLUMNIST

By Terry Marotta

Yo! A novel idea: The Marottas try getting the holiday greeting out a couple of weeks BEFORE the holiday rather than a couple of weeks after. Well, '92 has been good to us, take it all around. Our youngest is still a comedian. Standing before his second-grade class last year to give his name and present his invention, he began by saying, "My name is Michael, and I'm an alcoholic." He also told a carful of 8-year-olds that his mother had her uterus removed (news to me). He loves Nintendo, wrestling with his borrowed big brothers, and wearing his clothes in new and fanciful ways (ask him to do his napkin-folding imitation and see him slip one sleeve off his shoulder, run it under his crotch and fashion a tight little sling of a creation.) He's fun, in short.

Annie's fun too, but the big news on her is that she finally grew; shot up six inches in six months; has just passed Carrie and me both on her way up. She looks forward to having her braces pried off by New Years. The orthodontist keeps asking her if she plays soccer? Field hockey? Basketball? "I don't play sports," she finally told him. "I think sweating is bad for you." She's still writing: a children's story last spring and more recently a dark Poe-like tale in which the mean girls get turned to stone in the final scene. She got into the big play this year too; came home and said "I got the part I wanted! I'm the Bystander!" (God bless her.)

Back in June when Carrie decided she wanted to pierce her nose, her friend's surgeon-dad, fearing a safety pin job, offered to do it for her. He sat us down and explained how a hole will "epithelialize", which means that that which was once an opening in the skin — a wound — will, in time, become a perfect skin-lined tunnel and a permanent part of one's being. Then he pulled on his gloves and did the deed. Around the same time, she began to feel she wanted to change schools. She's at Commonwealth now, where she rows crew and seeks to advance, inch by tricky Latin inch, across that obstacle course known as the Confessions of St. Augustine.

Moving to the graftings-on to this family tree, Rob lived with us for all of last year, worked six days a week, helped coach the high school wrestling team he once captained and applied to Springfield College, where he studies now under a full scholarship. It seems such a long time since he and Dodson were ABC students together. Dodson is still at R.P.I., is an active member of his smart-kids fraternity (of course at Rensselaer, everyone is a smart kid), and made the Dean's List himself last semester.

We have more honorary family members in various friends of the kids, especially John, Gary, Susan and Alden. Recently, we went to see "The Secret Garden": Carrie in her nose ring, Alden in a Hillary-style pageboy and Carrie's leather bomber jacket with the human bite mark in the arm; Susan in a man's topcoat and combat boots; me in my fur made of the many small animals (someone has to uphold the tradition of evening theatre); and John in his purple hair and tatoos, his spiked leather jacket, a pair of Carrie's pantyhose and ... a simple black dress. Nobody stared at us exactly, except small children and dogs, at least not during the play. But the Bruins fans who got on the subway at North Station afterward were another story: a gang of beer-filled youngish men, who, as we walked to our car (I between the two parties by about 50 feet) began warming up for some real harassment. It seemed a good time to drop back to where they were. "Hey, guys. They're just kids," I said from deep in my small animals. "WHOA!" "JEEZ!" "FREAKS!", they said in response, and finally, "Do you know them?" "I'm their mother," I allowed. Then we all had a good laugh.

That about tells it. Our black cat Flicker gained even more weight and now looks like an oil spill. The Dad, consulted just now for his update, says to say he slept all year except for about three weeks in the summer. Apart from that, the news from us two is that we worked at our jobs and fixed the toilets when they broke. By now we have holes in our hearts big enough to drive trucks through on account of this gang of ours. Luckily, they've epithelialized.

Hope all your holes do the same. And happy holidays!

GUEST COLUMNIST

BY Peter Haley

I last wrote for this newspaper in 1976, the year of my graduation from high school. Since that time I have lived in New Jersey, Chicago, San Francisco, Brighton and, for the last six years, Cambridge. I returned to Winchester in July of this year, 16 years later.

Outwardly, a drive down Main Street reveals only that someone turned the supermarket sideways, replaced a movie theater with a bank and for some reason the Golden Gloves boxing champion of Harvard has his own office. Generally, there seems to be more brick.

I did not set out to return to Winchester, and until last Wednesday was unsure exactly why I did. Last Wednesday, I attended the funeral of Jacqualin Heffernan.

Mrs. Heffernan was the mother of three sons and one daughter. I was a classmate of her youngest son. It seems improbable to me, however, that anyone between the age of 30 and 40 who grew up in Winchester, or anyone with children of that age, would not have known her. Like many mothers, she was a constant chauffeur, cheerleader, cook, guidance counselor and bottle washer. She smiled almost always, was never afraid to laugh at herself and always had a kind word. At her funeral I learned that she was born in Evanston, Illi., the town in which I attended college, that she was a convert to Catholicism, and that she liked the lyrics to "West Side Story," although I am told that had I spent anytime in her car I would have picked up on that last fact. At the end of Mass, my friend spoke of his mother to a crowded church in a strong and clear voice, he spoke of her greatest quality, a love and concern for others beyond herself.

In the spring of this year I sought out Mrs. Heffernan in her latest role as real estate broker. The day of the closing, the last day I was to speak with her, her last words to me were "Welcome to Winchester." Those words struck me as kind of funny at the time as I had grown up in Winchester and in many ways was not new to the town. As I drove back to work (wondering like most how I would ever pay for the house I had just bought and if I could ever remain employed for thirty years) it occurred to me that Mrs. Heffernan and I now would be again members of the same community, that I would be raising my children and living my adult life in the same town that she had chosen.

Last Wednesday, as I listened to her friends, her children and her priest talk about her life I thought that perhaps by some outside measure Mrs. Heffernan may not have reached the very pinnacle of success in her life. But by the measures and standards of her community, her town, she could not have lived any greater life. She had a loving marriage, raised her children to be independent, honest and strong, gave freely of herself to others and was always and unfailingly kind. The deep affection which others had for her was evident by number and emotion of those surrounding her family. That she was the best a town had to offer was not lost on anyone present.

It is said that a society can be judged by those it chooses to honor, by those it holds out to others as a standard, a guide to what is good. As a community Winchester could not have any greater standard than Jacqualin Heffernan.

The characters in "West Side Story" sing hopefully of there being a better place out there for them, a place for you and me. Winchester I think was such a place for Mrs. Heffernan, and it is a place for me.

ON THE RECORD

Selectman William O'Leary responded to criticism in a recent letter to the editor regarding the lack of a town response to a car found in the South Reservoir with a swastika carved on its hood. The letter writer characterized the response from the Board of Selectmen as blatant disregard for the anti-Semitic nature of the incident. O'Leary said his remarks came before a full police report was made available, and he was not aware of the swastika on the hood. "As of right now the incident is still under investigation," said O'Leary. "We are taking the incident very seriously," he said.

Selectmen appointed John Shawcross to the Water Review Committee. As a civil engineer Shawcross was able to show selectmen a lot of direct experience with water supply treatment plants, a hot topic in town these days. Shawcross also spent six years on the Conservation Commission and is no stranger to the town hall meeting rooms. "I think this would require a nice synthesis of my background and my interests," said Shawcross.

The conservation commissioners may be interested in the 9.02 acres of land that was formerly the Sanborne House. The land, located next to the Ambrose school, was recently turned over to the jurisdiction of the Board of Selectmen by the School Committee. There has been some discussion of turning the land into a housing complex but the commissioners said they would like to see the land preserved as parkland. Conservation Commission Chairman Joshua Alper admitted that it is "great housing land" and that there is "perhaps not a lot of interest in preserving the open space." In light of the recent major snowstorm, though, Alper did add, "It's just about the last really good open sledding space in town."

Trying to fill all the many committees in town is not always an easy process. The time away from home and the information to be studied and digested sometimes seems onerous, even if it is a worthy cause. In trying to appoint a member to the town's new water review committee, the conservation commissioners couldn't find a member at their last meeting who was willing or able to accept the opening on the water committee, so they turned to absent commissioner Andrew Hogeland. For the record, Hogeland accepted the position. The commission resoundingly accepted the motion to appoint Hogeland.

Borggaard questions keeping Wedge Pond closed for the year

To the editor:

In my last letter I mentioned that I wanted to see Wedge Pond re-opened this summer so that little Winchester kids could have a centrally located place where they could learn to swim. In my opinion, Wedge Pond is that place. It is a body of fresh water comprising about 50 acres in extent, located almost in the center of town to which little kids could walk or ride their bicycles.

I understand that much if not most of the water in this pond, especially during the hot summer (swimming) weather, wells up from springs on the bottom near the bathing area. This water comes down from Horn Pond, just across the line in Woburn.

To me, Wedge Pond is a beautiful place. It has green lawns and wooded hills on the north, wide sandy beach area and tennis courts on the west, more wooded hills and dwelling houses on the south, and, last, but by no means least, Elliott Park, on Main Street, on the east. This park was named for Alfred Elliott, one of the most popular people who ever lived in Winchester.

Of course, I am well aware of the fact that many good people in Winchester say that Wedge Pond is a "mud hole". And what do I say to that?. Good question — I agree with them whole heartedly. They are absolutely right!

It so happens however, that all bodies of fresh water in New England, big and small, lakes, ponds, yes, and even reservoirs here are deeply coated on the bottoms with mud washed down over the years by all the rills, brooks, and rivers coming down from the upland hills and mountains. Wedge Pond is no exception.

But should we abjure the rose because its roots are dirty?. Should we refuse to quench our thirst because the reservoir is lined with mud? (You would never believe me if I told you what was in the water that we had to drink once on a hot summer day out on the camino real — the main savanna — with the Marines in Santo Domingo in World War I.) Mud alone won't kill you, but it certainly does not taste good! For that matter, I think I would rather drink the water in Wedge Pond than any of the chlorinated water in the swimming pools at the boat club, the swimming club, or the Winchester Country Club: (to each his own!)

We have in Winchester a highly qualified and competant Board of Health. It is their duty and responsibility to determine whether or not the water at any given place is safe for swimming.

Year after year they certify the water at "Sandy Beach" at Mystic Lake, the water is the same water that we have at Wedge Pond. In all logic, if one can be certified, should not the other be as well.

As to my claim that Wedge Pond is a beautiful place, I feel certain that Mr. Arthur Griffin will agree with me. It so happens that one of his most popular pictures is the one of the sunset over Wedge Pond. He of all people should know a thing of beauty when he sees it!!

Yours for a speedy re-opening of Wedge Pond Beach

Nostaglia

The Bob — o — Link no longer sings
As hovering high on fluttering wings
He sent his crystal, tinkling sound
Down to his nestlings on the ground

The Eastern blue — Bird too , has gone
Only the memory lingers on
Of these two birds that used to play
So large a part of yesterday

Gone are the pastures where they flew
Gone are the apple orchards, too.
Both of these birds need open space
But houses and condos have taken their place.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 19 — Report No. 50
Massachusetts House and Senate
Dec. 7 - 11, 1992

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of Dec. 7 through 11. Also included are an update and prior roll call in the House and Senate on the escalating battle over a proposed constitutional amendment limiting the terms of elected officials. There were no important roll calls in the Senate last week.

EARLY RETIREMENT (H 6203) — House 104-24, rejected an amendment to an early retirement incentive bill. A provision of the bill eliminates the prohibition only for communities with an asset to liability ratio of at least 50 percent. Amendment supporters said the amendment simply requires retirement systems which are not in good shape to continue to "pay as you go." They said it will promote fiscal stability and insure the money is not used for other purposes and is there when employees need it. Opponents said the amendment guts a key section of the bill which is designed to encourage communities to pay off their debt and give them the flexibility to do so while freeing up cash to save jobs and maintain services. (A "yes" vote is for the amendment eliminating the prohibition only for certain communities. A "no" vote is against the amendment.)

Casey did not vote.

Term Limits Update

The battle intensified last week over an initiative petition proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the terms of constitutional officers, state legislators and members of the U.S. House of Representatives to 8 years and U.S. Senators to 12 years.

On Monday, supporters of the amendment asked the state's highest court to force the legislature to vote on the controversial issue. In the suit, Senate President Bill Bulger is named as the defendant and is accused of using parliamentary rulings to thwart a part of the state constitution which supporters contend requires lawmakers to vote on the petition. Supporters recently gathered some 72,000 signatures to bring the proposal before the legislature. In order to become part of the constitution, the measure needs the votes of 50 members this year, 50 in the 1993-1994 session and approval by voters on the 1994 ballot.

On May 13, the legislature voted to place the proposal at the end of the convention agenda after the Supreme Judicial Court was asked to rule on its constitutionality. The court later ruled that the proposed amendment did not violate the constitution.

Supporters claim they have the 50 votes necessary to give initial approval to the measure, but acknowledge they lack "the unanimous consent" required to immediately move it to the top of the agenda. This claim of 50 votes is probably valid in light of the fact that supporters mustered 81 votes in May against placing the matter at the end of the agenda. However, supporters also acknowledge that these 81 votes are short of the majority necessary to exercise their other option of moving 23 other proposals one by one to the end of the calender in order to bring the term limits proposal back to the top. Without the majority to do this, the legislative session is likely to end before the term limits proposal is acted upon, and supporters are now pinning their hopes on the court suit.

Proponents continue to charge the leadership with using its majority of House and Senate members to violate the will of the 72,000 signers and the intent of the constitution. Many opponents acknowledge they simply oppose the idea of term limits and are properly using the rules to prevent the matter from going on the ballot.

The vote on May 13 to place the proposal at the end of the calender was 106-81 in favor. The next constitutional convention is scheduled for Dec. 16. (A "yes" vote is for placing the term limits amendment at the end of the calender. A "no" vote is against placing it at the end of the calender).

Casey voted yes.

Sen. Charles Shannon voted no.

Thompson brings home Good Neighbors Award

Sandy Thompson was honored at the 35th Annual Good Neighbors Awards Luncheon in Boston on Dec. 9. The Good Neighbors Awards, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews and the Boston Herald, "honors unsung heroes and heroines who give of their time, talent, energy, creativity, and compassion to others in their community.

In June of 1971, a handful of Winchester residents took on the responsibility of renovating 2 Dix Street which was to become home to the students who would participate in Winchester's ABC Program. Thompson joined the original work crew and never left. Through the years, she has worked on the ABC Board on: community affairs, alumni affairs, personnel, student selection, and has twice served as president.

In 1989, after participating in a four-day workshop on "A Personal approach to multiculturalism" offered by VISIONS, Inc. of Cambridge, Thompson spearheaded the establishment of The Multicultural Network. The vision of the network is that of "building bridges" to encourage and empower individuals, families, schools and our community to recognize and appreciate diversity.

In 1990, Thompson helped establish The Multicultural Issues Group at Winchester High. This pilot project trained a core group of students in developing awareness about the roots of bias, prejudice and discrimination. These young people are learning to recognize and confront "isms" of: race, class, age, sex, religion, physical or mental disability.

Realizing the important role of teachers and staff, she submitted a grant proposal that resulted in funding for three multicultural workshops, this year, for personnel at the elementary, middle school and high school levels. In October, Thompson arranged for VISIONS, Inc. to facilitate second Multicultural Workshop for interested Winchester residents. On Halloween, citizens called her after discovering racist graffiti in town. She responded by organizing a community forum on racism and anti-semitism that was attended by more than 50 people on Nov. 30.

Through selfless giving, tireless energy, and contagious motivation, Sandy Thompson has become the linchpin of Winchester's effort to recognize and value diversity. Being selected a grand award winner from an impressive group of nominees, The National Conference recognizes Thompson as a person "whose contribution to her community has helped further goals of the National Conference: opposing bias, bigotry and racism in their many manifestations and promoting understanding and respect among all races, cultures and religions." The award honors Thompson as one who has "made a difference both through direct service to individuals and through work for institutional change to foster a more inclusive community for us all."

weekend removing fallen tree limbs from the streets and plowing the snow. "There was extensive tree damage because of the high winds and the wet snow," said DPW Director Anthony Celli.

Monday morning's commute was smooth after DPW crews cleared the streets on Saturday and Sunday. Many sidewalks, however, were not cleared until Monday morning.

Celli said the department has not yet tabulated the cost of the snow removal. "There was a good amount of overtime all day Saturday and Sunday. A weekend storm is more expensive than a weekday storm," said Celli.

The Fire Department was also working around the clock to investigate downed wires and clean off hydrants in case of a fire. Firefighters responded to dozens of downed wires throughout the weekend. Firefighters were also called on Dec. 12 to Winchester Place for a man who was stuck in an elevator after the power went down. The man was extricated from the elevator after an hour when power was restored.

The snowstorm also closed down Winchester schools on Monday because sidewalks were not yet cleared. "I was told Sunday night that they would clean the sidewalks Monday morning, but they couldn't guarantee that they would be ready for the opening of school," said acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer praised the Fire and Police Departments and the DPW for their efforts throughout the storm. "The storm did create some problems, lots of wires down as well as snowfall. I applaud the efforts everyone put in solving the problems," said Maurer.

opinion that they can't have a variety of standards to evaluate. Some communities pay on actual tonnage, while others pay on their G.A.T. or guaranteed annual tonnage," said Maurer.

Selectman Gerard Polcari said considering how the debt gets paid remains a secondary issue until the first problem is resolved.

O'Leary took it one step further. "This is a legal problem now. If there is any flexibility left as to what possible avenue the town will take, it's going to depend on our review of it and not any response from NESWC," added O'Leary.

Polcari was asked to attend several NESWC meetings and report back to the board. "I think the board should appoint someone to the board beside Mr. Barker. I'm not suggesting that Mr. Barker can't handle it, but this is getting more legal everyday," said Selectman Stephen Powers. Ed Barker acts as the town's representative to NESWC.

Town officials set policy

Rabies is a viral disease that attacks the central nervous system and is transmitted through a bite or a scratch. It is fatal if not treated.

At a conference announcing the new procedure, Perritano stressed that only raccoons suspected of carrying rabies will be shot. "For the most part, they're healthy ... We do not want to be called every time a raccoon is in a yard," said Perritano.

Residents with raccoons on their property that are a nuisance but are not rabid will have to call a licensed trapper if they want the raccoon captured. Raccoons captured by trappers are destroyed because it is illegal to capture a raccoon and move it to another area.

Perritano says he does not worry about police shooting healthy raccoons. "You can usually tell a healthy raccoon from a sick one," said Perritano.

Some rabid raccoons appear dazed, sick, and without coordination; others are vicious and extremely aggressive. According to reports, one infected raccoon in Belmont attacked an animal control officer.

Beside the influx of rabies into the state, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of raccoons. According to the state Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, there are 80 raccoons per square mile in Winchester.

Perritano said the raccoons are bold animals. "They have no fear ... They'll walk right into your house," he said. Another problem is that raccoons, usually nocturnal animals, are being spotted throughout the day.

Police will respond to calls from residents concerning rabid raccoons 24 hours a day. Either Tabbi or Canine Control Officer Gerard Smith will be called on to the scene in addition to police.

The state offers the following advice for dealing with raccoons:

Pets are the most likely bridge between raccoon rabies and people. Vaccinate your cats and dogs for rabies.

Feed pets indoors; do not leave pet food outside.

Raccoons are wild animals. Do not approach, handle, or feed them.

Secure garbage and trash in trash containers with tight fitting lids.

Cap chimneys with screens.

Seal openings in attics, basements, porches, and sheds.

If you come in contact with an animal that is rabid the following steps should be taken:

Wash the wound thoroughly with soap and water.

Seek medical attention immediately.

If possible, capture, kill, or confine the animal without damaging the head.

Contact the Board of Health at 721-7121.

Faith in tough times

said her voice was the first to call for help.

"I just got up one morning and said, 'I'm going to try the Salvation Army.' " They were low on food because they had to pay their rent, she said.

Now they go once a month to pick up a package of food — butter, bread, vegetables — "just a little something to help out," said Joe.

Denise and Joe are in good spirits, they say. They constantly interrupt each other to finish a sentence or tell a joke. Denise attributes much of her strength to faith — "faith in God, faith in knowing that things will turn out. We're about as low as we can go now. The only other way to go is up," she said.

They have applied for two financial assistance plans through the Salvation Army. One will help them with rent payments, the other, with buying Christmas presents.

The three kids "know that Christmas is not going to be the greatest this year," Joe said. "They don't pressure us to spend money," Denise adds. They are more concerned with their academic standards, she said. The daughter is off to study accounting at Newbury College in January, and both sons just brought home honor roll report cards.

"I always try to put the tree up on our (Dec. 15 wedding) anniversary. I'll just go get the tree, put it up and leave it there. We'll see what comes," said Denise.

Joe said besides needing a consistent income, he wants to go back to work just to get out of the house. Denise promptly agreed. "Sometimes maybe it's a little too much togetherness. He's always rustling through everything," she said.

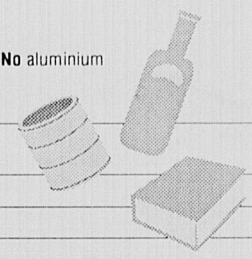

Joe laughed off Denise's assessment, and went on to describe the time he spends job hunting or visiting some friends. "Bonding," Denise quickly inserts.

Both agree things could be worse. And although they worry about losing their apartment after two months of not paying rent, their thoughts are more focused on a time when things will change.

Joe feels the change could be soon ... maybe, even as soon as a phone call from the MWRA.

AROUND TOWN

Stop and think before giving a pet for the holidays

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA) today recommended that people who may be considering buying a puppy or kitten as a Christmas gift, consider giving a shelter adoption gift certificate instead.

According to Joe Silva, director of the MSPCA's Shelter Program, many animals are received by animal shelters after the holidays when new pet owners realize they can't afford — or don't have time — for a pet. Some people who receive pets as gifts never wanted them in the first place. "By giving a shelter adoption gift certificate, the recipient can be involved in the process of choosing when to adopt an animal and the type of animal that will best fit their lifestyle," Silva said. Gift certificates allow people to adopt a pet when they are ready for that long-term commitment.

Silva also noted that the holidays are the most difficult time to bring home a new pet. "The holidays are so hectic that there is little time to train the pet and to help it adjust to its new surroundings," said Silva. By bringing the animal home well before or after the holidays, the whole family and pet have time to get to know each other and to start any necessary obedience training.

Gift certificates are available at most animal shelters, including the MSPCA's seven shelters located throughout the state. Many shelters also have adoption counselors available to provide prospective pet owners with advice and information about the adoption process and choosing the perfect animal companion.

The MSPCA also offers Pet Health Gift Certificates redeemable for services at all three of the MSPCA's animal hospitals in Boston, Springfield and on Nantucket Island.

For more information about Pet Adoption or Pet Health Gift Certificates, call the MSPCA's Boston Shelter at 522-5055 or the closest humane society.

The MSPCA also urged pet owners to consider the following holiday pet care reminders:

Holiday decorations, such as tinsel, lights, ornaments, and garland are tempting to some pets. Keep curious pets away from these decorations as well as brightly colored, but toxic seasonal plants such as mistletoe and holly. Animals that like to chew or eat any object should also be kept away from light cords and other hazardous materials. Supervise mischievous pets when home and keep them out of decorated rooms when they are alone.

Give pets nutritious snacks. Rich holiday foods — especially chocolate — can be hazardous for pets. Treats made especially for pets are more nutritious.

Select safe pet toys. Buy toys that do not have sharp edges or removable parts and can not be shredded or ingested.

Make travel plans with pets ahead of time. Find accommodations which allow pets by contacting the destination city's division of tourism. Remember to provide frequent rest and water stops and restrain pets while driving — either in a pet seat belt or carrier.

Always have current identification on your pet with an alternate phone number when you are away. If your pet is staying home, contact a reputable pet sitter or find a kennel that meets all necessary requirements for a quality establishment, such as a sanitary and safe environment and a qualified staff.

If there is no alternative to air travel, take precautions for your pet's safety. If possible, have your animal with you on the plane in a carrier. If in the cargo hold, select a carrier with proper ventilation on at least three sides and room to allow the animal to stand and turn around. Place your pet's favorite blanket in the carrier for warmth. Avoid the use of a muzzle during the flight. Make sure your pet has a thorough examination and clean bill of health prior to travel. Get direct flights and avoid flying on days that are extremely cold or hot. Consult your pet's veterinarian for information about all the risks involved when flying with your pet.

Note: Owners of short-faced breeds, such as pugs, Pekingese or boxers, or animals with heart or lung disease — are advised to use an alternate mode of transportation for their pet. Dogs with these characteristics have difficulty handling the rapid breathing associated with travel-induced stress.

For more information about holiday pet care, call the MSPCA at 522-7400.

Quitters in Motion at Winchester Hospital

Once they have given up smoking, ex-smokers often need extra support and encouragement to adjust to a new way of life. Many people find it hard to be around family and friends who are smokers, others look for advice from someone who has successfully quit.

"Quitters in Motion," offered by Winchester Hospital, is an ongoing support group for those who have quit or are trying to quit smoking. This group may be used in conjunction with the nicotine patch as a patch advantage program.

The group will meet from 7:30 - 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday evenings at the Winchester Hospital Health Promotion Center, and costs $7 at the door. For more information, call 932-8200.

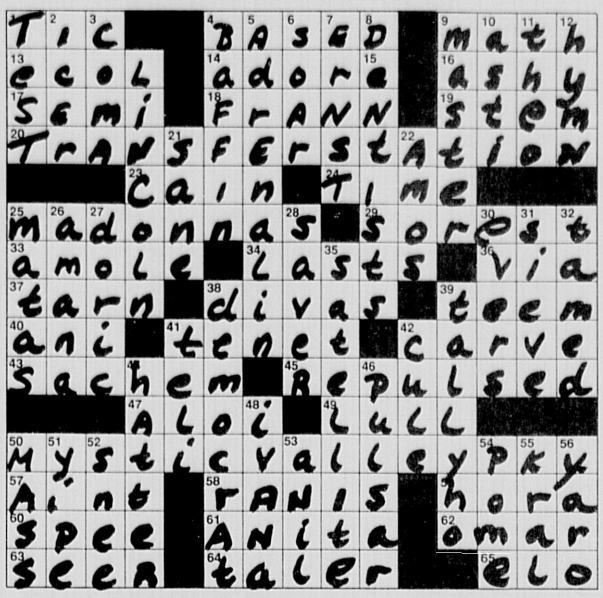

Breast feeding workshop at Winchester Hospital

The decision to breastfeed or bottle feed is a topic of importance to new parents. Winchester Hospital offers a workshop, helpful to parents-to-be, which provides accurate information on this subject.

The workshop provides a variety of information such as the pros and cons of breast feeding, self-help measures to prevent complications, routines for bottle and breast feeding and helpful hints to mothers who work outside of the home.

For dates and price information, call Winchester Hospital's Education Department at 756-2220.

WINCHESTER PEOPLE

Lyman is named development director of French Library of Boston

The French Library in Boston is pleased to announce the appointment of Polly Freeman Lyman of Winchester as director of development. Prior to joining the Library, Lyman was assistant to the director of public affairs of the Quebec delegation in New England and, most recently, was the head of "Say it in French!" cultural exchange consultants.

A former member of the Board of the Alliance Francaise, Lyman is a current trustee of the Boston/Strasbourg Sister City Association and is an enthusiastic participant in the jumelage between Winchester and St. Germain-en-Laye.

The French Library in Boston is a multi-faceted, nonprofit cultural organization devoted to promoting the language and culture of France and the Francophone world. In addition to an extensive collection of French books, magazines and cassettes, the Library offers language classes, film presentations, book discussions, lectures, art and photography exhibitions, concerts, translation and interpretation services, wine tastings, cooking demonstrations and children's events for the enjoyment and enrichment of all.

Founded in 1945 by Americans, The French Library has evolved from a one-room collection of 500 books to a notable international institution serving and educating the culturally diverse French-speaking and Francophile communities of New England.

McFarland is recognized National Distinguished Resident Award

The American Association of Women Radiologists presented Elizabeth Gerard McFarland, M.D., a senior resident in diagnostic radiology at Massachusetts General Hospital, with the 1992 National Distinguished Resident Award at the AAWR luncheon recently.

McFarland was chosen because she has been successful in three careers in her relatively short lifetime.

First, as an athlete, a springboard and platform diver, she was a U.S. National team member from 1979 to 1984. Her accomplishments included a silver medal in the 1980 U.S. National Platform Diving Championships and she was a finalist in the 1981 World Championship Team trials as well as the 1984 Olympic Team Trials.

Her academic success was achieved at the University of California-Irvine where she graduated magna cum laude. She was also a member of Phi Beta Kappa. McFarland attended the University of California-San Diego medical school where she completed her M.D. with honors in 1987.

Elizabeth Gerard McFarland

After graduating from medical school in 1987, she did her internship at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. Initially, she planned a career in internal medicine, specifically academic cardiology. But her interest in magnetic resonance imaging grew, and she decided to leave internal medicine and go into radiology.

She did a year clinical research fellowship in magnetic resonance imaging. She had previously done research that was musculoskeletally oriented because of her athletic interests and that had resulted in three first author publications.

McFarland's residency in radiology started at the Massachusetts General Hospital. She is now there in a GI/Interventional Radiology fellowship and continues her research in MRI with clinically applied work.

McFarland considers herself fortunate to have been associated with other people who stimulated her to do her best. "People like Bruce Rosen, M.D., whom I have done research with on bone marrow MR, Jack Whittenberg, M.D., the residency program director, and Peter Mueller, M.D., the head of GI radiology, are some of the people who have given me a lot of opportunity," she said.

Her husband, Steve, is a free lance broadcaster and worked for NBC in the 1988 and 1992 Olympic Games as the diving announcer. They became parents in March and live in Winchester. She considers her career as a wife and mother her "most fulfilling accomplishment."

Winchester resident Elizabeth Dahm was designated as a James Bowdoin Scholar at Bowdoin College.

Dahm was among 301 undergraduates accorded recognition for outstanding academic achievement during traditional James Bowdoin Day exercises Oct. 9. Dahm is a member of the class of 1994.

'Archifair' held at the Boston Architectural Center

On Saturday, Nov. 14, Adina Curreri from Winchester High School participated in "archifair," the first annual architectural fair for high school students, hosted by the Boston Architectural Center. Similar to a science fair in concept, "archifair" showcased architectural projects designed and brought in by high school students from the Greater Boston area.

Peter Jones

Daphne Oliver

"Archifair" featured a daylong program. After presenting their work, students participated in a typical studio class at the Boston Architectural Center, focusing on the history and theory of architecture. In the afternoon, entrants participated in a mini-charrette competition. Based on a design problem, students developed and built models on the spot. At the end of the day prizes were presented based on the work students had brought in as well as the work done in the competition. Adina Curreri won second prize.

The activities were intended to increase students' understanding of the ways in which architecture affects daily life and how the profession is studied and practiced, to help students and their teachers become aware of architecture as a career with many opportunities, and to discover, recognize and promote talent among high school students.

Ameri is Fellowship Initiate

Darius M. Ameri of Winchester is among a group of 1,520 Initiates from around the world became Fellows of the American College of Surgeons, the largest organization of surgeons in the world, at a convocation ceremony held during the College's 1992 Annual Clinical Congress in October.

Fellows of the College have earned the right to use the designation "F.A.C.S." (Fellow, American College of Surgeons) after their names, by meeting the College's stringent membership requirements. An applicant for Fellowship must be a graduate of an approved medical school; must have completed advanced training in one of the 13 surgical specialties recognized by the College; and must have been in practice in the same geographic location for at least two years at the time of his or her application.

Before admission into Fellowship, the surgeon must further demonstrate ethical conduct and good character, and his or her acceptance as a Fellow of the College must be approved by three-fourths of its Board of Regents.

The convocation ceremony was the highlight of the five-day Congress, which also included reports on research-in-progress, postgraduate courses, panel discussions, symposia, and scientific and industrial exhibits.

Total attendance at the Congress was nearly 17,000, including surgeons, members of various medical disciplines and members of the scientific and consumer media. Of the 1,520 Initiates who became Fellows, 1,448 were from the United States and Canada, and 72 were from other nations.

Organized in 1913, the American College of Surgeons is a scientific and educational association of surgeons committed to raising the standards of surgical practice and to improving the quality of care for the surgical patient.

In addition to its dedication to the ethical and competent practice of surgery, the College provides educational programs for its more than 52,000 Fellows, other physicians, and other health care professionals in this country and abroad, by establishing standards of practice, disseminating medical knowledge, and providing information to the general public.

Frank and Jean Privitera were named "Man and Woman of the Year" by the Knights of Don Orione. One-thousand well-wishers attended the charity gala which Connie Francis and comedian Henny Youngman entertained. The Priviteras are shown congratulating Connie Francis for her performance. See advertising insert for complete story and more photos.

Rosenberger is member of Men's Glee Club

Seth Rosenberger, son of Peter and Constance Rosenberger of Winchester and a graduate of Winchester High School, is a member of the Men's Glee Club at the University of Michigan.

The 133-year-old Glee Club, under the direction of Jerry Blackstone, is the oldest student-run organization on the University of Michigan campus, and the second-oldest collegiate chorus in the United States. Its members are chosen by audition and personal interview.

This spring, the group will tour the East Coast, giving concerts in Washington, Boston, New York City and Pittsburgh.

Colella was named instructor at Bunker Hill

Patricia H. Colella of Winchester has been named a communications instructor at Bunker Hill Community College in Charlestown. She has been an adjunct faculty member at the College for several years. Residents honored at George School

Winchester residents Jan Zeman and Jamie Wolzon, juniors at George School, a coeducational, Quaker secondary school in Newtown, Pa., have been named to the head of school's list and honor roll for the first term, 1992-93, the school's centennial year.

George School has established two ways to honor outstanding students. The head of school's list recognizes students who demonstrate five qualities to a high degree — commitment to excellence, effort, attitude, attendance and promptness. The academic honor roll acknowledges those who reach a high level of achievement in academics.

When a student is named to both lists, it is an indication of extraordinary accomplishment.

The Gables at Winchester sponsors lecture 'Treasures in your attic: old and rare books'

Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of the nationally-known Brattle Book Shop in Boston, will speak at an open lecture at 10:45 a.m., Thursday, Jan. 14, under the sponsorship of the Gables at Winchester, at The Gables, 299 Cambridge St., Winchester.

Gloss' talk is entitled, "Treasures in Your Attic: Old and Rare Books." "New England homes are treasure troves for old and rare books that have increased in value over the years," says Gloss, "and we're inviting those attending to bring any volumes they want to know about to the lecture for a free verbal appraisal."

The Brattle Book Shop is the successor to America's oldest continuously operating antiquarian book store. Kenneth Gloss succeeded his late father, George Gloss, a well-known figure both in Boston and in national antiquarian circles.

Christmas Eve Carolling on Common

This year marks the 70th anniversary of the Christmas Eve carolling on the Common under the auspices of The Fortnightly Women's Club.

Plan now to meet your friends and neighbors by the Christmas tree on the Common Thursday night, Dec. 24, at 7 p.m. and bring your bells, flashlights and youngsters.

Fred Murray, formerly of the Music Department of the Winchester Public Schools, will again be on hand to lead and accompany us as we join in singing the beautiful old Christmas hymns as well as "Jingle Bells" and "Rudolph."

Musicians, who play wind instruments, are invited to support the carollers and should check in with Fred about 10 minutes to seven.

Regardless of weather conditions, an estimated 200-250 townspeople will turn out to enjoy this community sing, a tradition unique to Winchester. Don't miss it!

January Lecture Series

Two delightful speakers, Richard Lederer and David Smith, are scheduled to head off the post-holiday January doldrums for weather-weary Winchesterites. Sponsored by Friends of the Winchester Public Library, admission is $5 each, or $8 if you wish to purchase both tickets at once, in advance.

Owner of Brattle Book Shop, Kenneth Gloss.

Richard Lederer, best-selling author of "Anguished English," "Get Thee to a Punnery," "Crazy English," "The Play of Words," and "The Miracle of Language," broadcasts regularly on radio channels across the country. Elected 1989-1990 International Punster of the Year by the International Save the Pun Foundation, Lederer's talks and workshops have been called "as much a performance as a presentation." Also the Grammar Grappler for "Writer's Digest," his work and wit have appeared in "The New York Times," "The New Yorker," and "People," among other recognized publications.

David Smith, a longtime educator at Shady Hill, and recipient of the "Breaking the Mold Award" by the U.S. Department of Education, gives us geography in his "Mapping the World by Heart" and the forthcoming "Profile Village." Termed a brilliantly educated, well-read, contemplative man with a versatile and powerful intellect," Smith conducts a hands-on workshop for young and old, for travelers, and for dreamers. According to enthusiastic reviewers on NBC's "Today Show" and in "Time," this dynamic lecturer gives you no less than the world.

Richard Lederer will speak on Sunday, Jan. 10, 1993 at 3 p.m.; David Smith will speak on Sunday, Jan. 31, 1993, also at 3 p.m. Both lectures will take place at Winchester High School Auditorium. Here's something you just can't bear not knowing.
Every year an estimated 5,000 to 7,000 infants in this country are born with cerebral palsy, permanent brain damage that usually occurs before, during, or shortly after birth. They will spend the rest of their lives learning to meet the challenges of a variety of disabilities affecting their ability to walk, use their hands, to hear, speak, or see.
There is no cure for cerebral palsy, but by avoiding tobacco, drugs and alcohol, mothers-to-be can dramatically reduce the risk of giving birth to a brain-damaged baby.
Whether you're pregnant now, or ever plan to have children, United Cerebral Palsy can provide you with vital facts on the importance of being healthy at the time of conception, and practicing proper prenatal care. You'll find them worth bearing in mind.

McCall Model United Nations convenes in spring

This spring McCall students will tackle some of the same urgent issues that face the real United Nations, as they form their own Model United Nations. Students in all grades will become clusters of delegates representing as many as 100 countries. Representatives from the sixth, seventh and eighth grades will form the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly while some eighth graders will constitute the Security Council.

Before the holidays, students will be assigned to countries and will begin researching characteristics of their country's government, culture and vital interests. With an understanding of the social, political and economic underpinnings of their country, delegates will take a position on several pre-selected issues such as, nuclear non-proliferation, overpopulation, the ozone shield or the rights of the child. The activity will culminate in the spring when various delegations to the United Nation will convene to wrestle with an issue and ultimately pass a resolution.

A faculty steering committee, chaired by Randee Martin, is gathering staff input and formulating plans for the Model UN "The recent UN action in Somalia has certainly highlighted the importance of the United Nations for our students. The Model United Nations (MUN) will encourage students to delve into the workings of the UN and their country, to assume the perspective of a country which may be very different from the United States and to present cogent arguments toward a peaceful resolution of an issue. Staff members will be advising delegations throughout the process and Principal Evander French will act as secretary general. Staff enthusiasm combined with research materials funded through the mini-grant from the Foundation for Educational Excellence will make this a worthwhile experience for McCall students."

McCall Model United Nations is off to a good start; Joyce Connery from the United Nations Association has begun introductory lectures with each class. Connery explains the structure and purpose of the UN and elicits comments from students about the possible roadblocks in negotiation. Students quickly compiled a list of possible trouble spots such as, different priorities, languages, religions, races and cultural practices from country to country.

Ambrose Elementary School students (from the kindergarten and the two/three split class) worked cooperatively on Wednesday morning, Dec. 2, to create spoons to donate to Project Bread in Boston. From left: Alison Julian, Robert Gulati, Rebecca Larson, Ted Lamson, Shelley Zmiri, Ashley Rogers, Ellen Feiss, Laura Daum, Ben Orlin, Matt Christian.

In the procession were Katrina Davidsson, Malin Sundquist, Carina Bork, Jenny Nilsson, Eva Lena Backe, Marianne Brolund, Petra Nordstrom and Helen and Paula Tagerud, along with Sven Tagerud and Mattias Olsson, a student who accompanied the singers on violin.

Lucia celebration at Ambrose

Students at the Ambrose School were treated to a taste of Swedish culture last Friday when members of the Swedish community presented the Lucia ceremony. Yael Tagerud, who moved here with her husband and two daughters about a year ago, explained the folk tradition which is always held on Dec. 13, the longest night of the year on the medieval calendar. A Lucia is chosen who, dressed in a white gown with a crown of lighted candles, leads a procession accompanied by white-clad attendants. The boys in the procession wear tall paper cones with stars on them and the girls wear glitter in their hair. Participants sing traditional Lucia carols and carry lighted candles.

Linda Jarnehag was the Lucia and told the audience that she brought a "message of light and love."

The group, made up of au pairs working in Winchester, was also hosted by the Unitarian church at their holiday party. Katrina Davidsson, one of the organizers, said, "Even if we are far away from home, it feels good to celebrate Lucia, and I think it is important to let other people learn about our cultures and traditions."

RECREATION NEWS

Upcoming programs for adults/children

Co-Ed Volleyball

Come enjoy a great game of volleyball! Teams will be formed by the participants to maximize the fun. Volleyball is held every Wednesday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. at Lynch School. Groups meet only when school is in session. Fee $2 per week.

Focus on Fitness

The aerobic fitness class, Focus on Fitness, developed and run by Judy Whitney and Gail LaRocca who are certified by the Exer-Safety, has added a new Pump and Step component to their program. Pump and Step is a circuit step training program that combines an aerobic workout with balanced muscle conditioning. The class begins with a brief group warm-up and 10 minutes of simple stepping patterns on Reebok Step. The program then moves into circuit training. Groups of steps are set up to form a pattern of stations.

Station-based exercise allows a student to focus on his/her body mechanics. Each cardio-conditioning station repeats a single stepping pattern, and each muscle-conditioning station works an isolated muscle group. You spend one minute at each of the eight stations and go around the circuit four times.

The instructor moves between stations to give individualized instructions while the class is in progress. Please call the Recreation Department at 721-7125 for more information.

Instructors Wanted

What's interesting, and fun to do at night or in the afternoon and can bring in a little money? Come share your talents with others by teaching a class for the Recreation and Community Education Department. We are in the process of putting together our Winter and Spring brochures and would like to include new ideas. We are especially interested in having instructors in the field of cooking and music for adults. Our children's program is always seeking new programs/events to offer the community.

Classes can be for fun or educationally stimulating. They can be for one session or several. The design and scope of the class is left to the individual instructor. Instructors do not have to be certified teachers, but should have a thorough knowledge of the subject matter. Class dates and time may be arranged to fit the instructor's schedule. Call or send a class outline to the Recreation Department at 721-7125.

The perfect gift for the Holidays

Are you having trouble finding the perfect gift for someone? The Recreation Department has two suggestions.

Our "Winchester" t-shirts and sweat shirts are disappearing fast. The prices have been dropped from $13 to $10 for T-shirts/nightshirts and sweat shirts have gone from $25 to $15. We have limited sizes available: small, large and XXL T-shirts are in stock, 10-12, 14-16 and medium are available in the sweat shirts. A beautifully drawn illustration of Winchester is depicted on both front and back of all garments. Shirts are on sale at the Recreation Department and at Topsy Turvy. Don't wait until they're sold out, buy one today!

The Recreation Department also has gift certificates available in any denomination for purchase. Imagine how nice it would be to receive a free session of aerobics or a tennis pass from someone this season. Certificates can be used toward any Recreation Department activity and are available at the Recreation Department.

Skating lessons for Adults and children

Always wanted to learn to skate but never had the time? Join the Recreation Department this winter in our learn to skate program. Open to all ages and all abilities and held on Sunday afternoons from noon to one p.m. Lace up your skates, enjoy the winter, and keep active. Skating sessions consist of a 25 minute lesson and a 25 minute practice time. All instructors are professionals specializing in group lessons and are part of the Bay State Ice Skating School. Beginner, intermediate, and advanced skills are taught. You may use figure or hockey skates.

Students are grouped according to their skating ability and their age. Helmets are recommended for all beginners. All seven sessions will be at the Flynn Rink in Medford. For more information or to register, look in the new Winter brochure that will be mailed out between Christmas and New Year's. Call the Recreation Department at 721-7125 for more information.

The Treble Chorus of New England presents Christmas in New England

Join The Treble Chorus of New England for two celebratory holiday concerts, "Christmas in New England," on Saturday, Dec. 19, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday afternoon, Dec. 20, at 4 p.m. Both performances will be at the Methuen Memorial Music Hall, 182 Broadway, Methuen.

Marie Stultz will lead the Treble Chorus of New England in "My Dancing Day," by John Rutter, "Missa Brevis in D," by Britten, "A Suite on Christmas Spirituals," majestic English carols by Vaughan Williams, Walton and Willcocks and special arrangements she has written. The audience will have an opportunity to raise voices in song and join the children in many carols. Featured guest artist is Marcus DeLoach of Andover, winner of the 1992 Presidential Award given by the National Association for the Advancement of the Arts who is currently studying opera at the New England Conservatory.

The Treble Chorus of New England recently returned from an engagement at Harrods in London. They were recommended by the Massachusetts Tourist Agency with the support of the Massachusetts Tourism Council to be Cultural Ambassadors from the six New England states. Earlier in the month they joined the Boston Cecilia to celebrate the holiday season with two performances in Boston. The Treble Chorus made its international debut in the summer of 1992, singing at both the Shrewsbury Festival in Shrewsbury, England, and at London's St. Martin-in-the Fields.

The Treble Chorus of New England's concert schedule has included performances at Symphony Hall, the Boston Conservatory, the New England Conservatory and Great Woods. The chorus and child soloists have sung for Seiji Ozawa, Michael Tilson Thomas, major opera companies and symphony orchestras throughout the United States. Twenty boys made their singing and acting debuts this fall in Paramount Pictures feature film "School Ties," and members appeared recently in the Boston Lyric Opera's "La Boheme."

The Treble Chorus of New England is conducted by the Artistic Director, Marie Stultz of North Reading, composer, conductor and noted music educator. She edits the Treble Chorus of New England Choral Series, sacred and secular classics and new works for treble voices. Published this fall was her "Ode to Shelly" and "Song of Solomon" by Morning Star Music Publishers of St. Louis. "Training Your Children's Choir, A Guideline to Artistic Choral Singing" will be published in 1993. Stultz is a graduate of Southern Methodist University with both bachelor's and master's degrees in music, and has studied with John Heiss, Anthony Milner and Robert Sirota. With Mira Music she conducts choral and opera workshops in singing with children for the professional, and offers writings on music education and new works. She recently gave a workshop in Hawaii and directed the international children's chorus at the Shrewsbury Festival in England.

The Treble Chorus of New England and the Treble Chorus Youth Ensemble includes children from three states and 29 cities and towns chosen by audition who study a demanding curriculum of classical and contemporary works in seven languages.

Singing with the Treble Chorus of New England are Alexis Cregger of Euclid Ave. and Thomas Damassa, Ridge Road. Ilsa Falis of Cross St., Rachel Hodges of Irving St., and Molly Joseph of Pierpoint Road, all of Winchester, sing with the Treble Chorus Youth Ensemble.

Future engagements include performances in Topsfield, in January, "Songs for Suppers" to benefit the Greater Boston Food Bank and The Treble Chorus Scholarship Fund at Merrimack College in March, and a return to Methuen Music Hall in April with the winners of the Metropolitan Opera Winners YouMi Cho and Chris Nomura.

This concert is sponsored in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency and the Arts Councils of 14 Massachusetts towns. Call The Treble Chorus of New England at (508)664-4705 or purchase tickets at the door.

Rental & Apartment Living Q&A
R. A. Johnson Realty

Q. Please explain the regulation regarding security deposits.

A. A security deposit (usually equal to one month's rent), is held by a lessor for reasonable damages or unpaid rent incurred during the tenancy by the lessee. The tenant must be given a receipt, within 30 days, indicating the bank, location, amount of deposit and account number. The lessee is responsible for payment of interest after the first 12 months of tenancy. A new legislative provision states the interest rate paid will be 5% annually or the current rate paid by the Massachusetts bank that is holding the deposit. The deposit must be returned within 30 days after the termination of the lease or upon the lessee completely vacating the unit.

Q. How does sub-letting differ from an assignment of a lease?

A. An assignment of a lease is a transfer, by the lessee, of his rights for the term of the lease. In a sub-let, the lessee becomes the lessor and the sub-lessee becomes the tenant.

Young Sachem skaters show promise

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

One of these years, the Winchester High School hockey team will break out of its long, long slump.

Every year since 1986-87, the Sachems have finished the Middlesex League season in the Middlesex League cellar. This could be the year they escape their moldy grave.

Coach Jack Newhall, in his sixth year at the Sachem helm, has a solid, though young, group of hockey players for the current campaign. Four of the players were members of Winchester's 1991 Amateur Hockey Association of the United States (AHAUS) state and national championship PeeWee team, and 14 return from last season's 1-17-1 Sachem squad. What the team lacks in size and experience, it could make up with hockey sense and good skills. Throughout the lineup, the Sachems have more skill than some of the previous WHS clubs.

"We should be improved from last year," said Newhall. "Other than the top three teams, we have a chance to beat anyone."

Those three teams are Woburn, Burlington and Reading, perennial Top 20 teams in the state that are loaded once again. The difference this season, however, is that the rest of the league is down a bit from last season.

"I think the top three teams are up there by themselves," said senior co-captain Andy Nolan, "but the best of them we can beat on any given night."

Winchester lost four seniors to graduation, including senior tri-captains Len Nolan, Phil Vultaggio and Matt Fantasia. Nolan is now a top blue-liner at Stonehill College, Vultaggio is a backup varsity goalie at Norwich University and Fantasia and Chris Dowling no longer play competitively.

Senior Anthony Bonfilio joins Nolan as this season's captains. As first-line center, Bonfilio will be counted on to do the bulk of the

WHS girls win thriller, boys have easier time

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

It really wasn't fair to new Winchester High School boys' basketball coach Quinton Dale. In his debut at the helm of the Sachems, the 6-foot, 6-inch Dale was upstaged by a 5-6 freshmen girls' basketball player.

Winchester High School BASKETBALL

In the season-opener for the WHS hoop program, the Sachemettes knocked off Burlington, 60-59, on Corrinne Imperatore's driving layup with three seconds left, Tuesday night at Winchester High. The dramatic ending made the Sachems' 48-41 win over the Devils in the nightcap seem anticlimactic.

This season, both teams will play the majority of their games at the same sites, instead of one team traveling while the other stays home. The switch means both teams will play before bigger crowds. On opening night, the crowd got more than its moneys worth.

The Sachemettes led most of the way in their game with the Lady Devils, but faltered down the stretch and trailed, 59-54, with 51 seconds left. Point guard Julie Russo started the improbable rally by stealing and passing to Imperatore, who drove hard to the basket and laid the ball in with 38 ticks on the clock.

After a Winchester timeout, Russo again swiped the ball, but the time she kept it, weaving coast-to-coast for a bucket which cut the Burlington lead to 59-58. After another timeout, Imperatore stole the inbounds pass but couldn't control it.

Junior forward Jenna DeSimone then fouled Burlington's Stacy Ott. Ott missed her free throw, but Burlington controlled the rebound. Out of nowhere came Russo, who swiped the ball again, and, diving forward, shoveled the ball ahead to Imperatore. The fleet freshman caught up to it at the top of the key, took two steps, and laid it in for the game-winner.

"Coach (Joe DiSarcina) showed us what to do during the timeout," said Imperatore. "After (Russo) stole it, I

Boys' basketball undergoes facelift

Rookie coach, new system leaves players enthusiastic about campaign

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

There are a few changes in the Winchester High School boys' basketball program this year.

New head coach Quinton Dale, fresh from a professional playing career in Sweden, brings with him a philosophy which stresses defense, defense and more defense. Since Winchester is not blessed with an abundance of height, Dale's intent is to keep teams out of their set offense.

"We've got a bunch of very good athletes on this team," said Dale. "Defensively, we'll use a lot of full-court pressure and traps. We've got to use our athletic ability to our advantage."

But this year's Sachem squad won't lack for offense. Winchester features three legitimate perimeter scorers and an inside game Dale promises will surprise quite a few opponents.

Leading the Sachems will be Brian Keefe, a multi-faceted junior who is a rising star on the EMass basketball scene. After starting at off guard for last season's 10-11 Sachems, Keefe was considered a shoe-in to assume the point guard slot this year.

But Keefe has since grown to nearly 6-feet, 3-inches, and his game has improved dramatically. Dale is looking forward to using Keefe, who was elected co-captain, at point guard, off guard and small forward.

Keefe will get a lot of help offensively from senior Kirk Minihane and junior Mark Morrison, a pair of players capable of taking over a game in an instant. Minihane, slated to start at shooting guard, is a deadly face-up shooter with excellent three-point accuracy.

Girls' hoops on mend

Sachemettes' key is to stay healthy

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Last season, the Winchester High School girls' basketball team got off to a terrific start, winning its first three games. But a key injury, some offensive problems and a tough schedule left the team with a 6-15 mark by season's end.

This year, coach Joe DiSarcina is cautiously optimistic about his team's chance to move back into the thick of the Middlesex League race. The Sachemettes will start a unit that is taller and more skilled than some of the previous WHS teams. If injury-free, Winchester should up its scoring average considerably.

"Last season we had a positive improvement on defense (opponents averaged 9 points per game lower than the previous season)," said DiSarcina, "but we weren't able to get our scoring up. Now we need to keep the defense, and work on the offense."

The Sachemette tri-captains are seniors Amanda Armstrong, Liz Hare and Jenn Russo. Armstrong is a very steady player with good rebounding skills. At 5-feet, 6-inches, Armstrong has good size for a shooting guard. Hare, a 5-7 forward, is another strong rebounder, while the 5-8 Russo, a physical force in the paint, will move to center. All three are excellent defensive players.

Two players, sophomore Julie Russo and junior Esme Baker, are sure starters for Winchester. Russo, a point guard, made the squad as a freshman and ended up with quite a bit of playing time. In Russo, DiSarcina gets a floor leader with three seasons of eligibility remaining.

"She's a true point guard," said DiSarcina. "She has a good outside shot, she's a good penetrator and she can pass very well. We're looking forward to having Julie for three years."

A back injury in the first game of the season last year limited Baker's playing time dramatically. When the 5-10 forward sat down for good after the sixth game of the season, the Sachemettes lost their best inside player. A healthy Baker returns and brings a new dimension to WHS hoops: shot blocking.

Seniors Tysun Smith and Jen Deering will see a lot of playing time. Smith is a 5-9 forward with a good touch around the basket, while Deering will be the first guard off the bench. Juniors Anna Betcher and Jenna DeSimone add more height to what is a relatively tall Winchester squad. The 5-9 Betcher, who is competing

Additions, corrections

In addition to the Middlesex League all-stars from Winchester High previously mentioned in this paper, three of the WHS girls' swim team's quad-captains were named to that sport's league all-star team.

The honored Sachemettes were Tara Juwa, Julie Buchanan and Patti Williams.

Also, add to the former Winchester High soccer players in college the name of Margaret Cunningham. Cunningham was a junior captain at Lafayette, which recorded the best record in the history of the program (10-7). Cunningham was the team's leading scorer through five games (2 goals, 1 assist) before she broke a vertebrae in her back and was sidelined for the remainder of the campaign. She was recently elected to serve as a captain next year.

In the correction category, due to an editing error, four names were spelled incorrectly in last week's paper. In the box charting former Winchester soccer players in college, the names of Heidi Reinfeld, Julie Struthers and Daisy Lewis (who was listed in the men's section), were misspelled. In addition, Winchester High gymnast Kristina Leavitt's name was incorrect.

In recent months, the sports staff at the Star has attempted to provide a section that is more professional and factual and will further attempt to avoid such errors from occurring. If any readers notice a misspelled name or incorrect information, please contact the Star sports department so the mistake may be rectified.

Dale of 2 countries lands at WHS

After professional playing career in Sweden, former Sachem assistant returns

It wasn't the NBA, but when a professional basketball team in Sweden contacted Quinton Dale two years ago about playing in the European country, Dale listened.

Since graduating from Northeastern University in 1985 after a stellar two-year basketball career, Dale hadn't accomplished as much as he wanted. He served one year as the junior varsity coach at Winchester High, he returned to Northeastern to be a graduate assistant coach, and he worked as a correctional counselor, following up on his degree in criminal justice.

A VIEW FROM A SPAR
JERRY SPAR

But he still had the yearning to play professionally, to prove he could succeed at the next level. The NBA had passed him by despite a strong senior campaign for the Huskies and it bothered him.

"I think I would have surprised a couple of people," he said.

The draft was shortened that year and Dale, whose team did not receive much television exposure, did not get to hear his name called. He could have taken a shot at the CBA or with a European team at that time, but he passed.

However, when a representative of the Swedish team, who had seen Dale play in a local tournament, contacted him two years ago, Dale was ready to listen.

"I was pretty much tired of what I was doing and I wanted to give basketball a shot," Dale said.

After marrying a former Northeastern cheerleader, Dale departed for Sweden. He spoke no Swedish, but discovered that enough people there were fluent in English.

"It was an adjustment, but most of the younger generation spoke English," Dale said. "The only problem was in the heat of passion of play."

The level of play in Sweden was similar to that of a quality Division 1 college team, according to Dale. There were a few Americans scattered throughout the league, including former North Carolina State star Lorenzo Charles, ex-Villanova big man Stewart Granger, and Arizona State product Joey Johnson, younger brother of former Celtics star Dennis Johnson.

The competition was challenging and the accommodations were suitable: Dale was provided with a car, food, a place to live and a salary.

But no matter how nice it was, it wasn't the U.S. And he could only do so much there. Dale played for two years, playing his last game in April of this year. Then it was time to go.

"Things didn't work out as I had planned it," he said. "And I wanted to get into coaching."

He went to his coaching contacts — Jim Calhoun, his former coach at Northeastern who now heads the University of Connecticut program, and current NU coach Karl Fogel. Fogel told him that he heard Winchester was looking for a varsity coach. Dale applied.

"I wasn't confident, but I figured I had a pretty good shot," Dale said. "I had the credentials, and, where I was there before, that might have given me an advantage."

Dale had applied for the same position six years prior, when Dave Smith departed after Dale's season with the JV. That time, he was passed over in favor of Mike Boyages. This time he got the nod.

The Winchester players first met Dale when the new coach held a meeting for prospective participants during the fall.

"You could see he was a players coach," senior co-captain Brian Keefe said. "He made us laugh, but you could tell he was going to push us and make us work hard."

Dale impressed the players with his approach to the game.

"He meant business," said senior co-captain Todd Sundstrom. "He told us it was going to be really hard. He told us to be ready. It was his the first preseason and he was going to be looking scoring. His wingers are sophomore Paul McGowan and freshman Steve Cucinatti, two veterans of the champion PeeWee team. They're young and will have difficulty against other teams' more physical players, but are capable of scoring a few goals.

The Sachems will go as far as their defense takes them. The two goalies, starter Andy Brown and backup Greg Carroll, are bound to see a lot of rubber. Brown was a solid backup to Vultaggio last season, and at times was spectacular. He's very good at ice level, but can be beaten up top.

While Len Nolan was at times a one-man show last season, this year's club has better defensive balance. Four defensemen will skate regular shifts for Winchester and will have to keep their heads and work the puck out to the forwards.

The starters are Bob Marrone and Matt Breuer, the other veterans of the PeeWee team. Breuer is a great skater — maybe the best on the team — with good size and a terrific slap shot. Marrone, who has grown considerably since last season (when he was a bit tentative on the ice), has turned into a real hitter.

The other defensive pair is senior Dave Duffy and junior Joe Vaccari, two others who aren't afraid to mix it up with the physical conference teams.

"They're fairly aggressive," said Newhall. "If they communicate well, they'll be alright."

Sophomore Dave O'Leary and freshmen Anthony Russo and Joe Pallotta won't see much time early on, but should work their way into the lineup.

Last weekend's snowstorm, which hammered much of Greater Boston, couldn't have come at a worse time for Newhall and the Sachems. The league's preseason jamboree in Stoneham had to be cancelled, leaving Newhall with just two preseason scrimmages to get a feel for the team. Winchester beat non-league foe Malden in each scrimmage — 7-2 behind four goals from Bonfilio and two from Quill, and 6-5 in a power-play/penalty-killing scrimmage.

The Sachems open the season with Burlington and Reading, two of the league's elite. Nolan says the key to a successful season will be not to get too down if they come up empty in the first week.

"We have to try not to be discouraged if we don't have a strong start," said Nolan. "We can be a good team, and we'll get better as the year goes on."

to see what the people were made of."

Dale learned his trade from some highly respected coaches, including Fogel and Calhoun, and has tried to incorporate the successful aspects of their theories.

"A lot of things came out of the Northeastern program," Dale said. "The basic work ethic will carry over. (Calhoun) believed in working hard."

Dale has the players attention because they know he put in the time before them. It also doesn't hurt to be able to walk on the court and demonstrate the right way.

"I think every now and then I have to get in the trenches and show them," Dale said. "When I show them, they seem to be paying attention."

With his playing background, Dale will not be questioned by the Sachems. But he does not expect his players to able to duplicate his feats, and he goes at a rate of speed that all the Sachems can maintain.

"He's gone over basic fundamentals that some of us have missed for a while," Sundstrom said. "We really respect him. He makes us work really hard, except he has a good balance. He treats us well."

Dale is equally impressed with his players' attitudes.

"They're giving me everything I've asked for," he said. "They're responding well."

One thing Dale has picked up from Winchester, both in his stint as an assistant and now, is a sense of pride. Dale said Winchester will always remain as one of his favorite places.

"I feel a real strong connection to Winchester because it gave me my first coaching opportunity," Dale said. "My loyalty to Winchester will last a long time."

Dale has already let his friends know about how much he has enjoyed his time with the Sachems. Some of his friends are planning to visit the coach and take in a game. One of them might even be an NBA star, a former Northeastern teammate of Dale's.

"I've spoke to Reggie (Lewis) and he said he's going to make a game," Dale said.

If Lewis were to attend a Sachems' game, Dale hopes to show him an aggressive, hard-nosed squad.

"The things we're going to concentrate on are fast-breaking, pressing and up-tempo basketball," Dale said. "We're really going to get out there and get after it."

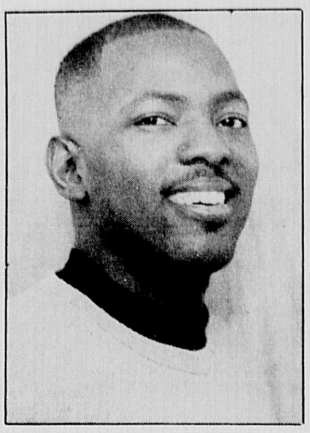

Along with assistant coach Ted Lyons, Dale is trying to make sure the Sachems are a team that gets consistent better until season's end.

"Our goals are to improve with each game," he said. "I'm seeing different signs of improvement each and every day. The kids are picking up what I'm trying to get across. I'm seeing a lot of positive things.

"They've all responded at different times," Dale added. "There really starting to get an understanding of what we're trying to accomplish as a team."

According to Sundstrom, the unheralded Sachems now are ready to see the payoff.

"I think we're enjoying the situation, with people not thinking we'll be doing much," he said. "I honestly think we've worked harder than any team in the Middlesex League. And it's going to make a difference."

for the starting center slot, is an extremely physical player — one of the most physical in DiSarcina's 11 years at the helm. DeSimone, also 5-9, is an excellent athlete who runs the floor very well, has a good jump shot, and can play three positions. She was the leading scorer for the junior varsity as a sophomore.

Winchester has depth at guard, where twins Chloe and Liane Caci, both juniors, and Corinne Imperatore, a freshman, will spell Russo, Armstrong and Deering.

One of DiSarcina's biggest goals is to develop a team capable of scoring from the paint as well as the perimeter. Last season's team got most of its production from the outside from leading scorers Julie Struthers, Daisy Lewis and Kristina Szczepanski, the three tri-captains.

"We've got some good size inside and some good passers on the perimeter," said DiSarcina. "I think we'll be able to get the ball inside. Usually, when a team needs to improve offensively, those points need to come from inside."

The Sachemettes have the potential to finish in the middle of the pack, but the team lacks experience. How the new starters and role players react to increased playing time could be the key to the final record.

just wanted to put it in. At the end I was going real slow."

The wild finish capped a solid effort by the Sachemettes, who rallied to a 24-24 halftime tie after falling behind, 8-2, just five minutes into the game. DiSarcina's Sachemettes displayed a sound offense, which was fueled by Russo's play at the point.

"Wow!," said DiSarcina moments after the game. "I told the kids all week in practice ... We're a much better offensive team than in the past."

Russo led the team with 17 points and seven assists, but the scoring was spread among eight players. Senior tri-captain Elizabeth Hare had an outstanding second half, tossing in 10 of her 11 points. Fellow captains Amanda Armstrong (8 points) and Jenn Russo (4) picked up their games considerably in the second half, as Winchester controlled the boards.

DeSimone finished with seven points while Anna Betcher scored five and grabbed a host of rebounds.

Then there was the freshman, Imperatore, who quickly proved why she deserved to be the third guard in the rotation when Hare fouled out with 2:41 remaining. Unfazed by the standard freshman jitters, she scored four of her six points in the last 38 seconds.

"I thought we showed a lot of character coming back," said DiSarcina. "I'm tremendously proud of these kids."

Coach Dale and his troops knew had their work cut out for them if they wanted to top the excitement of the night's opening game. They didn't quite match the excitement level in a 48-41 win over the Devils, but that didn't bother the new coach in the least.

"We've got to be happy with a win," said Dale. "We'll take a win any way we can."

The final score was closer than this game really was. The Sachems used the deadly outside shooting of junior captain Brian Keefe and senior guard Kirk Minihane to forge a 22-9 lead before Burlington rallied to cut the deficit to 31-23 at the break.

Devil center Scott Stevens, who finished with 19 points, kept the Devils in the contest with 13 first-half points, but a defensive adjustment at halftime limited Stevens to just three second-half buckets.

Burlington cut the lead to four, 34-30, with 12:50 remaining in the game, but two Keefe free throws, a Mark Morrison jumper, and a top-of-the-key bull's eye from Keefe gave the Sachems a 40-30 lead with 9:30 remaining.

The teams basically traded buckets down the stretch for the 48-41 Winchester win.

Keefe, the Sachems' do-it-all junior, was as advertised, leading all scorers with 20 points. Minihane had 12 at the break before settling for 14. Co-captain Todd Sundstrom was immense on the boards, hauling down several key rebounds in the second half. Senior point guard Pete French ran the offense nicely, but got into foul trouble midway through the first half.

"Peter's vital to our team," said Dale. "He exhibited great poise at the point. Brian came to the forefront today, but it's not designed that way."

Dale was pleased with the play of everyone who saw action, and pointed to senior Mike Collins and sophomore Frank Frisoli in particular.

"Mike Collins came in and gave the best defensive effort a coach could ask for," said Dale. "Frank grabbed some key offensive rebounds. Both Frank and Mike did an excellent job off the bench."

The teams didn't have much time to savor the victory, as they were slated to play at Reading Thursday (6 p.m. for the girls, 7:30 for the boys).

Boys' hoop squad determined

He can penetrate with equal effectiveness, which should free up Morrison, another strong outside player, for open jumpers.

Morrison, whose brother Mike is the leading scorer in WHS history, has improved his rebounding skills and defensive play under Dale, and has been especially powerful in the preseason on the offensive glass.

The other probable starters include senior co-captain Todd Sundstrom and junior center Sean Furey. Sundstrom, a 6-0, 195-pound forward, will have to match up with some bigger bodies, but has proved in the past that he has the intensity to rack up rebounds. Furey, at 6-4, worked daily this summer in one-on-one scrimmages with his older brother Mike, a Sachem star during the mid-'80s.

"He toughened me up," said the younger Furey. "I got used to getting swatted around by him."

Winchester will look to push the ball offensively every time up the floor. With an aggressive defense and a up-tempo offense, Dale will be substituting liberally, and has confidence in all of his bench players.

Senior Peter French will see a lot of time at point guard. French, a 6-0 senior, played mainly forward in the past, but Dale wants to take advantage of the lefty's excellent court sense and passing ability. He's also a defensive stopper who may be called upon to control some of the Middlesex League's premier guards, such as Rashad Wilson of Lexington and Mark Mulvey of Belmont.

Junior Dave Middleton steps up from the junior varsity and will have his chance as floor general under Dale. An excellent all-around athlete, Middleton needs to stay under control in order to be effective. "He's got an abundance of point guard ability," said Dale. "We just need to harness his talent a bit."

Seniors Mike Collins and Henry Kayulu figure as role players for the Sachems. Collins, who has been battling back problems throughout his career, is a 6-1 forward/center Dale calls "a workaholic." Kayulu, at 6-1, is another Sachem who has been working hard on his offensive skills in the offseason.

Winchester has some depth in the lower levels as well. Sophomore Frank Frisoli, a 6-5 low-post player, has enormous potential, according to Dale. "Frank's going to surprise a lot of people with his ability," said Dale. "He has some great post moves."

Two more of Dale's blue-collar athletes, 6-1 sophomore Mike Wallwork and 5-10 freshman Andrew Murphy, round out the Winchester lineup.

New to Winchester and the Middlesex League, Dale is yet to get a sense for the style of play and the talent other teams possess. Dale is concerned only that his 12 players preach what they've practiced over the two weeks of camp.

"I can promise this," said Dale. "We're gonna get after it defensively and make things happen. To win, we need to concentrate on our boxing out and rebounding, and we need to execute our plays on offense. I know we're ready to play."

Impressive turnout for WHS indoor track has coach, team excited about season

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

Joe Cantillon is genuinely excited about this season. Cantillon, the Winchester High School girls' indoor track coach, is thrilled because the program finally had an impressive turnout at tryouts. Forty-six girls came out for this year's squad, the most by far in years.

"For the first time in quite a number of years," said Cantillon, "we actually have depth in all the areas. The kids did a great job of reaching into the school community to get a number of girls to come out."

Building the sheer numbers had proved to be an arduous task for both Cantillon and boys' coach Tom Kline, who have struggled to convince talented athletes from other sports to try indoor track.

"It's great offseason conditioning," said Kline. "Athletes from every sport should be strengthening their legs."

What's yet to be seen, of course, is whether the increased numbers can translate to increased wins for the Winchester programs.

The Sachemettes finished 3-6 last season. Returning to the team are two Middlesex League all-stars, senior Deidre Murdock and junior Sarah Bonnell. Murdock, a two-miler, and Bonnell, a miler, give Winchester a good shot at winning points in the distance events. Seniors Betsy Kean and Nicole Nacamuli and juniors Kristina Racek and Elodie Kayulu add to the Sachemettes' depth in those events and the 1,000-yard run.

Seniors Colleen Campbell and Kathryn Wilson and sophomores Laura Aileo, Maile Bushnell and Sara Stevens will concentrate on sprinting, while senior Diana Grande and junior Kristen Robbat will hurdle.

Winchester even has depth at the field positions. Senior Francine Kariadakis and juniors Christine Arian and Amy Badiali throw the shot put, and junior Amy Oakes is a high jumper.

"We were able to get several girls from other sports (such as junior soccer players Kelley Smith, Nicole Malouf and Amy Houghland) to come out," said Cantillon. "They're all good athletes, so the team should be stronger. We won three meets last season (Wakefield, Melrose and Watertown) and were neck and neck in three others (Stoneham, Burlington and Belmont). We'd like to improve on that record."

The Sachems, while not sporting the numbers of their female counterparts, look to be competitive once again. Before the season had begun, Kline lost senior Brian Lindmark, an all-everything athlete who received all-league honors as a junior, when he injured his knee in football practice.

"That's a big loss," said Kline. "He had speed — we could put him in any event and know he'd do well."

> "We were able to get several girls from other sports. They're all good athletes, so the team should be stronger."

Senior co-captains Shaun Oliver and Ray Regan are returning all-stars who should grab quite a few wins this season. Regan is a distance specialist; Oliver a middle distance runner with excellent speed. Senior Justin Simeone throws the shot put, and should put up some impressive numbers.

Ron Hall returns as well, as the defending league sprint champion and WHS school record-holder. He accomplished both as a freshman last season.

"Those four will get us a lot of our points," said Kline. "We have depth under 600 (yards) but above that, we need some runners."

Kline will get help from two seniors in their first year on the team, Matt Tavares and Brian Mannett, both of whom will high jump and hurdle. Senior Bobby Donlon has impressed Kline with his desire and versatility.

Other Sachems who should contribute include juniors Darin Byrne (short distance and shot put), Jason MacFarland (middle distances) and Rolano Oyalo, an athlete with terrific speed who is coming back from a leg injury.

"We've got a good group of athletes," Kline acknowledged, "but the conversion from athlete to runner is tough. Being a good athlete gets you by at the short distances, but above 600, you need runners."

Both Winchester squads take on perennial Middlesex League power Reading this Saturday (Dec. 19) at 9 a.m. at the Lexington High School field house.

Easter Seals, Celts sponsor Shoot-Out

Hundreds of area youngsters have received invitations from Boston Celtics star Kevin McHale to participate in the 1992 Easter Seal/Boston Celtics Basketball Shoot-Out. Local schools and youth organizations have also been invited to participate.

"We know kids like to shoot baskets in their yards, their neighborhoods and churches," said McHale, the Shoot-Out chairman. "Kids can take part in the Easter Seal Shoot-Out on their own or at their schools."

Youngsters participating in the Shoot-Out collect pledges from family and friends for each basket shot during a three-minute period. A parent, teacher or coach signs off on the number of baskets completed. The shooter collects his or her pledges and sends the money to Easter Seals to fund services for people with disabilities.

Last year, nearly 5,000 youngsters raised $150,000 in Basketball Shoot-Outs all over Massachusetts. The top 100 fund raisers joined McHale and Dee Brown in the Boston Garden for a special basketball clinic.

This season, 100 winners will attend the clinic at Boston Garden on March 26, 1993.

Basketball Shoot-Out sponsors include TJ Maxx, WLVI-TV 56 and WWLP-TV 22.

For more information, call David Lamacchia at 1-800-922-8290.

New England Mariners baseball seeks players

The New England Mariners Baseball Club is currently recruiting potential players to compete in the 1993 AAU/Junior Olympics.

The club is an organization governed by the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) of the United States. The AAU/USA Junior Olympics, founded in 1948, has consistently been one of the largest and most successful programs of its kind in the world of amateur athletics.

The Mariners baseball teams will be selected from a series of clinics to be held in March for the 13-15-year-old divisions and in April and May for the 10-12-year-old divisions, at selected sites throughout New England. Clinics and practice sessions will be scheduled primarily on weekends to accommodate players who may have to travel long distances. Players will also be required to participate in fund raising activities to contribute to the expenses of the program.

The Mariners Baseball Club will hold its second annual instructional Winter Baseball Camp from February 13-20, 1993, in Orlando, Fla. Major League scouts and players will instruct on the proper mechanics of throwing and pitching, defensive drills and strategies, and hitting. The camp is limited to 24 players, ages 11-16, so as to give each player personal instruction and attention.

The Mariners Christmas Baseball Camp is scheduled to be held December 28-31 at the new Brandeis University field house in Waltham. Tentative plans include two sessions for ages 9-12 and 13-17. The instruction will be given by college, high school and Mariners coaches.

The organization is currently accepting applications for coaching positions. These positions are on a volunteer basis, with some expenses paid from the general fund. All travel expenses to the national championships are paid in full.

All player and coaching inquiries should be addressed to: New England Mariners, Inc., 12 Cornell Road, Beverly, Mass., 01915.

Winton Club thanks public for support of fair

The Winton Club would like to express it's gratitude to the public for support of the Winton Christmas Fair held recently at Winchester Hospital.

The raffle held by The Friends of Winchester Hospital during the fair produced several winners:

Baby quilt and pillow - Mary O'Brien

Framed checkers picture - Joan Steele

Framed embroidered flowers - Edie Brock

Framed still life - Rita Rose

Peach and white afghan - Marilyn Murphy

Blue and pink afghan - Kay Magno

Christmas tree wall hanging - Agnes Sheckey

Bunny rug - Leona Boodakian

The beautiful hooked angel rug donated by Winton member Carolyn DiMita, owner of Waterfield Studio, was won by Laurie Kirk.

Although it was a banner year for sales at the fair, there are still many beautiful and unusual items available in the hospital gift shop. Children's Christmas clothing and other items such as wrapping paper have been marked down to bargain basement prices, and more beautiful silk flower arrangements and wreaths appear every day. The club reminds those who missed the fair that it's not too late to pick up lovely gifts at great prices.

All proceeds from the fair and the gift shop are donated to Winchester Hospital.

Winton Club gift shop committee

The Winton Club has maintained a gift shop in the lobby of the Winchester Hospital since 1948. Proceeds from the shop go directly to benefit patient care services at the hospital.

The all-volunteer staff of buyers keep the shelves full of merchandise all year long. In November, they turn the hospital lobby into a Christmas wonderland for three days, resulting in one-third of the yearly proceeds generated by the shop.

The board of the Winton Club salutes the dedicated leadership of Shop Chairman Mary La Gatta, Assistant Chairman Nancy Whitman joined by Display Coordinator Linda Anderson, all the buyers and all the volunteers who contribute to a successful endeavor.

This Holiday Season, Help Feed The Hungry In Massachusetts... Buy A Spoon.

Once again, Filene's Basement will be selling spoons to help Santa's Kitchen feed the more than 230,000 children and their families who will go hungry this holiday season. That's almost twice the number of families that needed help last year.

Please help us help these families.

It's as easy as buying a spoon. When you visit any of our Massachusetts stores now through the December 24th, you can purchase a beautifully decorated spoon for as little as $1, up to $10. With your minimum donation of a dollar, you'll get a spoon decorated by someone who cares — members of scout troops, church groups, nursing home patients, people throughout the state who have joined Santa's Kitchen to give the gift of food to those in need.

Buy a handmade ornament for your tree or packages and you'll be helping to feed hungry kids and their families.

Please give, and join the following companies who have already given generously, so that others less fortunate might share in the joy of the season.

RELIGIOUS NEWS

Pilgrims of all ages celebrated Thanksgiving

On Sunday, Nov. 15, the 150 Church School students of the First Congregational Church of Winchester distributed specially decorated grocery bags to the congregation. The bags, which were donated by Purity Supreme Supermarket in Winchester, were to be filled with items from a list of nutritious goods. The filled bags would then be brought to the Food Pantry at the Failure to Thrive Clinic at Boston City Hospital.

The following Sunday when the bags were returned during a special inter generational Thanksgiving worship service, a cornucopia of over 300 grocery bags brimming with food appeared. "Failure to Thrive" children suffer from reduced growth rate from malnutrition which leads to increased risk of infection, and developmental and behavioral disorders.

Hopefully this collection of food will help alleviate some of the risk of malnutrition these children face.

This coming Dec. 23, a St. Mary's School youngster will reach into the pile of tickets and pick the lucky winner's raffle ticket. Raffle tickets are $5 for one or five for $20. Raffle forms can be obtained at the school or rectory, and mail completed ticket stubs with your check to St. Mary's Parents Association, 162 Washington St., Winchester, Mass. 01890.

Chrysler Concorde

All-new sedan rivals the world's competition

Chrysler Corporation's American answer to domestic and foreign competition is the 1993 Chrysler Concorde.

With an advanced "Cab-Forward" design that allows more interior space and easy entry and exit, the all-new world-class Concorde's design and engineering ingenuity reflects a redefinition of the four-door sedan produced by an American automobile company.

Concorde is designed to go head-to-head against Mercury Sable, Acura Legend, Honda Accord, Toyota Camry, Buick LeSabre and Pontiac Bonneville.

'Concorde is a technologically sophisticated, fully equipped and luxuriously appointed four-door sedan.'

STEVE TOROK
CHRYSLER PLYMOUTH GENERAL MANAGER

"Concorde is a technologically sophisticated, fully equipped and luxuriously appointed four-door sedan," noted Steve Torok, Chrysler Plymouth general manager. "It has engineering and safety features found in top Japanese luxury vehicles, but is priced significantly lower."

As a member of the LH family, Concorde is one of the first products of Chrysler Corporation's new vehicle development culture that introduced the platform team approach to all technical areas of the company.

Anti-lock brakes help drivers avoid accidents

Imagine you are driving along a wet road when suddenly an oncoming car drifts into your lane. You slam on the brakes and try to swerve out of the way of the car, but you can't steer. Your wheels have locked up.

That's what happens on a vehicle equipped with regular brakes when you forget the proper braking technique you learned in driver education class. And that's why auto companies developed anti-lock braking systems — for those times we panic and forget how to brake properly.

Anti-lock braking systems, or ABS, are becoming increasingly widespread on vehicles. Auto industry experts predict by the middle of the 1990s, they will be standard on every car and truck sold in the united States.

The introduction of ABS began on luxury cars in the early 1980s. Today they are standard on virtually every luxury car sold in the United States. Almost every truck sold is equipped with ABS at least on the rear wheels and some on all four wheels.

But ABS is not restricted to luxury cars and trucks. The systems are now finding their way into small cars. In the 1992 model year, General Motors made a major breakthrough by offering an inexpensive ABS system for its small, lower-priced cars.

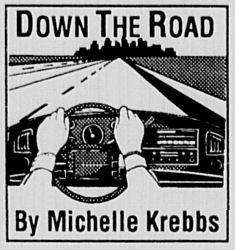

Ford offers four-wheel ABS as standard or optional equipment on 14 of the 25 Ford car and truck lines. General Motors offers ABS as standard or optional equipment on more than 80 percent of the cars and trucks it sells. Both Ford and GM plan to have ABS on every car and truck they sell by the middle of the decade. Every manufacturer offers as standard or optional on some models .

Some auto makers argue that anti-lock brakes are a more important safety feature than airbags. General Motors, for example, contends that crash avoidance systems, including ABS, are used more than 99 percent of the time in potential emergency situations while crash protection systems, like air bags, are used 1 percent of the time. Think about it. You have more close calls in a year than you do actual accidents.

ABS has three major advantages over regular brakes:

1. ABS shortens the stopping distance. With regular brakes, braking distance increases when the wheels are about to lock up. A sliding tire has less friction against the road surface than a rolling tire just prior to locking.

2. ABS allows you to maintain steering control by preventing the wheels from locking up. You can continue steering straight or turn as needed to avoid hitting an obstacle.

3. ABS allows the vehicle to maintain stability. Directional stability is lost if the rear wheels lock, causing the car to fishtail or spin.

ABS involves a series of sensors, including sensors on all four wheels or two wheels in the case of trucks equipped with rear-wheel ABS. The sensors constantly monitor the speed at which each of the wheels is turning. It detects when a wheel is beginning a skid on a wet or icy pavement.

The system automatically modulates brake pressure anywhere from 14 to 1 times a second. The modulation prevents the wheels from locking up. Compared to a driver pumping the brake, ABS is faster and more systematic.

Because a sensor monitors each wheel, the system applies the appropriate amount of braking action to where it is most needed — something even the most expert driver can't do. Wheels unaffected receive full, steady brake pressure to make sure you have maximum braking power.

Imagine you are driving along a dry pavement and an oncoming vehicle drifts into the lane in front of your vehicle. You swerve to avoid a crash. The two left wheels are on the pavement but the two right wheels are off the pavement in loose gravel.

The ABS recognizes that the wheels on one side of the car — the side with the wheels in the gravel — are starting to skid while the others are not. Instead of abruptly applying equal amounts of brake pressure to both sides, it controls the pressure on both sides so the car does not spin out.

That's why auto companies developed anti-lock braking systems - for those times we panic.

Though ABS does most of the work for you, you still must brake properly and the braking technique differs from the technique used in a vehicle not equipped with ABS. Experts recommend the following:

1. Squeeze the brakes. Apply steady pressure.

2. Maintain pressure and steer to avoid obstacles.

3. DON'T pump the brakes. That, in essence, is the job of the ABS.

4. In a panic situation, stand on the brake, hold it there and steer clear of obstacles.

Chrysler Concorde

All-new sedan rivals world's top competition

This involves bringing different professional disciplines—design, engineering, manufacturing, purchasing, marketing, sales and finance — together in a single, cohesive unit for the vehicle development process.

Concorde shares the "Cab-Forward" design with Dodge Intrepid and Eagle Vision.

Pushing the four wheels closer to the corners of the vehicle, plus extending the base of the windshield forward to the center point of the front wheels, enabled designers to devote 75 percent of Concorde's overall body length to interior and cargo room.

Because of its expansive interior room, Concorde is officially classified as a large car in the EPA's interior volume index. Concorde's interior room is superior to all non-Chrysler Corporation competitors in the mid-size car segment.

Chrysler product planners point to 56 separate product features on Concorde that they believe will translate directly into added value for the customer.

Specific highlights include:

•Standard passenger and driver front-seat air bags as a supplemental restraint system, as well as an available integrated, fold-away child restraint seat.

•A low cowl and hood line, coupled with an aggressive, swept-back windshield, long wheelbase 1113 inches and wide track 162 inches and roomy interior will clarify Concorde's product identity in an already cluttered market segment.

Concorde is immediately recognized as different from its LH counterparts by its full-across tail lamps and unique front-end design anchored by the Chrysler brand's signature, waterfall grille opening panel.

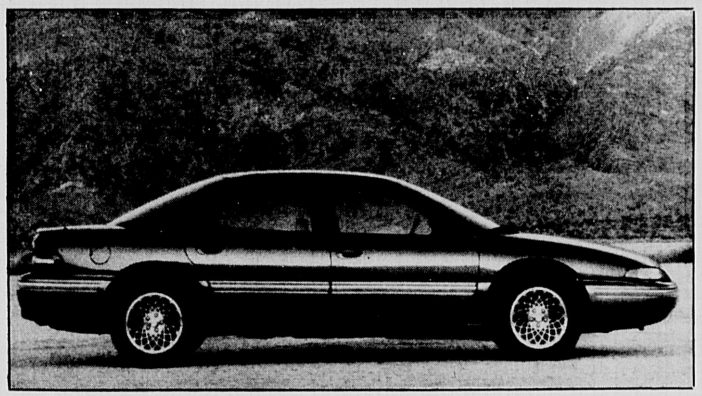

The interior and instrument panel have woodgrain appliques in strategic places and is designed to better fit the upscale Chrysler brand character.

Concorde's powertrain is longitudinally-mounted in the engine compartment—a rarity among front-wheel drive vehicles.

Pushing the four wheels closer to the corners of the vehicle, plus extending the base of the windshield forward to the center point of the front wheels, enabled designers to devote 75 percent of Concorde's overall body length to interior and cargo room.

1993 Chryslers 'easiest to maintain'

Home Mechanix magazine awards honors

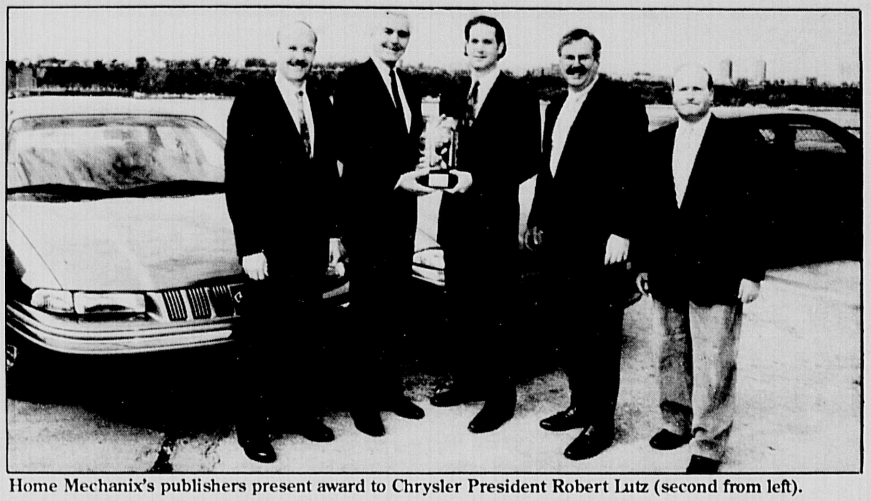

Chrysler Corporation's new line of cab-forward sedans, Chrysler Concorde, Dodge Intrepid and Eagle Vision, today received its second major automotive award, "Home Mechanix" magazine's Easy Maintenance Car of the Year.

Last week, Dodge Intrepid was named Grand Award winner in the car category of "Popular Science" magazine's fifth annual Best of What's New awards.

"Chrysler gets our vote for building so many easy-maintenance features into midpriced sedans that could redefine the shape of all cars into the next century," said Bob Markovich, "Home Mechanix" automotive editor.

According to Markovich, the "Home Mechanix" editors spent months peering beneath the hoods and crawling under chassis to determine the most serviceable vehicle among the new-for-1993 models from around the world. Their efforts yielded a long list of Easy Maintenance nominees, but only one winner among the world-class cars, trucks, sport utilities, minivans and vans. And, in some respects, it was a surprise winner.

"By all odds," said Markovich, "Chrysler's new trio of mid-sized, front-drive sedans should have been a mechanic's nightmare. To begin with, there's that huge windshield poking into what would ordinarily be engine space. It's part of a radical new 'cabforward' design that lavishes 75 percent of these cars' overall length on people and cargo — and throws what's left to the engine and transaxle.

"Underhood space is sliced further by a Freon-free (non-CFC) air conditioner that requires larger parts to do its job," said Markovich. "What's more, even base versions of the Concorde, Intrepid and Vision come a big 3.3-liter V-6 instead of a narrow in-line four. Standard driver and passenger air bags and their wiring and sensors add to the hardware list."

"Then there's that low profile and independent rear suspension," Markovich said. "Combining the two proved such a challenge that engineers were promised a case of bourbon if they could do it.

"They did, and they also beat the odds by making these spacious sedans among the easiest to service of any new-for-1993 car, truck or van," he concluded. "And they did it in near-record time — just 39 months from concept to first production car.

Chrysler honors from "Home Mechanix" appear in the December issue of the magazine. Other new 1993 vehicles that lost out to Concorde, Intrepid and Vision, but were still considered "Serviceability Standouts" include the Toyota Corolla, Nissan Altima, Ford Probe, Mazda 626, Nissan Quest, Mercury Villager and Jeep Grand Cherokee.

"Home Mechanix" called Jeep Grand Cherokee a standout for its implementation of R-134, a non-ozone depleting refrigerant in the air conditioning system, and the vehicle's simple, ignition key diagnostics.

For Jeep Grand Cherokee, the "Home Mechanix" accolades come in the same month "Motor Trend" selected it as the 1993 Truck of the Year Award and "Popular Science" magazine placed the new Jeep on its Best of What's New list, the annual selection of the year's 100 top products, technologies and scientific achievements from around the world.

Subaru Loyale Station Wagon

Driver comfort meets Subaru durability

The 1993 Subaru Loyale Station Wagon offers subcompact car buyers an unbeatable value by combining available all-wheel drive, famous Subaru durability, a wealth of standard features and a spacious interior.

The 1993 Loyale Station Wagon remains among the best equipped vehicles in its class with standard air conditioning, power steering, power windows with driver's-side automatic up and down, power mirrors, power locks, AM/FM/cassette stereo, tilt steering wheel and a digital clock.

The Loyale Wagon is available with front- or "on-demand" all-wheel drive (AWD) with either a five-speed manual or automatic transmission. For 1993 three new exterior colors will be available: Teal, Misty Dawn and Freesia Red.

According to Chuck Worrell, Subaru of America executive vice president, value is the priority of the sub-compact car buyers.

"Today's consumers are extremely value-conscious, so we have equipped the Loyale to give its owners the most for their money," he said. "

1993 Subaru Loyale Station Wagon

The heart of every Loyale is a 1.8-liter horizontally opposed four-cylinder engine with a single-overhead camshaft. Fuel injection and a fully integrated electronic engine-management system help the proven powerplant produce 90 horsepower and 101 pounds-feet of torque.

The four-wheel independent suspension is strut-based with an anti-roll bar up front and semi-trailing arms, coil springs and hydraulic shock absorbers in the rear. Stopping ability comes from a dual-diagonal, power-assisted braking system with vented front disc brakes.

Additional driver and passenger conveniences abound including the following standard features: reclining front bucket seats, rear-window defogger, three-point rear seatbelts, remote hood, trunk and fuel-filler door releases, intermittent windshield wipers, rear windshield wiper/washer, coin holder and center console with covered storage bin.

Thanks to Subaru's unique "hill-holder" feature, driving the manual-transmission Loyale is easier than most manual transmission-equipped subcompacts.

The hill-holder allows drivers to move from a stop on a hill without having to coordinate three pedals and two feet. When applied, the driver needs only to use the clutch and accelerator pedal to take off without rolling back or stalling.

All Subaru automobiles, including the Loyale are sold and serviced by the nearly 730 dealers nationwide and are covered by a three-year, 36,000-mile limited warranty.

Frank and Jean Privitera Honored by Knights of Don Orione

★ Singer Connie Francis, Comedian Henny Youngman Entertain

★ 1,000 Attend Charity Banquet

For the first time in history, the Knights of Don Orione named a "Man and Woman Of The Year."

Frank D. and Jean Privitera were honored at the 26th Annual Banquet held at the Grand Ballroom of the Madonna Queen Shrine, East Boston.

It was a first for the organization which was founded 43 years ago by a small group of Don Orione priests and Little Missionary Sisters of Charity who, in 1949, joined with prominent members of the community such as Judge Vincent Brogna and former Governor John Volpe and with the blessings of Cardinal Cushing to found a home for the elderly in Orient Heights.

What began as a home for 12 elderly people now is home to 200 people. The Don Orione community also maintains a home for exceptional girls in Groveland and a home for exceptional boys in Bradford, as well as the great Madonna Queen Shrine in Orient Heights.

Benefactors like Frank and Jean Privitera have made this work possible.

There was a long list of dignitaries who came to honor the Priviteras, and each spoke of the importance of the contributions of money, time and talent for the work of Don Orione by the Priviteras.

Roberto Falaschi, the Consul General of Italy, Joseph DiNardo, chairman of the Knights of Don Orione, and John Puma, president of the Knights of Don Orione all spoke at the banquet.

Distinguished Guests

More than 1,000 guests assembled to pay their respects and to honor the Priviteras during the ceremonies. The Priviteras were honored by Attorney General Scott Harshbarger; Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn; Gov. William F. Weld; State Treasurer Joseph Malone; U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy and U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy, State Auditor Joe DeNucci, and Lt. Gov. Paul Celluci.

For the Priviteras it was a night of historic significance, one the couple will never forget. It was a night that brought back memories for them, too.

Jean Privitera has been by here husbands side for 32 years, helping him to make the decisions which lead them to this night of great honor, this night of reaffirmation and rededication.

Jean Privitera

Jean's message to the grand assembly was brief and sweet "Dear friends of Don Orione Thank you for honoring Frank and me as 'Man and Woman of The Year'. This day will live with both of us for all our lives. I am at a loss for words to express my humble and sincere appreciation. May God bless each of you for coming and sharing this joyous occasion. God has been good to us and I pray God will be good to you."

Frank Privitera

It was a night of remembering for Frank Privitera, too, and a night of "gratitude and love".

Frank Privitera spoke of "first impressions." He told of being introduced to the Don Orione Home by the late Phyllis Donnaruma, former publisher and editor of The Post Gazette and of the impression that made on him.

He told of a time when he was a boy, 11 years old living in Boston's West End, and shining shoes in old Scollay Square. It was late in 1942, at a time when the world was at war. Frank Privitera had been shining shoes all day. He had 85 cents to show for his work. He was tired,

MAN & WOMAN OF THE YEAR

Frank and Jean Privitera

MAN AND WOMAN OF THE YEAR – Frank and Jean Privitera present Father Rocco of the Madonna Queen Shrine their check for $200,000. (L to R) Joseph DiNardo, Chairman of the Knights of Don Orione, Jean Privitera, Father Rocco, and Frank Privitera.

Joseph DiNardo, chairman of the Knights of Don Orione, presented the evenings honorees, Frank and Jean Privitera, as man and woman of the Year with these words:

...Twenty-six years ago, a tradition of Banchettos was started in thanksgiving for the continuing progress achieved and on these special occasions recognized people who had contributed, by their generosity, time and talent, to their Country, Communities and Mankind.

Tonight we honor and recognize two people-a first-a husband and wife team. It is my personal honor and privilege to introduce to you Attorney Francis D. and Mrs. Jean Privitera.

Jean- I have had the pleasure of getting to know Jean Privitera.

Jean is a lady, a lovely and caring mother, a devoted wife, a woman with strong family values and an astute business person who is a major key in the many successful enterprises she shares with her husband Frank. Yes, Frank was blessed when he met Jean.

Frank- I was informed by some, who had great feeling and friendship for this man, I might have to tame a tiger! Well, I'm here to report Frank is: A) a tough, no holds barred attorney; B) a wizard in business acumen and investments; C) a flamboyant, loving, caring, compassionate, generous person who is a benefactor to many and a family man.

Their combined generosity knows no ends as they believe in returning much of their harvest and blessing - In their own selective way.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I present to you our "Man and Woman of the Year" Attorney Francis D. and Mrs. Jean Privitera...

Frank and Jean receive the prestigious "Man and Woman of The Year Award" from Joe DiNardo, Chairman of the Board of the Knights of Don Orione.

hungry and cold. He shined the shoes of a naval commander and the man gave him a $1 tip for a nickel shine.

Frank Privitera was, he said, impressed that a man could be that generous. From that day on, he dreamed of one day being able to be that generous. His dream came true, beyond his wildest imagination.

"Tonight," he said, "that boy stands before you with all the humility a human heart can muster. Humbled by poverty because he lived it, and compassionate to charity because he needed it. If our lives, Jean's and mine, are to have any meaning at all, we can't forget that we are both children of poverty, privation and hardship."

Frank Privitera told the crowd, "The Madonna has blessed us beyond our wildest dreams and so it is fitting that we give back some of our blessings to the Madonna."

Those present roared their approval with yet another standing ovation as the Privitera's gave Father Rocco of the Madonna Shrine a check for $200,000

After singing for another half hour, Miss Francis ended the night with her rendition of a special song requested by the Privitera children, Jeannine, Frank and Phillip, "God Bless America". The crowd rose in unison and sang with her. It was fitting tribute to close a spectacular performance.

The Priviteras

Attorney Frank Privitera and his wife Jean have made tremendous contributions to charity. They have been willing to share their wealth with those in need.

Town to refund water bills from April

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Officials provided some rare relief from rising water rates to Winchester residents, who will be getting an abatement for water used between April 28 and July 1.

At its Dec. 21 meeting, the Board of Selectmen voted to credit ratepayers for a rate increase on their water and sewer bills charged before the beginning of the Fiscal Year on July 1. At Spring Town Meeting, the water rate was increased by 47.6 percent. The increase was applied to the entire second-quarter water bills which covered April 1 to September 21 and were mailed to ratepayers on November 13.

Several residents had complained to the Board of Selectmen that Town Meeting intended for the increase to take effect in Fiscal Year 1993, and they should not be charged the increase for water used before July 1.

The selectmen voted 5-0 to calculate the water used between April 1 and July 1 by ratepayers and credit them on their third-quarter bill,

Schmitt: Six years is long enough

Is eyeing a run for state office

By Deborah Trask and Stephen Olivieri

Ending speculation over whether he would run for reelection, Board of Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt has abruptly pulled himself out of contention for the March elections.

Schmitt announced at the Dec. 21 selectmen's meeting that he will not seek reelection in the March elections. In a short statement at the end of the meeting Schmitt declared, "I will not be running for reelection."

Furthermore, Schmitt told the Star that he will "probably" run for a higher office. "I'm seriously considering running for a state-level office," Schmitt said.

Schmitt said he is not running for reelection because he feels "it is time for other people to move in. I've done six years (on the board), it's enough time for anyone."

Schmitt added that he is not leav-

Local Jewish families celebrate a holy day of freedom

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

As some Winchester families ready for the Christmas season, Jewish families are celebrating their own holy day, which marks their ancestor's battle for religious freedom.

Jewish families began the eight-day celebration of Hanukkah at sunset on Dec. 19. Rabbi David Kudan of the Temple Shir Tikvah said, spiritually, the holy day represents "religious freedom and victory over tyranny", historically, it honors the Jewish heroes who freed the Temple in Jerusalem from the practice of the pagan rituals of their conquerors.

In 165 B.C., the Jews, under the rule of King Antiochus Epiphanies, were not allowed to worship their God and practice their faith, including the practice of circumcision and honoring of the Sabbath. Instead, the Jews were forced to practice the Hellenistic rituals of their Greek Syrian occupiers.

The Maccabees revolted against the king in a guerilla war and recaptured the Temple in Jerusalem. When they went to light the candles to rededicate the temple, (Hanukkah means rededication) there was only one day's worth of oil, and it takes seven days to make more oil. Miraculously, the oil kept the candle lit for eight days until more oil could produced.

Rabbi Kudan said during Hanukkah, Jewish families play games,

Spirit of giving grows through tough times

By Cindy Anderson
HARTE-HANKS CORRESPONDENT

For the 42 Christmases since she joined the Salvation Army at age 10, Judy MacPherson has offered food, toys and less tangible forms of holiday cheer to thousands who otherwise might go without.

Volunteering in kitchens, ringing bells and singing carols, MacPherson has witnessed what she calls "the grace of giving back."

"It still moves me," said the Ohio native who moved here on a Salvation Army mission 20 years ago. "I just choke up when I stop to think about how much people care, and how much love can accomplish."

With the economy showing scant signs of improvement, MacPherson said people turning to the Army this year often are in serious trouble.

"People feel more desperate this year. Desperate, and afraid nobody's going to be there to help," she said.

Moments after MacPherson spoke yesterday at agency headquarters on Concord Street, a man entered bearing a box filled with the yield of a closet clear-out: three suits, a dozen shirts, nine pairs of pants.

He plunked the box down on the counter. "Merry Christmas," said the donor, Nick Malden of Hopkinton.

"Bless you," said MacPherson, her Santa cap bobbing.

MacPherson and other organizers rely on that sense of "doing right" to accomplish the agency's mission to turn away no one seeking help.

Major Raymond Livingston, leader of the Framingham Salvation Army, said a church this year sent gifts to

Crockett pleads guilty, gets suspended sentence

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

A Winchester woman pleaded guilty to charges related to a car accident in which the passenger, a Winchester man, died.

Jennifer Crockett, 25, of Mystic Avenue, pleaded guilty to motor vehicle homicide by means of operating under the influence of alcohol in relation to a March, 1992 accident, which resulted in the death of William McCarter III, 24, of Harvard Street.

Judge Patrick King sentenced Crockett to a one-year sentence at a house of correction, suspended for five years, at the trial at Middlesex Superior Court on Dec. 15. The judge also required that Crockett serve 400 hours of community service and attend classes on alcohol abuse. In addition, Crockett had her license revoked for 10 years.

On March 6, 1991, Crockett struck a tree at the corner of Lawson Road and Highland Avenue at 1:06 a.m. in her 1983 Toyota Tercel. McCarter, the son of then-School Committee member Alice McCarter, was in the passenger seat. He died an hour after the accident at Winchester Hospital.

According to Winchester Police Det. Lt. James Pierce, after an investigation, police determined that Crockett was under the influence of alcohol.

Crockett was indicted on the charges by a Middlesex District Grand Jury on May 28 of this year.

Roslindale man arrested for breaks

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

A Roslindale man will serve up to seven years in state prison for two home break-ins in Winchester.

Kevin Britland, 28, of Roslindale was arrested on the afternoon of May 4 after breaking into a Cambridge Street house. Britland was arrested by Arlington police after a car and foot chase through that town. He was finally captured by police while hiding in a dumpster.

On Dec. 15, at Middlesex Superior Court, Britland, who is currently serving time for another offense, was sentenced to five to seven years at Cedar Junction for a Cambridge Street break-in. He was also sentenced for an attempted break at a Wildwood Avenue residence. He was given four to five years for that crime with the two terms to run concurrently. He will begin serving his time when his current sentence is finished.

In addition to breaking and entering, Britland was found guilty of putting a person in fear because there were people home when he attempted to break into the Wildwood Street home.

Winchester police received a call from a resident who saw Britland driving away from the Cambridge Street house toward Arlington. Arlington police spotted the vehicle in Arlington Center. After a car chase, Britland got of his car and ran. After a foot chase, he was found in a dumpster along with some jewelry. Burglary tools were also found on his possession.

SENIOR NEWS

FROM THE JENKS CENTER

After Christmas treat planned at Jenks Center

By Mary Kelly
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

A very special treat is in store for Winchester seniors, at the Jenks Center, on Wednesday, Dec. 30, at 1 p.m. The musical "Guys and Dolls" will be shown. There will be no charge and all are welcome. Come and meet a lovable bunch of underworld sinners right out of Damon Runyon Land. As the gentleman gambler Sky Masterson, Marlon Brando gives an impressive performance as a song-and-dance man.

Jean Simmons is utterly charming as the beautiful Save-a-Soul missionary who thinks Sky's the limit and saves him — for herself. Frank Sinatra croons in his inimitable manner as Nathan Detroit, the floating crap-game operator who's been engaged to one doll for 14 years — the ever patient Adelaide. Played by Vivian Blaine, Adelaide's the hilarious Hot Box chanteuse who'd rather wear a wedding ring than a mink. The great songs and high-stepping dances include "Luck Be A Lady Tonight," "Guys and Dolls," and "If I Were A Bell." Stubby Kaye as Nicely-Nicely Johnson makes "Sit Down, You're Rocking The Boat" one of the most memorable numbers in musical comedy history.

Come and enjoy. There is no charge and no prior registration is required.

Training starts for tax assistance program

As in past years, assistance with preparation of income tax returns will be available to Winchester seniors again this year, leading off with an intensive training period conducted by Internal Revenue Service and State Department of Revenue personnel. The training will be held on successive days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Jan. 6, 7 and 8, from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

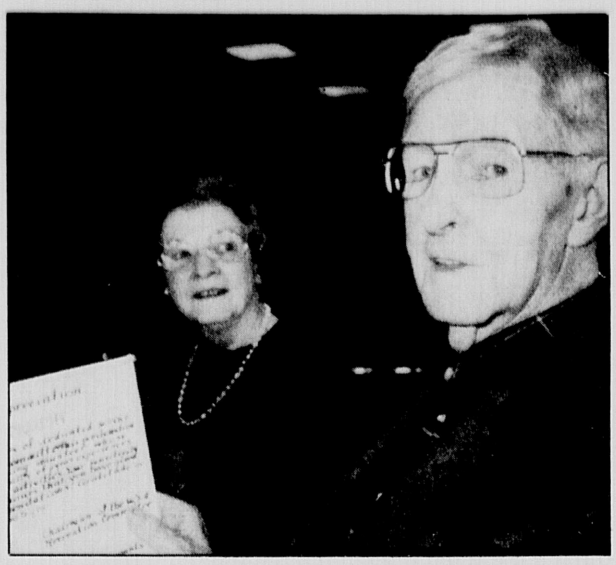

Tax assistance will be offered without charge to seniors, starting in February and running into April. Additional tax aides would be welcome, and anyone interested in attending the training sessions is asked to call, as soon as possible, Mert Ober, chairman of the tax assistance committee, 729-0114.

Transportation services

The Jenks Senior Center sponsors a variety of transportation services to Winchester seniors. All arrangements are made through the reception desk volunteers between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Volunteer drivers 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday-Friday

A corps of volunteer drivers share blocks of time between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., to be matched up with senior riders. Requests must be made to the reception desk 48 hours prior to the day the ride is needed. Recruited volunteer drivers must call back the rider to confirm time and place. Rides will be provided for seniors with no other means of transport, within Winchester, and for medical appointments to towns contiguous to Winchester.

Helen and Ray Murphy receive certificates of appreciation at the Jenks Senior Center for their long service on the WSA Recreation Committee.

Senior Van transport 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The Senior Van picks up and returns seniors who participate in the Eating Together programs on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The Van can accommodate 14 seniors and 2 wheelchairs at one time. Rides to medical and other essential appointments within Winchester can be accommodated as they mesh with the ET transport on these days. The Salter family has donated the use of the Wednesday and Friday Van. The cost of the Monday Share A Ride van is met by a grant from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs to the Council on Aging.

When making requests for van transportation, give name, address and telephone number, and, if reserving for Eating Together lunch, call at least 24 hours prior to lunch date. Desk volunteers handle many varieties of requests and it is helpful if complete information is given when requests are made.

Mall Van trip last Thursday of month

There will be one shopping trip each month to the Burlington Mall, leaving Jenks Senior Center at 9:30 a.m. with return trip pick up at the Mall at 12:30 p.m., on the last Thursday of each month. Mall reservations must be made at the reception desk. There is space for 14 seniors and 2 wheelchairs; however, if the demand is greater than the space, to be fair, reservations will be honored for those seniors who have not ridden before. Arrangements have been made with the Salter family for this extra service.

Storm cancellation

The Jenks Senior Center programs are cancelled and the building is closed during stormy weather. Listen for the school closing announcement by radio or TV; when Winchester schools are closed, senior programs and activities are cancelled. COA staff will be on duty, as the severity of storms permits.

Jenks Center transportation program

In order to improve the quality of life for all Winchester seniors, the Council on Aging and the Winchester Seniors Association sponsor and implement the Transportation Committee. Co-chaired by representatives of the C.O.A. and the W.S.A., the committee is composed of regularly scheduled and substitute volunteer drivers who are registered at the Center to be called when requests are made by seniors for transportation assistance.

Requests must be made, 48 hours prior to the need, to the reception desk volunteer on duty at the Center. Rides are provided for Winchester senior residents, who are without other means of transportation, for medical and dental appointments, transactions at banks and other businesses, such as hairdressers, shopping, and to visits with relatives at hospitals and nursing homes.

Requests for rides can only be honored if they are trips within Winchester or to the contiguous towns of Arlington, Lexington, Medford, Stoneham and Woburn, for medical appointments. The only geographical exception is for medical appointments at the Burlington Lahey Clinic and Harvard Community Plan.

There is no charge for this service; however, seniors in the past have made contributions to the Center in appreciation for the personal door to door assistance of the volunteer drivers in the program.

All Winchester seniors, regardless of their financial circumstances, are invited to make use of the Jenks Center local transportation service. This service is available Monday through Friday; a call to the volunteer desk receptionist, at 721-7136, 48 hours in advance is necessary. The senior desk volunteers play a pivotal role in the success of this volunteer transportation program.

Local artist brings art to life

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

A Winchester artist will have her work admired by thousands of people when her giant oak tree will light up City Hall Plaza on First Night.

Caryn Johnson, along with assistance from Winchester residents and students, is producing an Ephemeral Oak to be displayed on City Hall in Boston during the First Night celebrations. The giant oak is made using light and shadows on the windows and concrete of City Hall.

The lights will shine on 64 cotton screens designed to look like leaves, which will hang from 64 windows at City Hall. A cement post will act as the tree trunk. The key to bringing reality to the cement post and windows are several overlapping lights. Lights from inside City Hall will light up the branches and leaves and outside lights will transform the cement pole into a tree trunk.

The project has become a major undertaking. The 64, 4 1/2 x 6 feet patches each take three hours to paint. The patches consist of several layers of paint and stencils, each of which are required to dry before the next phase is added. In order to finish the project, Johnson had the assistance of Winchester high school and middle school students and teachers, 60 of whom participated in a paintathon to finish the project.

"I was hoping to make it a community project," said Johnson. "I brought it to the schools to get kids interested in art and to see what a working artist does." Johnson's assistant throughout the project was a Winchester High School senior, Prima Fong Murdock.

Both the kids and the artist get something out of the collaborative arrangement. Johnson is donating the cloths to the school, which can reuse them for a backdrop for a play. Johnson gets the space necessary to undertake her seven-story tall project and assistance from the students.

Johnson's project is one of three environmentally conscious projects called Cycle-Recycle-Life Cycle. Johnson's project is the Life Cycle. The Cycle project is an interactive sculpture that will light up 312 illuminated balloons with energy generated by 120 riders on recycled stationary bicycles. Recycle consists of a "Trash Temple" made out of trash with garbage cans as pillars.

Johnson's oak on City Hall represents the desire to bring life to the American cityscape. The concrete and brick of City Hall is transformed into a living piece of nature. An underlying theme of putting this oak tree on the political building is to highlight the importance of environmental concerns in political discussion, says Johnson.

First night starts at 1 p.m. on Dec. 31 all over the city of Boston and ends at midnight with a fireworks display over Boston Harbor. Johnson's work will be displayed from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Johnson has been living in Winchester for five years. She holds a master's degree in art and technology at the Center for Advanced Visual Studies at MIT.

Library changes hours to allow better access for public

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Library patrons will find new hours to greet them along with the new year, say library officials.

For the first time since 1989, The Winchester Public Library will be open six days a week. As of Jan. 25, the library will be open a part of every day except Sunday. (See new schedule along with Library Lines on Page 6A.)

Lynda Wills, director of the library is enthusiastic about the change. "We hope the switch provides a more convenient schedule for the public," said Wills. New hours on Friday afternoon would enable students to come in after school.

Wills says the only significant change that comes with the addition of the hours on Friday is the loss of Wednesday morning. "We made this change primarily as a result of the user survey," said Wills. The library is primarily used by senior citizens in the morning and people with small children, she said. But, for these people, there are still three mornings available.

The original decision to close on Fridays was made as a result of reduced traffic, a count which showed people were not utilizing the library as heavily on Fridays. However, says Wills, the response on the user survey proved to be just the opposite.

"We are really hoping to accommodate more people with this new schedule," said Wills.

This change will not require any additional funding but adding to the new hours would. "We will be asking (Spring Town Meeting) for more funding to expand the weekday hours and open on Sunday. Sunday is another day that people ask for a lot," said Wills.

LIBRARY LINES

Children's author Pamela Powell to speak at library

Come and meet Pamela Powell, author of the children's fiction book, The Turtle Watchers, when she visits the Winchester Library on Tuesday, Jan. 5, at 3:30 p.m. in the Library's Meeting Room.

Powell has worked as a boat captain, a chartered yacht cook, an instructor in the Hurricane Island Outward Bound program and as an English teacher in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

She was inspired to write "The Turtle Watchers" during her three-year stay in the West Indies, when she witnessed a leatherback turtle laying her eggs on a beach and conceived of a tale about these creatures. Ecology, mystery and Caribbean superstition are neatly woven together in this rousing adventure story for readers ages seven to 11. This program is sponsored by The Friends Of The Winchester Public Library.

For information about this, or any of the Winchester Public Library's services for children, call 721-7140.

Library to adopt six-day schedule Jan. 25

For the first time since the Fall of 1989, the Winchester Public Library will be open six days a week. As of Jan. 25, the Library hours will be: Monday and Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Wednesday, 1:30 to 9 p.m.; Thursday and Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; closed Sunday. The Children's Room hours will be: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Wednesday, 1:30 to 8 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.; closed Sunday.

Although the total number of hours remains the same, the Library has been able to increase the number of days that it is open by redistributing them differently throughout the week.

The public access catalog, lesson two

Last week, we learned how to enter an author's name into the Public Access Catalog in order to search for that author's works. You search for works by an author by pressing the "author" key and typing the author's name at the prompt, or typing "a" followed by the author's name. Here's what happens when you enter these commands.

If only one author matches your search, you will then see a list of titles displayed.

If there is more than one author who matches your search, or if your author is listed under more than one version of his or her name, you will see a list of authors to choose from. Let's say you are looking for an author named J. Spratt. If you type in "spratt j" the system might respond like this:

1. 4 Spratt, Jack
2. 6 Spratt, Jack, 1905-1979
3. 53 Spratt, Jack, 1952
4. 8 Spratt, Jacob

The computer lists all of the authors in the database with a last name of "Spratt" and a first name beginning with "J." Authors of materials in our library will be highlighted. The number in the second column is the number of titles that you will find under each name. Pick out one of the choices listed by typing the number in the first column of the line the name is on (for example, type 3 for Spratt, Jack, 1952. Be sure to press "return" after typing anything into the computer. You will then see a list of titles displayed (our titles will be highlighted):

1. Cooking with Jack Spratt 1989
2. How to get your family to eat better 1982
3. Jack Spratt's low-fat cooking 1991
4. Better nutrition the Spratt way 1981

When you see the list of titles, each one will be on a separate numbered line. Type in the line number (and press "return") to find out where the book is shelved, whether it is checked out, etc.

AUTHOR: Spratt, Jack, 1952--
TITLE: Cooking with Jack Spratt.

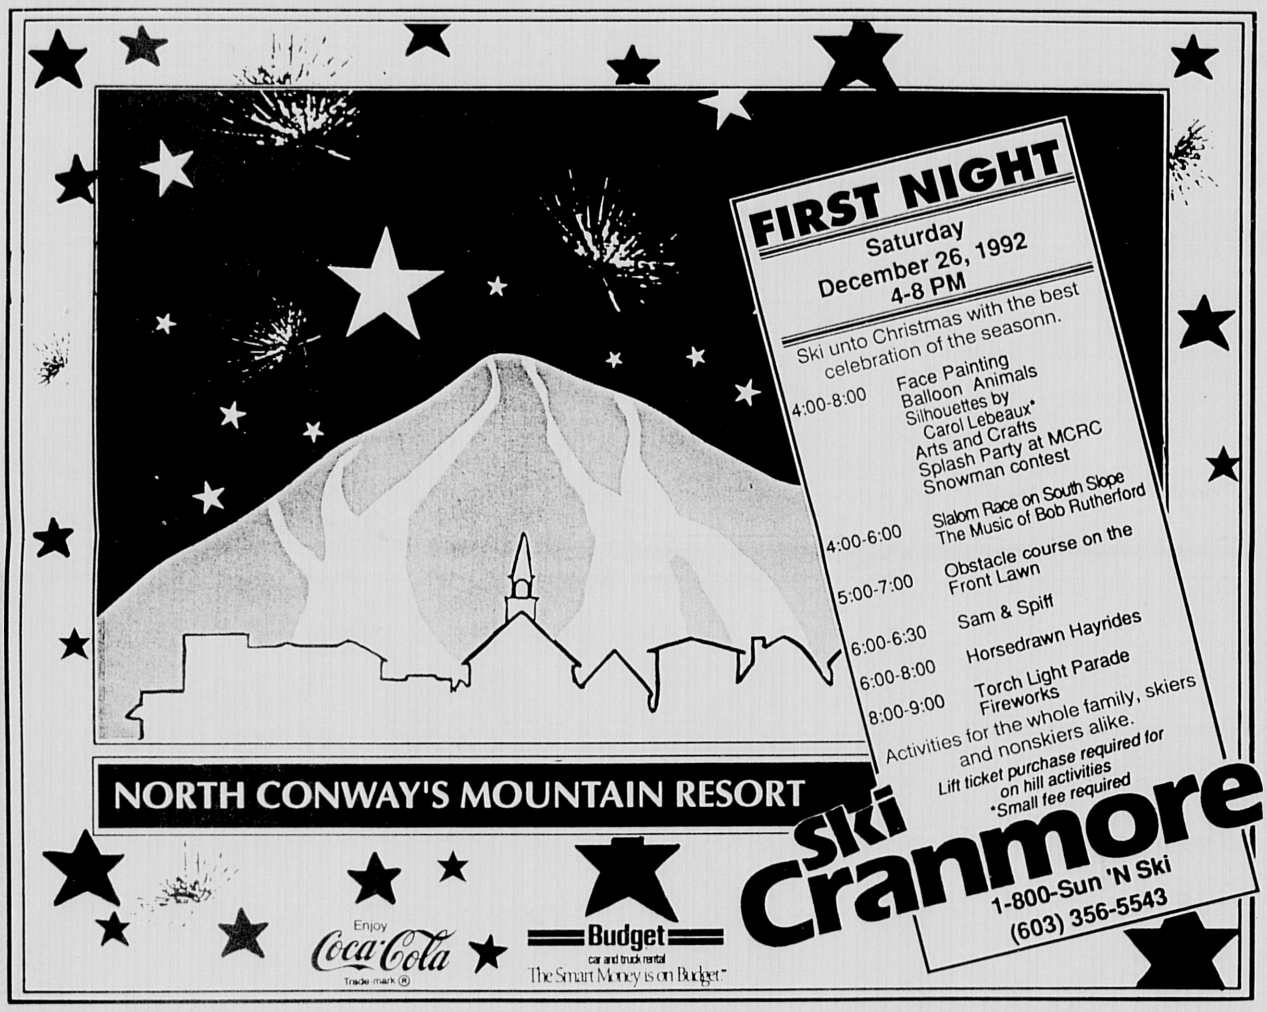

The information that will come up will include the call number (the exact shelf), the location (whether it's in Winchester or another town), the status — available or checked out.

Sometimes when you enter an author's name you will see the name followed immediately by a title, as in lines 4 through 8 in the example below:

1. 4 Spratt,Jack
2. 6 Spratt, Jack, 1905--1979
3. 53 Spratt,Jack, 1952--
4. 8 Spratt, Jacob
5. Spratt, Jack, 1952-- Cooking with Jack Spratt
6. Spratt, Jack, 1952-- How to get your family to eat better

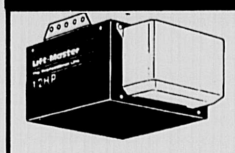

Ignore them. They were entered as part of the process of compiling the database, and are not helpful for searching.

Next week: Title searching.

Reulbach keeps a watchful eye on elderly

By Daphne Abeel
HARTE-HANKS STAFF

From her office at 1 Ashburton Place, Donna Reulbach, has a view of just a sliver of the back of Beacon Hill, but as Director of Elder Protective Services, she has responsibility for the safety and wellbeing of elders throughout the Commonwealth.

Reulbach, a former Needham resident who now lives in Jamaica Plain, oversees a program of services for the elderly that were mandated by legislation which took effect in July 1983 to protect abused and neglected elders, 60 and over.

The law defined elder abuse as "an act or omission which results in serious physical or emotional injury to an elderly person, or financial exploitation of an elderly person."

Reulbach, who holds a BA in Psychology from Boston University and an MSW from Boston College, has held her current position since 1987 and came to it after 11 years with DSS (Department of Social Services) where she worked as a social worker, manager and coordinator of a child abuse hotline.

Says Reulbach, "Before 1983, there was program for abused elders. Now there is a program of mandatory reporting by professionals if abuse is suspected. Once a report is made, we conduct an investigation and then ask the elder if they want services."

Elder Protective Serices offers legal services and access to home care. They also employ an ombudsman responsible for the protection of elders' rights, and two attorneys.

"The big difference between dealing with children and elders," says Reulbach, "is that elders can make decisions. The big issue is competency. Elder people have varying degrees of competency and may not always be able to articulate their issues."

During the first year of the program, Protective Services received 1,500 reports of elder abuse. In the current past year, the program has received over 4,000 reports.

Financial exploitation was included in the definition of abuse under legislation passed in 1990.

"We're just beginning to see these cases," says Reulbach. One of the most common circumstances is the instance in which an elder has been persuaded to turn over property or a house to a child or another family member. This is done legally, to protect assets, and there is usually an agreement that the elder may continue to live in the residence."

Problems arise, says Reulbach, if there is a subsequent sale of the property. The elder can be forced out and become virtually homeless.

Other instances of financial abuse against elders, says Reulbach, include the forging of checks, stealing of social security checks, and the stealing of real property.

"Often an elder person is reluctant to tell anyone. They are embarrassed and ashamed and they don't want to turn on a son or daughter, because they may have noone else to depend on," says Reulbach.

Reulbach says she is not certain of the reason that the number of abuse reports is rising.

"It could be demographics, the aging of the population, it could be that more is being reported because people are aware of the legislation. Some of it may be due to the bad economy. People are stressed out. But there are many reasons for any sort of domestic violence."

A problem often arises, says Reulbach, when a child makes a promise not to take a parent or other relative to a nursing home. When the situation becomes overwhelming, resentment and neglect set in.

"People deny old age. Thirty years ago, people didn't live such long lives, and noone is prepared."

Reulbach suggests that people sign a health care proxy bill which appoints someone to make decisions if you can't. It's also important, she says, to let someone else know about your financial situation.

"If family members are feeling stressed or overwhelmed, the can call their local agency for suggestions as to how to get help or get respite from a situation that is difficult," says Reulbach. The agency for Winchester residents is Minuteman Elder Services, which is located in Burlington and can be reached at (617)272-7177.

Reulbach credits the small size of the Executive Office of Elder Affairs for its ability to get things done.

"The Secretary, Franklin P. Ollivierre holds a Cabinet level post. There are only 80 people here, and we're all quite close. We have the sense that we can change things," says Reulbach.

In addition to responding to reports of abuse of elders by others, the Protective Services Program also offers an Elder-at-Risk program.

"This is for those people who may not be taking care of themselves. Our laws don't cover self neglect, and there may be even well-to-do people living in large houses who are not bathing or eating. Perhaps they are not paying their bills. They are often reported to us by neighbors, or even police and firemen who may have occasion to go into the house for an emergency," says Reulbach.

Often elders are afraid to say they have needs because they are afraid of being forced to go to a nursing home.

In fact, says Reulbach, there are many other options, including home care.

One of the biggest issues for elders is the question of competency.

"We put a big value on self determination. If the person is deemed incompetent, we can go into court under a protective to get a judge to mandate services. But we do would try to keep the person at home. We might obtain a court order to move the abuser out for a period of time. Basically, we work to try to keep families together."

Protective Services cooperates with Massachusetts Home Care and AARP on a money management program which helps people who are at risk because they don't know how to manage their funds.

"For example, if a widow doesn't know how to pay her bills, we provide an insured volunteer who can help write the checks out," says Reulbach.

Reulbach says she enjoys her work because she is an optimist. "It's the pessimists who throw up their hands and say what can we do?" she laughs.

"The issue we are always dealing with is self determination versus protection. It is our job to help people live safely, but we also must insure their right to make decisions for themselves. This is the greatest challenge I face, balancing these two forces."

The toll free number for Elder Protective Services, 1-800-922-2275 is available Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The toll free number for the Executive Office of Elder Affairs is 1-800-882-2003.

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Kind words, simple pleasures

Over the past nine months many residents have stopped by the paper to say hello and generally find out who we are.

As the holiday season gets underway, we thought it would be the right time to say thank you to those residents, many of whom also offered help and encouragement during the past year of change for the Star.

To columnists Dan Chane and Terry Marotta, both quick to offer kind words when they were most needed, we thank you.

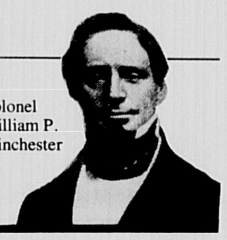

Thanks go out to the community for continuing to demand a strong voice in the comment pages of the newspaper. The town's more prolific letter writers keep the paper vital to the community and, from time to time, serve to remind us of our purpose.

Within the new format we have sought to expand the depth of the newspaper and will continue to do so. With the addition of columnist David Simmer on financial issues and Jennifer White on community health issues, we can offer helpful advice on everyday problems. Both are experts in their fields, White as a public relations specialist from Winchester Hospital and Simmer as a lawyer and financial advisor.

We value the input the community has given us on the newspaper in the past. And in this holiday season we thank you.

WINCHESTER KERNELS

Colonel William P. Winchester

And it came to pass...

By Dan Chane
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

Years ago, a week or so before Christmas, in Winchester elementary schools, sprightly live Christmas trees would sprout at the head of each classroom.

The heady aroma of fir promised great things as reams of colored cut paper and malodorous paste pots came out of the storage closets.

While some students made countless yards of colored paper chains for the tree, others crafted paper lanterns for any branches left bare after the chain was draped from top to bottom.

Out in the halls, the privileged sixth graders stood before great brown sheets of paper creating backdrop murals for the annual Christmas pageant. If memory serves, some pretty classy artwork emerged as students daubed on the thick poster paint from old marshmallow fluff jars.

Those not involved in these festivities were busy making gifts for mom and dad. Spatter prints with a calendar stuck on the bottom with that same noxious paste were a very popular item.

But it seemed to us smaller ones that the holiday didn't have permission to begin until one of the sixth graders - one year it was Linda Nanry - got up at the pageant, opened the book and began, "And it came to pass in those days ... "

The Christian holiday preparation was echoed many times over in Winchester churches. For years, high school students under Dr. Howard Chidley put on an extremely moving tableau at First Congregational Church.

Then too, the Downes Memorial Chimes at the Unitarian Church have sent their shimmering carols across the square since 1928.

Mary Ranton Witham elevated the pealing of those bells into an art form over many years — on a keyboard that is activated with fists — not fingers!

For years, Church of the Epiphany had a tree and pageant for youthful parishioners on a late afternoon close to Christmas.

As the brilliant colors of the stained glass faded in the dusk, Helen Hertig, as the Virgin Mary, sang a haunting lullaby as the three kings — "Roddy" McCreery, Joe Beck and Bill Everett — came down the nave with the delicious scent of incense emanating from their smoky lanterns.

It has been said that there is no life where there is no change — and with he ancient observance of Christmas, change will ever be an undeniable truth.

Most observance of the holiday, at least in the public schools, is now of a secular nature — and rightly so.

But the true messages of this Christian holiday - Peace, Goodwill, Charity and Love of fellow man will ring true through all faiths forever!

Keep it simple

GUEST COLUMNIST

By Terry Marotta

It's the last week in December, inventory time for many companies; inventory time for us all, perhaps. It's the end of the month and the end of the year. And maybe, looking back and taking stock, it's the end of an era too.

Like the sensitive creatures we all still are underneath our clothes, we sniff at the air. There's something in the wind, it begins to seem at the tail end of these holidays, and it smells a lot like change.

For at least the last 10 years, I am just now realizing, I kept up a pace like a frenzied hamster on its hamster wheel. A pattern of excessive activity had emerged in my life, at this season especially. It wasn't so much that I couldn't start my holiday shopping, for example, as that I couldn't be done with it. Like a three-year-old drawing a picture, I didn't know when to stop, but kept buying more: more dolls, games and books, more toys and outfits — 'til an immense pile of stuff had grown beneath the tree. And still, it seemed, one child was always disappointed, and wore on her face that fleeting is-this-all-there-is look. It was that sentiment I was trying to keep at bay for her, I guess. And yet, I now see, it was that sentiment I unintentionally called forth by buying more and more, instead of saying "Enough, what we have is enough."

"Enough" is a word whose meaning has grown strange to many of us.

I think of Christmas nights I have known, when, cleaning up, I was confronted not just with the torn wrappings and the ripped-apart boxes but with a certain inescapable sense of having missed the point again somehow.

I think of Christmas Eves, and the small bubble of peace that arises when the house is quiet and all is in readiness, the lights low, the TV off, the cooking done, with maybe the faint scent of clove or cinnamon spicing the air. How many such Christmas Eves have I known like this? Not enough. Not nearly enough.

The September I was 19, I went out on a date with the boy I'd met at college, then woke my mom at midnight to tell her I meant to marry him. "How would you like an Italian grandchild?" is what I really said, as those with keener memories now remind me. (What was I thinking of? Except for his surname, he's about as Italian in temperament as Alistair Cooke. And the implication of putting it that way! Poor Mom sat up in bed, lit two cigarettes and tried smoking them both with trembling hands.)

The period of my engagement to this young man spanned two Christmases. That first one, he was sick with mono, and couldn't go with my family to the Christmas Eve party at the next door neighbors'. Instead, he and I sat alone in the darkened living room and felt happy. In the 25 years I've known him, he has not sent me a single letter. But that night he gave me a necklace with a small card scribbled in his oddly boyish hand. "On the First Christmas," it said. The next year, just six months from our wedding day, he gave me something else. This time the card said, "On the Christmas Before Fulfillment."

Is this fulfillment, I ask myself now, with our big bills, and the ceiling falling down on our heads, and our houseful of toys and the various young people taking up cigarettes and smacking the car into things and deciding at the last minute it would be nobler really to give up on the term paper and take the honest F, and burning a months' worth of careful notes to make it final? Is this fulfillment, the late-night talks, not all of them pleasant, the effort to understand who we all were and what kind of newer selves we were struggling to give birth to?

You bet it is.

And, it seems to me, this messy fulfillment of family living is complication enough without adding to it a relentless appetite for consumption that can become as much an addiction as addiction to any substance.

"Keep it Simple" says one of the slogans arising from the 12-Step tradition. That's what I'm ready to do next time around. Maybe we all are.

Periodically the chambered nautilus builds a new room onto his shell and, growing himself, moves into it. Let us grow a new dream of how to live our lives and try moving into that. Let it be a simpler dream the next time. Both for the holidays and the whole year through.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dewald says field committees offer little

To the editor:

For about a decade now, Winchester has had a continuous parade of play field study committees. These were all spawned by the private soccer club to propagandize its selfish interests without regard to neighborhood concerns. After having their proposal for a "world class" soccer complex at Manchester Field rejected this spring, the most recent play field study committee has identified its main project now to be the expansion of the Lynch School field into the Well Field area. This was no surprise to me since I fully expected that they would be back at Lynch once they were "expelled" from Manchester. The present proposal for unneeded field expansion is nothing more than a revisit of the 1984 field study committee proposal for the construction of roughly a 16-acre soccer complex in the Lynch School neighborhood including the destruction of the Well Field and its 27 wells. (see Daily Times Chronicle, dated June 29, 1984, and Winchester Star, dated July 5, 1984). The only difference now is that the present proposal is to spread the destruction over a period of five years. A memo from the town engineer (dated Dec. 7, 1992) to the play field study committee gives cost estimates for the initial phase. If I recall correctly, the landscape architectural firm of Mason and Frey submitted plans in 1985 for a $2.3 million play field complex at Lynch.

Again, the main proponent for unneeded field expansion is the private soccer club. Indeed, the chairman of the present playfield study committee is also the president of the Winchester Soccer Club. It is ridiculous to ask the already overburdened Winchester taxpayers to waste tax money to benefit a private club so that it can host tournaments for nonresidents (BAYS — Boston Area Youth Soccer, and others).

It is clear the soccer club wants a complex of three or more fields, such a complex would substantially enhance the social viability of parents. Social contacts are more difficult when fields are scattered throughout the town. Winchester has its playing fields scattered for the convenience of the children. This policy should be continued. No single neighborhood should carry the burden for the entire town.

The electorate should decide whether money should be wasted on unnecessary play field expansion while at the same time destroying a proven water supply. Therefore I urge the Board of Selectmen to place the play field study committee's request for capital expenditures on the ballot as an override question in the upcoming March election.

In my opinion, education and public safety must be our top priorities. As a country we find ourselves in a crisis situation where our children are performing way below the academic achievements of their counterparts in both Asia and Europe. Instead of concentrating vigorously on remedying this deplorable situation, we defiantly continue our ostrich practices by sticking our heads in the soccer turf as if no threat to our children's future prosperity existed. Such negligence borders on parental betrayal of our children's future and their standard of living.

Resident thanks firefighters for helping hand

To the editor:

I wish to publicly thank the Winchester Fire Department for helping make my 85-year-old father's Thanksgiving a special day. My father, Vincent Carroll, has been confined to his second-floor bedroom due to hip problems. I could not carry him to the first floor by myself and the prospect of his eating Thanksgiving dinner in his small bedroom was particularly bleak.

ON THE RECORD

In keeping with the spirit of this season of giving, the Winchester Star sends the following wish list to the North Pole for some things we think would make our town officials happy:

Sen. Charles Shannon: Subscriptions to The National Review and The Nation. After reading these two periodicals, Shannon can make an informed decision on whether he wants to remain a Republican or switch to the Democrats, ending the speculation and rumors.

Randall Swartz, Joshua Alper, and Stephen Powers: A giant Canada geese trap with the ability to hold about 2,000 such geese and postage for mailing the trap to Canada.

Acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald: The removal of "acting" before his present title.

Chairmen Mark Lombardi and Thomas Schmitt: Perhaps a chess set or some other new hobby to take up the hours of free time they'll have on their hands when they don't run for reelection in March.

The Winchester School Committee: Another $189,100 state bonus to be spent on education in Fiscal Year 1994, so they don't have to beg the Finance Committee for money.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer: A $6 million ready-to-install water filtration plant.

Selectman William O'Leary: A declaration from President Clinton that requires state and federal governments to pay for all programs mandated to local authorities.

The Field Study Committee: A call from President Bush saying he has turned down the jobs of presidents of Yale and Major League Baseball and is interested in the position of Winchester Field Czar (at no cost).

Selectman Peter VanAken: An unlimited amount of money to fund the capital budget and finally repair the McCall windows.

Clarence Borggaard: A 1993 opening to the Wedge Pond Beach and a complete renovation of the beach house.

Wade Welch: One or two fewer court battles in 1993 and perhaps fewer landmark settlements would probably be helpful.

Joseph Tabbi: A pied piper to lead the multitude of raccoons out of town.

Elaine Vreeland: A week without a letter from Exxon on the cleanup effort at 586 Main.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 19 — Report No. 51
Massachusetts House and Senate
Dec. 14 - 18, 1992

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on three roll calls and local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of Dec. 14 through 18.

PAY HIKE VETO (H 6208) — House 85-21, Senate 29-5 overrode Governor Weld's veto of a 10 percent pay raise for 50,000 state workers. Override supporters said workers have not had a hike in four years and are entitled to this reasonable increase. Opponents said the hike is excessive in light of the hundreds of thousands of unemployed citizens in the state. They argued the raise may result in cuts in other programs. (A Yes vote is for the hike. A No vote is against it).

Rep. Paul Casey voted yes.
Sen. Charles Shannon voted yes.

SCHOOL AID (S 48) — Constitutional Convention approved 95-91 (House approved 83-63, Senate rejected 28-12), a further amendment to an original proposed constitutional amendment eliminating language from the state constitution which prohibits public aid to private and religious institutions. The further amendment still eliminates the language but replaces it with a ban on public aid to private schools.

Senate President Bill Bulger (D-South Boston) proposed the original amendment which he said is designed to eliminate offensive language placed in the constitution by the anti-Catholic Know-Nothing Party. He claims his amendment will not allow state aid to private schools which he argued is prohibited in other sections of the constitution.

Opponents of Bulger's original amendment said the offensive language was eliminated many years ago and expressed concern that Bulger's amendment goes too far and will open the door to state aid to private schools. In response, they successfully attached new wording which they said will insure the ban.

Bulger and his supporters said the new language is unacceptable. Reconsideration of passage of the further amendment is scheduled for Dec. 21. (A Yes vote is for the further amendment banning public aid to private schools. A No vote is against the further amendment).

Casey voted no.
Shannon voted yes.

TERM LIMITS (S 48) — Constitutional Convention rejected 128-59 (House rejected 101-46, Senate rejected 27-13) a motion to move the proposed "school aid" amendment to the end of the convention agenda. Supporters said moving this and several other proposals to the end of the calendar will allow consideration of the initiative petition limiting the terms of elected officials. They noted they have the 50 votes required by law to give initial approval to the petition signed by more than 72,000 voters, but claimed their efforts are being thwarted by term limit opponents who used their majority vote in May to move the matter to the end of the calendar. Opponents offered no arguments. (A Yes vote is for moving "school aid" to the end of the calendar. A No vote is against moving it).

Casey voted no.
Shannon voted yes.

INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT (H 6298) — House 93-48, approved an economic development bill amendment increasing the investment tax credit from one percent to three percent. Amendment supporters said this increase will promote investment and job creation and enhance productivity. They noted Massachusetts has lost 217,000 manufacturing jobs since 1984.

Opponents said the increase will result in a $7.6 million loss and argued that these kinds of changes in state, as opposed to federal tax policy, have no substantial impact on whether plants are opened or jobs are created. (A Yes vote is for the increase to three percent. A No vote is against it).

Casey voted yes.

Furthermore, the family members coming for Thanksgiving were also partly disabled and could not help.

I asked a fireman if the Fire Department could help. With the on-duty lieutenant's permission, three fire department ambulance personnel lifted father to his stair climber, and then lifted him down the last few steps around a corner to the first floor that the stair climber does not negotiate. Later, the three officers managed to stop on their way back from an ambulance run to the hospital and helped dad return to his second-floor room. This enabled dad to have Thanksgiving dinner on the first floor with family members. The Fire Department officers who helped us were: John Gath, Peter Gove and Paul Tonnelo.

As you probably know, Vincent Carroll served in the Winchester Town Meeting for 62 years. It was nice to see today's fire department extend extra kindness back to a man who served the town for so many years.

Since Thanksgiving, father has made progress through physical therapy, and it now seems that he will be able to get downstairs for Christmas with just me steadying him.

Troop 503 wreath sale termed success

To the editor:

The scouts and leaders of Boy Scout Troop 503 extend their sincere thanks to the people of Winchester, who's generous support has helped to make the troop's 31st annual wreath sale a success. The wreath sale is the troop's only fundraising effort and provides money used to support the troop's camping and activities program, the scout's registration fees, and tuition for leadership training courses for senior scouts. The annual sale also permits the scouts to learn about salesmanship and to earn commissions.

The scouts make an effort to contact all households during the sale. If you would like to be included on our list of regular customers, please contact Dick Schrock (721-1229) or Steve Galli (729-5239).

Once again, Troop 503 thanks you for your support and wishes all a happy and healthy holiday season and New Year.

Nursery school thanks one local merchant

To the editor:

Walking through the freshly repainted Vinton Room each day at Neighborhood Cooperative Nursery School (locatd in First Congregational Church) gives such a lift to each of our spirits that we are moved to join in a resounding Thank You to Mr. Charlie Allen, owner of Fresh Paint & Wallcovering Co. on Waterfield Road, for generously donating all of the paint that went into the project.

The Vinton Room, commonly known as the "Bike Room" is used daily by all of our children at Neighborhood Cooperative. The scene of great and exuberant activitiy, this is where our children ride bikes, learn to dance and sing, and clamber up, down and around on our giant playstructure. High praise to Mr. Allen and Fresh Paint for helping to make the Vinton Room such a bright and cheerful place for our children to play.

Not everyone with cerebral palsy was born yesterday.
Although the brain damage that results in cerebral palsy most commonly occurs before, during or shortly after birth, the effects are life-long. And 500,000 to 700,000 Americans of all ages are daily meeting the challenges of this condition.
Cerebral palsy affects mobility. It can impair sight, hearing, or speech, or cause involuntary muscle movements. But it doesn't change the desire to be productive or to feel self-worth.
At United Cerebral Palsy we're finding ways to manage the physical handicaps – giving people with cerebral palsy the information and skills they need to make meaningful contributions. Because no matter how long ago they started living with cerebral palsy, with our help – and yours – they can live more productively . . . starting right now.

'Archifair' held at the Boston Architectural Center

On Saturday, Nov. 14, Adina Curreri from Winchester High School participated in "archifair," the first annual architectural fair for high school students, hosted by the Boston Architectural Center. Similar to a science fair in concept, "archifair" showcased architectural projects designed and brought in by high school students from the Greater Boston area.

"Archifair" featured a daylong program. After presenting their work, students participated in a typical studio class at the Boston Architectural Center, focusing on the history and theory of architecture. In the afternoon, entrants participated in a mini-charrette competition. Based on a design problem, students developed and built models on the spot. At the end of the day prizes were presented based on the work students had brought in as well as the work done in the competition. Adina Curreri won second prize.

The activities were intended to increase students' understanding of the ways in which architecture affects daily life and how the profession is studied and practiced, to help students and their teachers become aware of architecture as a career with many opportunities, and to discover, recognize and promote talent among high school students.

Red Cross helps 34 families followingfires

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay staff and volunteers have responded to a rash of fires in Cambridge, Roslindale, Chelsea, Hyde Park, Everett, Somerville, and Woburn. Since Thanksgiving, Red Cross has provided free disaster assistance to 34 families; 115 individuals, almost half of those affected are children.

Red Cross is helping the affected families meet their immediate, emergency needs for food, new clothing, temporary shelter, and other basic necessities. Red Cross has also provided the fire victims with comfort kits of personal hygiene items and "smoke kits" to assist in cleaning up. All Red Cross disaster assistance is free to those in need and is supported through financial donations from the American public.

Anyone interested in helping Red Cross help these fire victims and victims of other disasters may send a financial donation to: American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund, c/o American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, 99 Brookline Avenue, Boston, MA 02215.

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, a non-profit agency, responds to an average of one fire per day in the greater Boston area. Red Cross Disaster volunteers, on-call every day, 24 hours a day, help 1400 families each year. 7 out of 10 fire victims assisted by Red Cross are from urban areas in Boston and surrounding cities. Red Cross annually spends over $350,000 in local disaster relief.

In response to these fires and an increased awareness about fire safety, Red Cross encourages all residents to plan and get ready to handle a fire emergency. Preparing yourself and your family can save lives and property. The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay is a valuable resource to help prepare for and cope with fire emergencies and to learn what safety measures to apply when fire happens.

Middlesex Canal Association kicks off fundraising events

The Middlesex Canal Association begins their bicentennial celebration of the association.

Gov. John Hancock signed the charter for the canal in 1793. Actual building of this best known early yankee canal started in 1794 and was completed in 1803 and remained in operation until 1853.

The Middlesex Canal was built to connect Boston Harbor with the Merrimack River in Lowell. Canal towns, starting from the millpond terminal in Charlestown, were Charlestown, Somerville, Medford, Winchester, Woburn, Wilmington, Billerica, Chelmsford and Middlesex Village in Lowell.

The bicentennial celebration will be held for the next 10 years during which time the association will hold reenactments of the vital happenings that took place during the planning and construction of the canal.

The first reenactment will focus on the original meeting of the Middlesex Canal promoters that took place in Union Hall of the old Blanchard Tavern in Medford. Thus the first reenactment will take place near the site of the Blanchard Tavern at the present Medford Senior Citizen Center, on Oct. 17.

According to A major part of the celebration is to be a publication of a pictorial history of the Middlesex Canal written by Carl and Alan Seaburg and illustrated by Thomas Dahill. This will be in story form and describe in first person, trips on the canal.

In order to raise money for the above enterprises the Middlesex Canal Association is selling richly colored posters, reproductions of a unique primitive style painting (1835), believed to have been painted by Mrs. Thomas P. Smith, an art teacher and widow of the headmaster of the Mystic Hall Seminary on Winter Hill. The painting is entitled "A View from Medford." In the foreground is a charming group of a top-hatted gentleman, with two elegantly dressed ladies and a little child looking out from a bluff at the panorama of the Middlesex Canal, horses pulling a packet boat, canal locks, a tollhouse, tavern, elaborate houses including the Seminary, and an early railroad engine and cars crossing over a bridge on the Mystic River. Overhead is a hot air balloon.

Posters in Winchester are being sold by the Winchester Art and Frame, Church Street; Frame Haven, Waterfield Street; Hendersons, Main Street and Book Ends, corner Main and Mount Vernon. The price is $10. For information, call Fran VerPlanck at 729-2557 or call 396-8574.

Families celebrate

exchange gifts, sing hymns, and eat food from oils, to represent the oil that lasted eight days. One popular game is a dreidel, which is a block on top of spinning cone. Members of the family guess which side the top will fall on. The four sides have Hebrew letter on each which represent "A great miracle happened there."

As the Christians have their Christmas Trees, the Jews have their Menorahs. The Menorah is a nine-branched candelabrum that represents the eight days the candle burned in the Temple after it was rededicated by the Maccabees. (The ninth candle is called a servant candle and it is used to light the other eight candles.) One candle is lit on each of the eight days of Hanukkah, and at each lighting, a blessing is given. The candles are usually lit at night and no work is done while the candles are lit.

It is traditional for Jewish families to stick the Menorah out the window. Rabbi Kudan said that this shows a sign of pride in the Jewish religion on a holy day that represents the overthrowing of a regime that long suppressed expressions of Judaism.

This year's celebration of Hanukkah is special for Winchester's Jewish families because they too are in a sense rededicating their Temple. In October, Temple Shir Tikvah merged with Temple Judea of Stoneham.

Rabbi Kudan said the holy day, which represents religious freedom, has taken on added importance because of the events in the lives of Jews in the 20th-century. "This holiday has taken on new significance in modern times with the birth of the state of Israel," said Rabbi Kudan.

While some Christians see Hanukkah as the equivalent to Christmas, Rabbi Kudan said it is a minor holy day when compared to others such as Yom Kippur. The dual holy days can present a difficulty in mixed marriages. Rabbi Kudan said he finds that children who are asked to practice two religions are the ones with the problem. "The child should be clear as to what religion they themselves are and they should accept the religion of the other parent," said Rabbi Kudan.

Rabbi Kudan said the two holy days are similar in that they are "festive occasions" and he said that it is possible to enjoy a "happy convergence" between the two holidays. "There is no reason (for Jews) not to enjoy Christmas with Christian friends and family. As long as they are clear of their own identity," said Kudan.

350 children whose mothers are jailed at MCI-Framingham. On Monday, an Army Christmas shop will open in the agency's basement, offering free "shopping" to 400 families.

"Community support has been tremendous," said Livingston, overseer of the flow of clothes and food, toys and money. He described a dentist who dropped off a sack of new toys, a woman who donated 25 turkeys.

Livingston, who moved from New York City to Natick in July with his wife and two children, said he felt lucky to "assist and touch people's lives."

"Jesus Christ lived among us. He, too, had good times and bad times," said Livingston. "We can discover what Christmas truly means by sharing with each other."

A Salvation Army kettle tender outside the Fabric Place echoed Livingston's comments.

"It's real nice when people dig deep and give what they can," said Robert Recko, an unemployed cook. "You never know when you'll be the one needing help."

The Winchester Star and other Harte-Hanks Community Newspapers are once again co-sponsoring the annual Salvation Army Holiday Fund, which raises money to help out needy families throughout MetroWest during and after the December holidays. Town to refund which will be mailed in January. Town Manager Chadwick Maurer estimated that the town will have to give back approximately $200,000 to residents.

Selectman William O'Leary said that the selectmen changed their interpretation of the Town Meeting decision and not the will of Town Meeting.

Maurer said even if the town had made the decision to prorate when they issued the second-quarter bills, they did not then have the means available to split the bill according to fiscal year. Maurer said a new computer system can now generate a bill that would be similar to the actual reading if the meter had been read on July 1.

Along with crediting the third-quarter bills, the selectmen also voted to prorate any bills in the future in which rates were increased.

Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt said that residents should wait for their credits and pay their second-quarter bills as sent to them. "Residents should pay the entire amount. Those who have not sent in full payment will be considered delinquent," said Schmitt.

An accelerated program was instituted earlier this year to have all of the water rates read electronically. Previously, the bills were estimated on a town-wide basis.

Mutual funds, one avenue for investors

by David R. Simmer, JD, MSA
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

This is one in occasional articles on financial matters that the Star will publish.

Since their inception nearly 70 years ago mutual funds have become an increasingly popular investment alternative. Investors have accumulated over one trillion dollars in these investment pools. Amazingly, there are now more mutual funds than there are stocks on the New York Stock Exchange.

While mutual funds aren't for everyone, they do represent one of the most appropriate options for investors seeking diversification, professional advice and certain service features. But as with everything, these advantages do come with a price tag.

Mutual fund investors are actually investing with an investment company. The money accumulated is managed by the investment company for the purchase and holding of various securities consistent with the purpose of the fund. So, rather than owning stock or bonds of a particular company or obligations of the federal or state government, mutual fund shareholders own a small portion of a pool of diverse investments.

The pricing and value of mutual fund shares are also unique. Mutual funds are not traded on an exchange like the stock of public company. Stock prices vary as the demand for a fixed number of shares rises and falls. Demand determines the price.

With mutual funds the number of shares varies with the demand. Every time a new investor wants to become a shareholder the mutual fund expands the number of shares issued. To make sure that both existing and new shareholders are treated fairly the mutual fund determines the value of a share each day. The value represents a ratable portion of the assets of the fund. The price for a new shareholder is determined by dividing the total assets of the fund by the number of shareholders. This is called the Net Asset Value or NAV.

When a mutual fund shareholder wants to sell, the fund redeems (or repurchases) the investor's shares. Just as with the purchase, the redemption price is determined by calculating the Net Asset Value of the fund.

Mutual funds give investors the opportunity to hold an interest in a broad array of investments and to benefit from the investment acumen of the fund managers. The funds typically compliment this with services including 800 numbers, the privilege to switch between funds by telephone, systematic investment and withdrawal features, to name a few.

The savvy investor understands that all these advantages aren't free. There are the costs of attracting and holding new shareholders. Some funds charge a load — i.e., a one—time sales charge which comes out of the amount invested. Others make investors pay the load if they withdraw their investment within a specified number of years. Most "no-load" funds still charge an annual fee for advertising to attract new investors. All charge a fee for providing investment advice and to defray the expenses of the various services provided.

Unfortunately determining a good fund is not as easy as looking for one with the lowest fees or the most appealing advertising. Some with low fees have similar performance, and some with high fees have still managed to reward investors handsomely. And, unfortunately, last year's stars are not guaranteed to repeat.

Without question mutual funds hold many advantages for investors. But as with all investments they should be purchased based upon a full appreciation for the benefits and the associated costs and after thoughtful consideration.

The opinions expressed are those of the author and not of the Winchester Star or its editorial staff. Prior to implementing any financial advice, readers should consult with their personal financial advisers.

WINCHESTER PEOPLE

Winchester resident participates in St. Michael's College Career

Gregory F. Eibell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eibell of Richmond Road, was one of 53 St. Michael's College seniors who participated in a career placement trip to New York City, on Nov. 23 and 24. Eibell is a journalism major at St. Michael's College in Colchester, Vt.

"The trip provides students with the opportunity to explore a variety of industries and career options, and to network with professionals before they actually begin their career search," said Sarah Sipperly, St. Michael's career development coordinator. The career trip is an annual event sponsored by the St. Michael's College Student Resource Center.

While in New York, the students obtained valuable information from presentations made by representatives of various businesses located in or near New York City. Most of the presenters were St. Michael's College alumni. CCM Capital, Lord & Taylor, NBC, Aetna, Williamtown Theater Festival, and Orchard Books were among the 14 companies that participated in the program held at Fordham University. MULTICULTURAL NETWORK

Teaching ESL in Winchester

by Denise Pappas

Teaching English as a second language evokes sepia images of illiterate refugees — transplants of economic or political necessity, bent over crude English primers, chanting in unison: "I am, he is." Not so today, in Winchester. The gifted people I "teach" at Winchester High School through the Department of Recreation are prosperous, global professionals with an average of six years of English education behind them. Unlike some earlier world travelers, they have not checked their native identities at U.S. Immigration. Rather, they thrive by combining two cultures — "the American way" and their own.

Sulo Hamalainen from Finland, Uki Maruoka from Japan, Margarita Neira from Venezuela, Friederike Schmidt from Austria, Jerzy Sizmiginowski from Poland, and Doris Tsukakoshi from Singapore are all courageous global adventurers — real-life examples of technology traders in the global village. My lessons to them include explanations concerning American school systems, dating customs and financial values and norms. These ideas are studied in the context of our national "pursuit of happiness."

Their lessons to me include viewing my country from an international perspective. They praise Winchesterites as "open," "kind," "friendly" and "polite," but they worry when their children are ashamed of their own bilingualism. Could this echo our own family history when our grandparents were chided for using native languages? My students fear America's obsession with weapons, and they find comfort in their native countries' stronger consensus norms. Above all, they are brave travellers I have had the pleasure to know.

The winter term English as a Second Language class offered through the Winchester Recreation Department begins Jan. 21.

Schmitt pulls out

ing the board for negative reasons. "I enjoyed working with my colleagues. I am not tired of it."

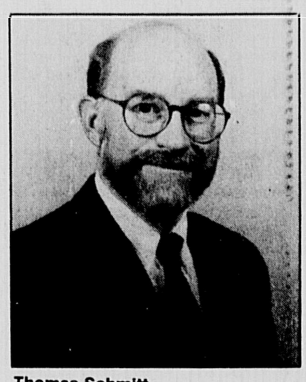

Schmitt's decision came one week after he told the Star that he would not be making a decision until after the first of the year.

Nomination papers are available after the new year, and Schmitt's decision will no doubt set off more speculation and will give prospective candidates a reason to jump in with no powerful incumbent to face. No one has yet declared his candidacy for the Board of Selectmen in the March election.

Schmitt has found a niche on the board, and his skills as a negotiator and his quick wit have garnered him the chairman's gavel for the last year of both of his terms.

Under Schmitt, the board worked on the town's water system, numerous legal settlements, and recycling.

If Schmitt decides to run for the state Legislature, he will bring much experience on state issues. As a selectman he has grappled with issues that resonate on both the local and state levels.

NEWS NOTES

Casey announces $2 million in grants

Saying that proper medical care for delivering babies is vital in the process of carrying a child to term in a healthy manner, State Representative Casey recently announced the state has released some $2 million for prenatal programs. The initiative will be carried out by the commonwealth's Department of Medical Security.

Several nurse-midwifery and community health centers will be receiving a portion of the $2 million set aside for the plan.

"I am particularly pleased with the size of the grant," commented Rep. Casey. "By including $2 million for this initiative, we are doubling the amount from last year. This increase certainly reflects the commitment my colleagues and I have for protecting both the mother and child at birth," said Rep. Casey.

The funds will go towards such programs as childbirth education for young mothers and training of professional care technicians. Mothers-to-be will have the chance to learn the essentials of child care as well as the issues surrounding birth. Many of these programs will reach out to minority parents with language barriers.

According to Rep. Casey, training will be available for neonatal nurse practitioners, prenatal health care providers and a range of supportive positions. "By properly training staff and families, the newborn children stand a much greater chance of avoiding complications at birth. Preparing all parties involved in the delivery is essential," said Rep. Casey.

Representative Casey added that anyone interested in obtaining further information about the grant program should contact the Department of Medical Security at 1-800-238-0990.

Representative Casey sponsors rate-relief legislation

Representative, Paul Casey, recently sponsored rate-relief legislation that demands greater participation by the state and federal governments for the $6.1 billion Boston Harbor Cleanup. Proclaiming 1993 as The Year of the Ratepayer", Representative Casey explained that if Senate 921 passes, "Ratepayers will save $130 per year on their water and sewer bills."

The legislation seeks state participation by having the Commonwealth absorb 50% of the debt service costs for all capital projects mandated by the federal Clean Water Act and the federal Safe Drinking Water Act. Rep. Casey stated, "This bill will give my constituents crucial rate relief. The debt service to pay for the Boston Harbor cleanup is unbearable. Ratepayers are drowning in the costs associated with the harbor cleanup and will continue to sink unless the state starts helping to pay for half of the debt service."

Representative Casey explained that the legislation will benefit projects to be built throughout the Commonwealth, "The State's widespread need makes me confident that the legislation can be passed. In addition to Boston, the harbors in New Bedford, Salem and Gloucester are all facing federal court orders. Working together we should be able to get this legislation passed."

Rep. Casey also warned that the federal government must not be allowed to walk away from its financial responsibilities, "We have all heard empty promises about paying for the cleanup. However, until we actually have the check in our hands we must continue to demand that substantial federal dollars begin flowing to the Harbor Project."

Rep. Casey is a member of the MWRA Legislative Caucus. The caucus was created in 1991 by the MWRA Advisory Board in order to protect MWRA ratepayers' interests on Beacon Hill. The caucus initiates legislation that will create rate relief in addition to working to defeat any legislation that would add increased costs to ratepayers. Last year the Caucus successfully repealed the water tax and an inflated prepayment debt saving ratepayers $42 million.

Dreamed Brook is typical of John Wawrzonek's fascinating dye transfer nature photography coming to The Arthur Griffin Center Saturday, Dec. 26. Titled "The Hidden World of the Nearby", the exhibition demonstrates what the Boston Globe has called "a mind-bending treat." Wawrzonek's works capture and lure the viewer right into the picture. The Griffin Center is open Thursday through Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

Wawrzonek opens at the Griffin Center

John Wawrzonek, master at photographing details of nature and reproducing them in color intensive giant dye transfers, exhibits at the Arthur Griffin Center for Photographic Art, opening Dec. 26. Titled "The Hidden World of the Nearby", Wawrzonek's work has been described as "a mind-bending treat". The Boston Globe said Wawrzonek's photos "vibrate with life, texture, detail and color".

Using only a 4 by 5 camera, John Wawrzonek's images seem to draw the viewer right into the picture, as the Portland Press Herold observed, "until we are in another place, perhaps even forgetting that we are standing in a gellery".

Wawrzonek's dye transfers will be on exhibit through January and February. On Jan. 24 at 4:30 p.m. Wawrzonek will give a public talk at the Center, explaining how he discovers locations as well as the process by which he prduces the color saturated 20" by 24" images described by Art New England as "Beauty, sensitivity, and a touch of the divine". Members' cost: $2; nonmembers $4.

The Griffin Center is New England's newest museum. Built on Judkin's Pond in Winchester, the Center houses and exhibits many of founder Arthur Griffin's 50,000 photographs. Taken over a span of 60 years, Griffin's New England scenes, in particular, have become internationally recognized. The building itself is a replica of an old New England grist mill boasting a working 12-foot water wheel that intrigues youngsters. The Center is a nonprofit museum, open Thursdays through Sundays, 1-4 p.m. The building is handicapped accessible and a wheelchair is available.

Man arrested at gun point after car chase

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

Winchester police arrested a Lexington man at gun point after a car chase that ended when the suspect hit a police cruiser.

A 17-year-old Lexington male was charged by Winchester police with speeding and unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle on Dec. 20 after an early morning chase down Main Street. The suspect was also charged with speeding, failure to stop for police, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, reckless operation of a motor vehicle, failure to stop at a signal light, and a variety of lesser motor vehicle charges by Woburn police, who first chased the suspect from Woburn into Winchester.

Officers Thomas Romeo and Daniel Perenick were on patrol on Main Street near the Woburn line when they received a report on their radio at 1:45 a.m. that Woburn police were chasing a black motor vehicle. Shortly after, the officers spotted the black 1988 Oldsmobile traveling south on Main and pursued the vehicle along with a Woburn police cruiser. According to police reports, the vehicle was traveling at a very high rate of speed and did not have its lights on.

The vehicle reached 70 m.p.h. when police lost sight of it at the corner of Lake Street and Main. As Winchester police drove by Wedge Pond on Main, the Oldsmobile came out from the park area at Wedge Pond and tried to escape. As police turned their car around the Oldsmobile hit the back of the police cruiser. According to police reports, the damage to the cruiser was minor.

At this point, the Winchester officers forced the suspect from his vehicle at gun point. Woburn police placed him under arrest and transported him to the Woburn police station.

Police later determined that the suspect had tried to take a right onto Lake Street but could not make the turn. He then knocked over a traffic light, went through some bushes at Wedge Pond, and struck a tree. From that area he then drove onto Main Street where he struck the cruiser.

Peace and Light

Dear Friends in Winchester,

It is the season of light and of peace. It is, for some of us, the season of birth and rebirth. It is the season of generosity of spirit and openness of heart. It is also the season of story. The rituals and customs that we engage in at this time of year tell some of those stories - a new candle lit in a window each night at sundown, a tree trimmed with beloved ornaments, gifts given and received, chocolate gold coins eagerly awaited, nativity scenes set up, cards sent, special music played to gladden our hearts. All these activities repeated each year are part of the ways in which we tell the stories of our faiths and cultures, of our families and our individual lives. Our stories are who we are; they are what give us meaning and place in the world. Within each story, be it cultural or individual, are the memories that root us and the seeds of possibilities for our futures.

Stories are important. The great stories of our religious communities summon our attention at this season. For many of us who celebrate the feast of Christmas, it is the message of Jesus, called the "Prince of Peace." It is a message of universal love, summarized in the visit of the Magi-strangers and foreigners. In the shadows of a stable, in the presence of an infant, all are welcome and blessed. For those who celebrate the ancient feast of Chanukah, it is the remembrance of the rededication of the great temple - a feast of lights that commemorates the struggle for religious freedom and tolerance. In both these traditions are messages of acceptance and inclusion of the "other," and promises of hope and love for all the children of God.

It is, therefore, tragic that the stories of so many people in our world are unheard or ignored. Many are in danger of having their stories and their lives decimated and destroyed. The gift of diversity, of our different stories, becomes the obstacle that keeps us apart. We have only to consider the violent acts born of fear and hatred of the "other," acts of killing and war that fill our newspapers and television screens each day to understand and lament our difficulty in finding acceptance and common ground.

The tremors of the world are felt within our own community. There is much that we do in this town that attempts to foster the stories of us all- The Roxbury Tutorial Program, the many collections of food and clothing for pantries and shelters, the work of ENKA, to name a few of our efforts at outreach and service. These acts of charity, grounded for many of us in the tenets of our faiths, are praiseworthy, even essential. At the same time, there are an alarming number of instances when divisiveness and prejudice appear in forms of racism and anti-semitism, and where wealth is too often the criterion of worth. Remarks that hurt and injure go unchecked. Incidents of intolerance, bigotry and even hatred are ignored or minimized, with no voice raised in protest. Such silence serves only to undermine the richness of the stories within our community.

As religious leaders in Winchester, we confess our own participation in this problem. We must reflect deeply on the stories which give us voice and relate them anew to the members of our community. We must not remain silent, but rather, we must respond in faith. We challenge ourselves and invite other community leaders and residents of our town to join us. Together we can educate ourselves to the issues of justice at hand and strive to become more effective in overcoming intolerance born of misunderstanding and fear. As our different faith traditions enable us to engage in acts of charity, those same traditions will ground our acts of justice, for it is from our experience of faith that we gain our moral imperatives.

In this season of open hearts, we encourage the people of Winchester to become open, intentional listeners to each other's stories in order to learn of and celebrate the richness and potential in our midst. May we all find joy in the telling and the understanding of our stories, and may the God of love and peace dwell within our hearts, our homes and our community in this holy season and in the new year.

Winchester's Bob Bigelow teaches basketball to anyone willing to learn

By Jerry Spar
SPORTS EDITOR

He works with players from all other levels, so it only seemed appropriate that Bob Bigelow take a shot at trying to teach adults how to become better basketball players.

This is one reason why Bigelow began an adult basketball workshop, the first of which was held at the Woburn YMCA over the course of five Sundays in November and December.

Bigelow is a former Winchester High star who went on to a collegiate career at the University of Pennsylvania, which led to selection in the first round of the 1975 NBA draft by the Kansas City (now Sacramento) Kings. He played two years for Kansas City before a brief stint with the Celtics and a short stay with the San Diego (now Los Angeles) Clippers.

He currently coaches collegians and youngsters of all ages, and he works part-time offering analyses of New England college players for NBA Scouting Director Marty Blake.

So when the man talks basketball, he knows of what he speaks. And he is happy to share his knowledge with those who have the interest.

"I really enjoy playing – I still play now," Bigelow said. "I also very much enjoy teaching. One reason why is because I did so much with myself, working and training myself. A lot of what I did is from viewing and observing. That's why I very much enjoy the teaching.

"To go from a place like Winchester and four years later to a No. 1 draft choice is a long jump," he added. "I had to learn a lot along the way and work at it."

Bigelow tried coaching a team after his playing career ended, assisting a friend at Tufts University. He found out quickly it wasn't the road he wanted to take.

> "Most players who are self-taught end up doing these offensive skills in a way that's self-defeating. They get to a level that they can't get any better because their balance is wrong, their form is wrong. Then they become inconsistent players and they aren't sure why."

> Basketball coach

"I coached for a couple of years at Tufts, but it was not what I wanted to do, especially not at that level," he said. "I would rather help out individuals. I'd rather spread myself around. Coaching is middle management – you have to answer to athletic directors and other bosses. I really enjoy the teaching. And I don't want to recruit, which is a necessary evil in the college game."

So Bigelow went back to school, getting a business degree from Babson College.

He has since worked on a variety of ventures, including his many basketball workshops. He has clinics for high school and college players and he speaks at camps for younger participants.

This year, he decided to go after another area that was virtually untapped – adult recreational players.

"I had the idea about three or four years ago, talking to some of the guys at the YMCA who play at noontime," he said. "I quickly found out that at noon all they want to do is play, so I would have to find another time.

"Then I found out later on that someone else in the area was

Girls recover quickly after tough loss

By Jim McKenzie
SPORTS WRITER

If nothing else, the Winchester High School girls' basketball team learns from its prior shortcomings.

Winchester High School
BASKETBALL

Just four days after a 30-29 loss to Reading in which Winchester was nearly shut out over the last eight minutes of the contest, the Sachemettes hosted Stoneham. Coming alive down the stretch, Winchester defeated the Lady Spartans, 31-27, Monday at Winchester High.

Winchester managed just six points over the first 12 minutes of the second half, allowing Stoneham to tie the score at 23 with just under four minutes remaining in the game. But after coach Joe DiSarcina called a timeout, the Sachemettes responded with an eight-point spurt to repel the pesky Lady Spartans.

Jenna DeSimone started the Sachemette rally by taking an entry pass from Julie Russo and bulling her way along the baseline for a strong lay-in and a 25-23 Winchester edge. After a Stoneham miss, Esme Baker corralled a DeSimone miss and banked one in off the glass to up the lead to four with 2:56 left.

A fast-break layup from captain Liz Hare after a beautiful full-court pass from DeSimone and another offensive rebound and bucket from Baker completed the Sachemette run.

"We made one little change in the offense which gave us some low post options," said DiSarcina. "We finally hit a few of our shots."

Winchester needed to come alive late, as Stoneham's freshman phenom, Elena Palumbo, was hitting everything in sight. The 5-6 forward popped loose for five straight jumpers en route to a game-high 16 points.

Winchester was led by Hare and Julie Russo, with six each. Baker and Anna Betcher had five apiece. Though the offense wasn't sharp, and the free throw shooting (3 for 18) was suspect, DiSarcina was happy with the defensive effort.

"We got a win," he said. "Defensively, we're doing a good job. We're just not shooting well, and that's up and down the line. As we shoot better, we should do better."

The Sachemettes dropped a heartbreaker at Reading last Thursday, scoring just four points over the last eight minutes as the Rockettes came back from a 27-24 deficit to win, 30-29.

Neither team was on fire offensively, as both clubs had trouble working their set plays throughout the game. Winchester had a 19-14 lead at the half, behind the strong inside play of Baker (7 of her 9 total points in the first half) and Jenn Russo (all of her 6 points in the half), but scored just 10 points after the break. Julie Russo had eight points overall, including a

WHS wrestlers, gymnasts impress early

By Jim McKenzie

The word on both the wrestling and gymnastics teams at Winchester High School is that they're young – maybe a year away. But it didn't appear that way after looking at the results of both teams' first meets.

Winchester High School
ROUNDUP

The Sachem grapplers, supposedly in a rebuilding year, throttled Burlington, 58-12, at Burlington last Friday, while the gymnasts, despite losing their meet to Wakefield on Monday, racked up an impressive score of 119.8 – well above coach Mim Quine's expectations.

"We were way up from last year," said the thrilled Sachemette coach. "I feel absolutely great about the kids' efforts."

Winchester traveled to Wakefield knowing it would have to find a replacement for senior Andrea DeStefano, who sprained an ankle in practice last week and was unable to compete. But freshman Marisa McCarthy, who hadn't practiced in five months, received doctor's clearance to compete and turned in an outstanding all-around effort after just five days of practice.

McCarthy scored 30.2 in the all-around competition, trailing only teammate Megan Foley (32.5) and Wakefield's Rachel Ciarlante (32.3).

"She pulls those scores after all that time off?" Quine said. "I'd say she's someone to watch."

The entire Sachemette squad was "on" in the season-opener. Winchester took a short lead after the bars, led by Foley's 8.15. McCarthy scored 6.85, Kim Ciano 6.8 and Margaret Boettcher 6.75.

Wakefield forged a 60.05-58.75 lead after the beam, despite an excellent effort from Foley, who ripped off an 8.55. McCarthy followed at 7.9, Cheri Frost scored 7.2 and Ciano 6.55. The teams were in a virtual deadlock after the vault. Winchester grouped all four scorers, with Foley leading at 7.75, Ciano tallying a 7.7, Jen Clark a 7.6 and McCarthy a 7.5.

The meet came down to the floor exercise, where Wakefield pulled away, with three scores of 8-plus. Foley again topped Winchester, at 8.05, leading McCarthy (7.95), Boettcher (7.45) and Clark (7.05).

"(Wakefield's) floor was just awesome," marveled Quine, "but we turned in great scores, too. Overall, I'm very pleased. We were up 10 points from last year's first match, with one week less of practice. That's pretty good."

Another excited coach is wrestling leader Larry Tremblay. When he unexpectedly returned for his 13th season at the Sachem helm, Tremblay thought he had a nearly empty cupboard, but – suprise! The Sachem grapplers won 11 of 13 matches in a season-opening rout of Burlington.

"We wrestled unbelievably," said Tremblay. "I was really happy for our young kids."

After sophomore Mike Clare was pinned by a Burlington senior, 112-pounder Nate Haskell started a string of 11 straight Sachem winners with a first-period pin. Tony Feola (119) edged Burlington's Luke Lemelin, 12-10, before the Sachems really took command.

The next four WHS wrestlers – Tucker Bradford (125), Dave Carr (130), Jon Worthen (135) and Vincent Pepi (140) – all earned pins, with the first three coming in the first period. At 145, Wes Mathews kept the streak alive, coming back from the dead – trailing 10-3 – and pinning Red Devil Bill Cronin.

Dan Boffo (152) won his match 12-4, before Dave Drazen (160) and Mike Marino (171) pinned and Jeff Edmands pulled out a 13-12 win.

"It was Burlington's second match, and we always have trouble up there," said Tremblay. "I was a little nervous, but the kids came through with flying colors. We were young, they were young, but our young guys out-wrestled their young guys."

Winchester has one more league match remaining before the New Year, next Wednesday, Dec. 30, at Melrose (2 p.m.).

"We haven't lost a league meet since 1989," said Tremblay. "Hopefully we can make it to 1993."

Boys suffer road woes in initial defeats

Life on the road has not been kind to the Winchester High School boys' basketball team.

The Sachems, in the midst of a three-game road trip, dropped games to Stoneham, 70-61, and Reading, 47-44, falling to 1-2 on the young season entering Wednesday's game at Lexington.

The losses came in remarkably similar fashion. In both contests, Winchester was unable to hold late-game leads as the opponents' senior captains took over down the stretch.

On Monday, Dec. 21, it was Stoneham's Ed Hurley who made the difference, connecting for eight points in a stretch of just over four minutes late in the second half at Stoneham High, leading the Spartans from a 51-49 deficit to a 61-56 lead. The 6-foot-4-inch senior scored 19 on the night, and combined with senior guard Derek Sarchione (21 points) to deny Winchester.

The game was a seesaw affair throughout, with the lead changing hands 16 times before Stoneham broke a 53-all tie, putting the game away with a 17-8 run over the final 4:52. Brian Keefe, Winchester's junior captain, finished with a game-high 23 points after scoring just five in the first half.

Playing without starting center Sean Furey (out sick), Winchester had a tough time rebounding. Aggressive play by Todd Sundstrom (12 points, several after offensive rebounds) helped the Sachems to a 34-33 halftime lead, but the second-half edge on the glass went to Stoneham.

"The difference in the game was rebounding," said Winchester coach Quinton Dale. "(Furey) is a key element on our team. We really missed him."

The Spartans also had an advantage at the free throw line. Stoneham went to the stripe 18 times (making 12) to Winchester's eight (making five) in the second half.

Besides Keefe's 23, Mark Morrison, starting in place of Furey, threw in 16 while Sundstrom chipped in with a dozen.

The Sachems lost a tough one at Reading last Thursday when the Rockets' senior captain, Jim Murphy, swished a 22-foot three-pointer with eight seconds left in a 47-44 Reading win.

The Sachems fell into an 18-9 hole midway through the first half, but

Winchester skaters face league's best

If there's such a thing as a "good 0-2," then that's how the Winchester High School hockey team might have been feeling after consecutive losses to league powers Burlington and Reading.

Winchester High School
HOCKEY

Already crippled by inexperience, the Sachems lost two of their top defensemen by the end of the season-opener with Burlington, last Wednesday, Dec. 16, at O'Brien Rink in Woburn. Sophomore Matt Breuer missed the opener for disciplinary reasons, and Dave Duffy was forced out in the second period with a knee injury.

But an outstanding team performance, led by goalie Andrew Brown, kept the Sachems in the game until late in the third, when an Eric Petersen goal gave Burlington a 3-1 win. Brown stopped 29 Red Devil shots as Winchester forced the confident visitors to work for what was expected to be an easy two points.

Saturday night, Winchester entertained a heavily favored Reading squad and played much the same style, holding the Rockets to a 1-0 advantage before Reading broke out with a three-goal burst in the second en route to a 5-0 win.

"We lost," said Winchester coach Jack Newhall, "but we got two of the irons out of the way. We were outclassed by both teams – they're much bigger and stronger."

Local youngsters successfully dive right in

By Jim Kelly
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

In their first U.S. Diving competition ever, two Winchester youngsters proved that they can already compete with the best in their sport.

Kelsey Englebrecht and Ashley Boylan, both 9 years old, finished first and second, respectively, in the 3-meter springboard event at the 1992 Junior Olympic "Mug Meet" held at Northeastern University earlier this month. Boylan placed third and Englebrecht was fifth on 1-meter.

Inspired by their team's guest coach, three-time Olympic (including 1992) diver Veronica (Ronny) Ribot-Canales, the young hopefuls put on an impressive display of aerial artistry.

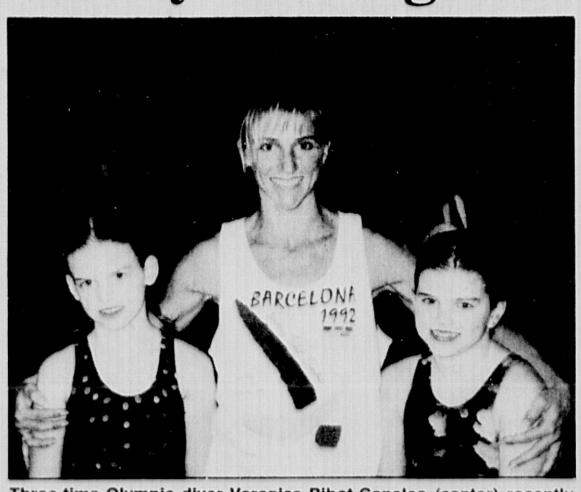

"The youngsters showed me a lot of courage," said Ribot-Canales.

"They performed great forward 1½s (somersaults) from 3-meter," added Boston Area Diving Coach Joe Chirico. "I think having a 1992 Olympic diver coach them the week before the meet really psyched them up. They really looked like they were enjoying themselves, even off the high board. Not every youngster gets the chance to be coached by a current Olympian like they did. Looking at the points they got for our team and how they dove, I'd say they got a lot out of it."

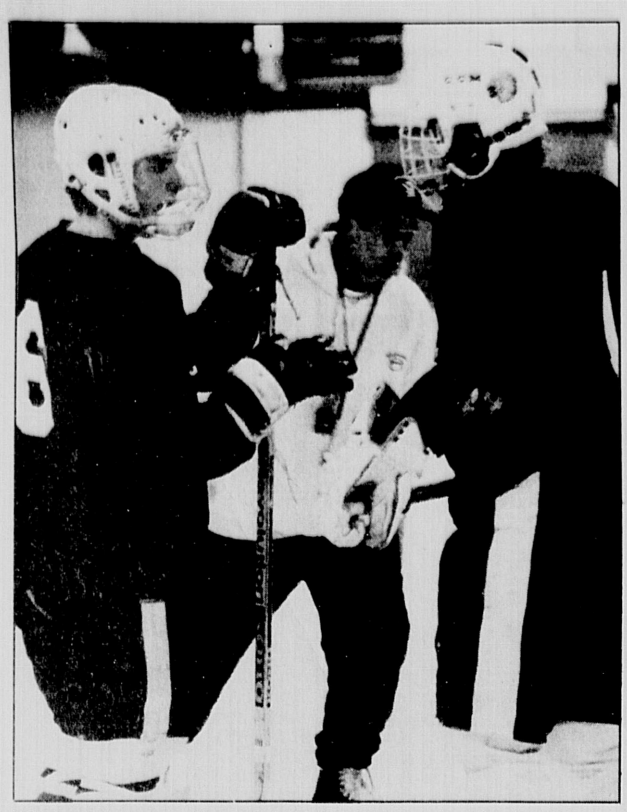

What makes their accomplishment even more spectacular is that they did it at New England's biggest and best U.S. Diving meet of the year.

Due to inclement weather, the number of divers competing was down but the level of competition was not. Fourteen teams from nine states, including Colorado, were on had for this year's meet. The Canadian diving teams, regulars at the meet, were forced to turn back because of the blizzard.

The daring aerialists are both members of Boston Area Diving, New England's Junior Olympic Champions 11 consecutive years. They have been diving for only a few months and train at Northeastern University. They continue to train for the New England Junior Olympic Diving Championships, to be held in the spring of '93.

trailed 2-0 in the middle period when sophomore Paul McGowan scored to cut the lead in half. Taking a pass from freshman Steve Cucinatti just inside the blue line, McGowan ripped a 55-foot slap shot over the shoulder of stunned Burlington goalie Steve Bardsley.

Winchester nearly tied the game moments later, as the exciting Cucinatti took a flip pass from McGowan and broke in alone on Bardsley, but Cucinatti's shot rattled off the post and Winchester went to the locker room down, 2-1. Petersen's third-period goal ended the spirited Sachem bid.

"We skated with them and played with them," said senior captain Andy Nolan. "We gave it a real good effort, especially without two key guys. Brownie was great."

Winchester was unable to keep up with Reading Saturday, as yet another loaded Rocket squad pulled away with the three-goal second stanza. Again it was Brown (32 saves) who kept Winchester in it early, turning aside several good Reading chances before Mike Dyment beat him with 3:55 remaining in the first. Winchester got 12 shots on Reading goalie Brian Trepaney in the first, but managed just five over the final two periods.

Reading, meanwhile, got goals from Chris Jennings, Ryan Dyment and Mike Flaherty in the second and one from Ryan Golden in the third to put Winchester away.

Winchester shored up its defense by putting reserve goalie Greg Carroll into action on the blue line. Bob Marrone and Joe Vaccari played most of the game for the Sachems, who look forward to seeing Breuer return to the ice.

"We get Breuer back for (Wednesday's game with) Stoneham," said Newhall. "He'll make a big difference."

The Sachems travel to Lexington Saturday for a post-Christmas meeting with the Minutemen. Game time at Hayden Rink is 7:30 p.m.

Undefeated Mites continue to shine

The Winchester Youth Hockey Mite AA team (9-10-year-olds) ran its record to 19-0 with recent victories over Woburn (5-3), Stoneham (12-1), Medford (10-2), Newton (11-1), Arlington (5-0) and Burlington (7-3).

YOUTH HOCKEY ROUNDUP

Also included in the win streak are non-league victories over Arlington's Squirt A's (6-4), Waltham (7-2) and Arlington's Squirt III's 7-5.

In the win over Woburn, Rugo Santini collected three goals and one assist, Brad Harvey had a goal and an assist and Andrew Clavette scored one goal. Adam Delaney-Winn, Anthony Martignetti and Charlie McLeman also had assists.

The Stoneham blowout saw Santini pick up six goals and one assist, McLeman and Tim Armstrong grab two goals and two assists each, and David Notartomaso score two goals. Martignetti had two assists while John Lynch and Danny Spang had one apiece. Billy Notartomaso played a fine game in net.

In the biggest game to date, the Mites faced off against second-place Medford. The scrappy Medford team stayed close to the first-place Mini-Sachems for one period, trailing only 3-1. The power of Winchester took over in the second period. Clavette collected four goals and David Notartomaso scored three. Santini (2) and Lynch (1) rounded out the scoring in the 10-1 win. Harvey picked up three assists and McLeman had two. Spang, Lynch, Santini, David Notartomaso and Bob Norberg, with one assist each, helped keep the Mites in first place.

On Nov. 29, Winchester defeated Newton 11-1. Santini led the way with seven goals and three assist, followed by Clavette (3 goals, 1 assist) and David Notartomaso (1 goal). Assists went to Spang (3), Mike Russo (2) and Eric Oliver (1).

Against arch-rival Arlington, the Mini-Sachems started slow. After playing to a scoreless tie in the first period, Winchester pumped in three goals in the second period and never looked back, winning 5-0. Bill Notartomaso played brilliantly while recording the shutout in goal. Armstrong (2 goals), David Notartomaso, Lynch and Santini scored goals, with assists to Santini (3), Russo and Delaney-Winn.

In the Burlington game, Winchester scored all of its goals in the first two periods and then relied on its stingy defense and goaltending by Jeremy Galvin to beat Burlington 7-3. Santini (3 goals), Russo, Armstrong, Clavette and David Notartomaso scored, with assists to Spang, Norberg, McLeman, Martignetti and Jake Henry.

The Mites, coached by Paul Notartomaso, Skip Clavette and Ron Martignetti, entered the holiday season looking to win the Arlington and Belmont holiday tournaments.

clutch jumper that gave Winchester a 29-26 lead with 2:27 remaining.

Reading won the game at the free throw line, where the Rockettes connected for six straight freebies over the last 3:35. Rockette sophomore Koleta Grover, at 5-11 easily the tallest Reading player, was perfect from the charity stripe, nailing her last four attempts to provide the winning margin.

Coach DiSarcina and assistant coach Joe Burke were visibly upset after the game with Winchester's play against the much smaller Reading team.

"They out-hustled us," said Burke. "Every loose ball, they came up with. It's so frustrating."

DiSarcina agreed. "Every deflected shot, every air ball, they were first to it. That's a sign that they were hungrier," he said.

Winchester's next contest is Tuesday (Dec. 29) when the Sachemettes host non-league foe Somerville at 5 p.m. at Winchester High. Wednesday, the Sachemettes entertain a tough Wakefield squad at 5:30 p.m.

Keefe (18 points) led Winchester back to an 18-all tie with a bucket from the corner, a three-pointer from the top of the key, and a beautiful no-look pass which led to an easy fast-break hoop for Kirk Minihane.

After a Morrison trey gave Winchester its second lead (the first had been 2-0) at 21-20, Murphy tossed in the last of his four first-half 3-pointers to help Reading to a 28-24 halftime lead. Murphy scored 18 of his game-high 25 in the first half.

Winchester used a much more aggressive defense on Murphy in the second half, and the Sachems scored the first five points to take a 29-28 lead. Reading got strong second-half play from senior Jon Cignetti and sophomore Bill Scott, who helped the Rockets to a 36-32 lead with 8:20 remaining, before Keefe took over the Sachem attack.

The 6-3 junior knocked down four straight jumpers, including a long three-pointer, as Winchester rallied to tie Reading at 41-apiece. A running hook shot from Minihane, who had trouble finding the range with his jumper, and a free throw from Morrison gave Winchester a 44-42 lead with 18 seconds left.

"The difference in the (Stoneham) game was rebounding. (Sean Furey) is a key element on our team. We really missed him."

Quinton Dale
WHS boys' basketball coach

After a Reading timeout, Murphy brought the ball upcourt, and with defensive ace Pete French just getting into position, Murphy let fly with a missile that found its mark with eight seconds left. To top it off, Murphy stole the inbounds pass and flipped the ball to teammate Cignetti, who was fouled and buried the free throws for the 47-44 final. Keefe's desperation shot glanced off the backboard with no time remaining.

"It came down to a long-range three-point shot," said Dale. "Pete was in good position. There's not much you can do to stop that."

The way Winchester played in the first half, falling behind by nine points early, bothered Dale, who stresses constant movement on both offense and defense.

"That kind of baffles me that we didn't come out strong," said Dale. "Basically, we gave a 28-minute effort tonight. We've got to give 32 minutes."

Winchester entertains Wakefield next Wednesday (Dec. 30) at 7 p.m. at the WHS gym. Despite the tough start to his first season as Winchester coach, Dale is generally pleased with the team's effort.

"It's early," said Dale. "We're still learning. All of these teams have to come to our place later in the season."

Each class meets for an hour and the term lasts for eight weeks. Equipment is provided by the Academy. Open fencing hours, when students may go to the Academy and practice, are included in the fee.

Easter Seals, Celts sponsor Shoot-Out

Hundreds of area youngsters have received invitations from Boston Celtics star Kevin McHale to participate in the 1992 Easter Seal/Boston Celtics Basketball Shoot-Out. Local schools and youth organizations have also been invited to participate.

Youngsters participating in the Shoot-Out collect pledges from family and friends for each basket shot during a three-minute period. A parent, teacher or coach signs off on the number of baskets completed. The shooter collects his or her pledges and sends the money to Easter Seals to fund services for people with disabilities.

Last year, nearly 5,000 youngsters raised $150,000 in Basketball Shoot-Outs all over Massachusetts. The top 100 fund raisers joined McHale and Dee Brown in the Boston Garden for a special basketball clinic.

This season, 100 winners will attend the clinic at Boston Garden on March 26, 1993.

For more information, call David Lamacchia at 1-800-922-8290.

New England Mariners baseball seeks players

The New England Mariners Baseball Club is currently recruiting potential players to compete in the 1993 AAU/Junior Olympics.

The club is an organization governed by the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) of the United States. The AAU/USA Junior Olympics, founded in 1948, has consistently been one of the largest and most successful programs of its kind in the world of amateur athletics.

The program consists of over 20 Olympic sports with several age classifications, allowing America's youth the opportunity to compete in regional and national tournaments. The Junior Olympics program teaches youngsters the importance of setting goals and striving to achieve and exceed those goals.

In 1992, the New England Mariners 14-year-old baseball team won the gold medal at the national championships, held in Minneapolis. The 13-year-old team placed 17th in the nationals held in Des Moines, Iowa.

In 1993, the Mariners will organize teams to compete in the 10-, 11-, 12-, 13-, 14- and 15-year-old divisions at the regional level, with the goal of competing nationally. The national championships will be held in the following cities in August: age 10 — Cleveland; age 11 — Kansas City; age 12 — Minneapolis; age 13 — West Des Moines, Iowa; age 14 — Cocoa Beach, Fla.; age 15 — Des Moines, Iowa.

The Mariners Club is organized as a supplemental program to local leagues such as Little League Baseball, Bambino Baseball, Babe Ruth Baseball, Senior Little League, Town Pony Leagues and American Legion Baseball. Each player is encouraged to participate in an organized baseball program in the spring and summer in their community.

The Mariners' goals not only include instruction and copetition, but development of friendships and memories that will last a lifetime. Most important, the program offers an alternative to alchol, drugs and other temptations the street corner has to offer.

The Mariners baseball teams will be selected from a series of clinics to be held in March for the 13-15-year-old divisions and in April and May for the 10-12-year-old divisions, at selected sites throughout New England. Clinics and practice sessions will be scheduled primarily on weekends to accommodate players who may have to travel long distances. Players will also be required to participate in fund raising activities to contribute to the expenses of the program.

The Mariners Baseball Club will hold its second annual instructional Winter Baseball Camp from February 13-20, 1993, in Orlando, Fla. Major League scouts and players will instruct on the proper mechanics of throwing and pitching, defensive drills and strategies, and hitting. The camp is limited to 24 players, ages 11-16, so as to give each player personal instruction and attention.

The Mariners Christmas Baseball Camp is scheduled to be held December 28-31 at the new Brandeis University field house in Waltham. Tentative plans include two sessions for ages 9-12 and 13-17. The instruction will be given by college, high school and Mariners coaches.

The organization is currently accepting applications for coaching positions. These positions are on a volunteer basis, with some expenses paid from the general fund. All travel expenses to the national championships are paid in full.

All player and coaching inquiries should be addressed to: New England Mariners, Inc., 12 Cornell Road, Beverly, Mass., 01915.

Bigelow teaches

BIGELOW, From page 1B doing it. I spoke to him, but he didn't want an ally, so we became competitors. And it was only natural that I held the first one at the Woburn Y because I'm on the board of directors there."

Bigelow managed to attract 11 players of varying ages and abilities for the sessions this fall. He broke down the sport to its fundamentals, working on giving the participants a better understanding of how they could improve themselves. He also focused on the skills he figured would benefit the players the most.

"When you're talking about teaching basketball at this level, forget about rebounding and defense," he said. "What you really want to focus on is offensive skills — shooting, passing, dribbling.

"Most players who are self-taught end up doing these offensive skills in a way that's self-defeating. They get to a level that they can't get any better because their balance is wrong, their form is wrong. Then they become inconsistent players and they aren't sure why."

Bigelow centers his clinics on getting players in control of their bodies.

Said Bigelow, "I try to teach the form and balance, starting with the 'ready' position — getting your body in balance, learning how to stop in control. I teach it at every level — youth, adult — how to come to a stop in control. That, in essence, is basketball. Once your balance is corrected, you'll have a better ability to shoot.

"It's an approach that is really not taught a lot. A lot of these skills are taught on a menu elsewhere. What I try to do is tie it in with a common denominator — the 'ready' position. Anybody who knows me knows this is what I teach first."

With the moderate success of his first venture into the adult market, Bigelow is planning more workshops. He is scheduled to teach one in Newton in February and March and he hopes to have another session at the Woburn Y in the near future, if the interest is there. He is still gauging that factor.

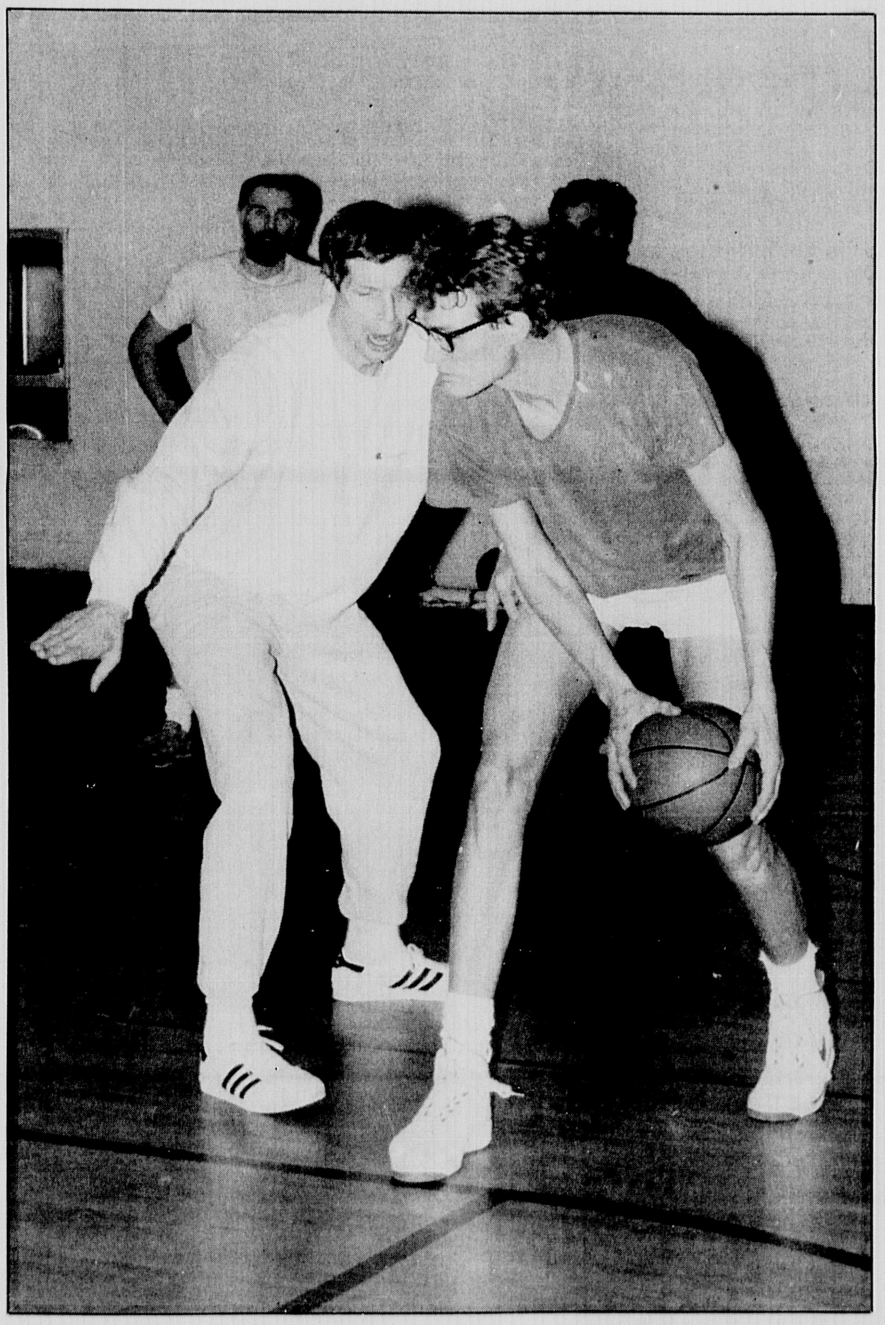

"From a pure marketing standpoint, I'm still trying to find out how large the market is for people who probably never played in high school but have a need to get better," he said. "I know there are people who want to improve their game. But a lot of it is ego. A lot of people don't want to admit they could use the help. And a lot of people think they're good, but they aren't."

Bigelow is also attempting to work with adults who want to coach the sport.

"I'm going to spend a lot of time putting together something to get at youth parents — those who want to teach kids," he said. "The next frontier is being able to train coaches of youth players. A lot of youth players are under-served. It's very difficult to train 8-10-year-olds. It's a very difficult game for a kid that young to play, because most of them don't have the physical strength in their arms, especially for passing and shooting. Once they reach the age of about 11-12 years old, their bodies begin to fill out and they can perform those skills."

If all goes well for him, there won't be a group of people Bigelow has not reached. The diversity is one of the things he finds interesting about the game.

"It's a nice game to play," he said. "It's a game that can be played well into your 30s and 40s. It's dressing up in t-shirts and sneakers, it's not expensive, there are plenty of gyms around. It's a terrific sociological laboratory because it brings together so many different types of people. It's really fascinating."

David Smith, a longtime educator at Shady Hill, and recipient of the "Breaking the Mold Award" by the U.S. Department of Education, gives us geography in his "Mapping the World by Heart" and the forthcoming "Profile Village." Plan now to meet your friends and neighbors by the Christmas tree on the Common Thursday night, Dec. 24, at 7 p.m. and bring your bells, flashlights and youngsters.

Fred Murray, formerly of the Music Department of the Winchester Public Schools, will again be on hand to lead and accompany us as we join in singing the beautiful old Christmas hymns as well as "Jingle Bells" and "Rudolph."

Musicians, who play wind instruments, are invited to support the carollers and should check in with Fred at 6:50 p.m.

Regardless of weather conditions, an estimated 200-250 townspeople will turn out to enjoy this community sing, a tradition unique to Winchester. Don't miss it!

Visit Stone Zoo during the holidays

Visit Stone Zoo daily from 10-4 p.m. or drive by after dark to see the festive holiday lights along the front of the zoo — many are in various animal shapes.

Coutry Club to host annual bonspiel

The Winchester Country Club will hold its 36th annual international mixed curling bonspiel (or tournament) on Jan. 7 through Jan. 10, 1993.

Curling is a game in which four - person teams slide polished 40 pound granite stones down a long sheet of ice to a target area. While one team member delivers his or her stone, the captain (called the skip), directs play from the opposite end. The other team members sweep the ice ahead of the stone to make it go farther if needed or to straighten its course. Do curlers wear skates? No, they wear rubber-soled shoes. The object is to get stones into the target, or "house", to knock out opposing stones, and to guard friendly stones.

This ancient game involves a great deal of strategy and can be very exciting. It is very popular in Canada and many of the northern United States. It is also played in the Scandinavian countries, Scotland, England, most European countries, and even Australia and Japan. Curling has recently been made an Olympic Medal Sport, which should broaden its appeal and promote increased competition.

Winchester's bonspiel will include up to seventeen teams, four fron Canada, several local clubs, Nashua, NH, Belfast, Maine, Schenectady, NY, and Cleveland, Oh.

"Mark your calendars!" Christopher Stevens practices for the Young Musicians Concert to be held Saturday, Jan. 2 at 4 p.m. at the Parish of the Epiphany to benefit AIDS patients and the hospice at Mission Hill (details will be available in the Jan. 31 edition.)

Look for adult courses to put a spark into long winter evenings. Learn new skills to improve or decorate your home in courses taught by our knowledgeable instructors. Create personalized gifts for your special Valentine in one of Madeleine DiCiccio's classes. Try new epicurean delights. Work off the extra calories in our expanded Focus on Fitness developed by Judy Whitney and Gail LaRocca. Expand your horizons and learn to express yourself in a new language.

There will be many new programs and events for children to help them escape winter boredom. Two new toddler/preschool programs, "Alphabet Soup" and "Story & Rhyme Time" will be taught by Annette Kennedy. Our special sports program for kindergartners entitled "Little Champions" is led by Jason Pressman. Jason is also the teacher of our extremely popular "Sports Champions" program which will be returning this winter. Students in grades three through five can join our "Pick Up Sticks" lacrosse program. Mr. Pirani, the instructor, is the high school lacrosse coach who will teach kids what lacrosse is all about. Judy Whitney will be teaching an afternoon aerobics program also for grades three through five called "Fit for Kids" on Wednesdays.

To receive a brochure, call 721-7125.

Instructors Wanted

Come share your talents with others by teaching a class for the Recreation and Community Education Department.

We are in the process of putting together our Winter and Spring brochures and would like to include new ideas. We are especially interested in having instructors in the field of cooking and music for adults. Our children's program is always seeking new programs and events to offer the community.

Classes can be for fun or educationally stimulating. They can be for one session or several. The design and scope of the class is left to the individual instructor. Instructors do not have to be a certified teacher, but should have a thorough knowledge of the subject matter. Class dates and time may be arranged to fit the instructor's schedule. Call 721-7125 or send a class outline to the Recreation Department.

38 Hours of Fun for middle school students

By popular demand, we will hold the February vacation group or "38 Hours of Fun" again. Imagine the complete February vacation, then consider an overnight at the Winchester Library, skiing at Waterville, food, fun and friends. Your middle-schooler can still have as much fun as if he or she traveled to an exotic place. To be ensured of a spot, call the Recreation Office, 721-7125.

Rec. Department sponsors "Festive Finale 1992"

Join with the recreation department to celebrate the final day of 1992 and herald the arrival of 1993. There will be activities for kids of all ages (2-82) from 1 to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 31. You can make craft projects with Annette Kennedy in the Lincoln School cafeteria. Bill Rich, Winchester's own talented caricaturist will be ready to capture the real you in the Lincoln School Lobby.

"The Adventures of Tom Thumb" a comedy with audience participation, performed by the City Stage Company and 22 members of the audience is sure to delight one and all in the Lincoln School auditorium. The Reminisants, a 50's and 60's band will be rockin' and rollin' in the gymnasium, so be sure to wear your dancing shoes, black leather jackets and poodle skirts. At the public library meeting room, Yvonne Coleman will keep you enthralled listening to stories of giants and fairy folk, appropriate for ages 4 and up. The town hall auditorium will be the place to play games. At 4:15 p.m. everyone will gather in the Lincoln School Gym to sing Auld Lang Syne while 1,000 balloons are released in celebration. Admission to all this fun is by "Festive Finale" button only, available in the Recreation Office, Cradock's Apothecary, Bookends, Topsy Turvy, and Henderson's Stationers. Santos appointed vice president of marketing Capital Equipment Corporation (CEC) President Kerry Newcom recently announced that Richard P. Santos, previously senior vice president of IRIS Graphics, has joined the company as vice president of marketing and sales.

As cofounder of IRIS Graphics, Santos had successfully launched and marketed numerous technologies and products. In addition, he identified markets for alternative graphic technologies, notably changing the pre-press industry's approach to color proofing.

Santos built and managed IRIS Graphics' worldwide sales organization, with distribution channels throughout North America, Europe and Asia. As a result, Santos pushed the company's sales growth to $37 million by 1991. Today, IRIS Graphics is the acknowledged worldwide leader in digital color printing and proofing.

Kerry Newcom, president of CEC noted that, "Mr. Santos drove the marketing and sales force at IRIS Graphics. With his prior experience and accomplishments, Richard will help Capital Equipment Corporation capture a larger share of the IEEE 488.2 instrumentation marketplace."

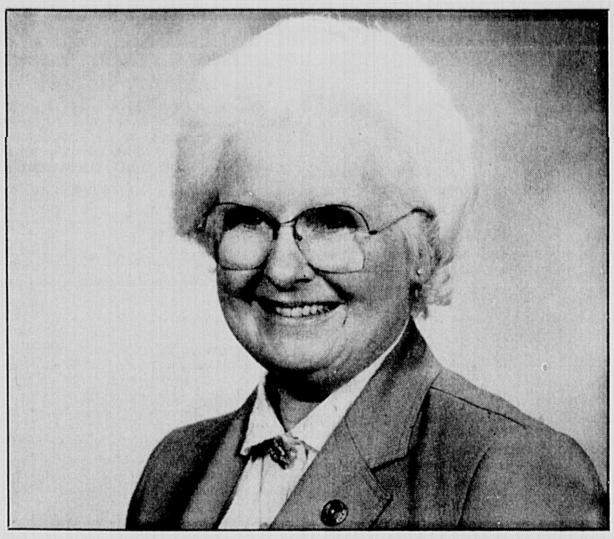

Prior to joining IRIS Graphics in 1984, Santos played a similar role at Raytheon Company, building that company's graphic systems business to a status of $12 million annually. While at Raytheon, Santos was responsible for the sales of display advertising and editorial systems to major metropolitan daily newspapers worldwide.

Ashley Aiken, 6, is shown receiving "Snobell" presented by Judy Ober of Ann Blackham & Co. after the Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony.

Kirkendall reelected to treasurer's post

Trudy Kirkendall, broker associate with Century 21 Winchester Realty Associates, 40 Church St., Winchester, has been re-elected to a second term as treasurer of the state chapter of the Women's Council of Realtors (membership not limited to women).

WCR is a national group under the umbrella of the National Association of Realtors. Current membership is numbered at 18,000, of which 15 percent are men.

WCR was formed more than five years ago to give women a support group at a time when women were denied access to, or not accepted into real estate boards or associations. The current role of WCR is focused on preparing members for leadership roles.

Kirkendall recently attended the national Association of Realtors convention held in Hawaii. She attended many seminars while at the convention and was given a tour of million-dollar homes currently on the market, the highest priced being $9 million. Luncheon followed the tour with a guest speaker, a successful Beverly Hills, Calif., broker, detailing the techniques for marketing that specialized niche of million-dollar homes.

Kirkendall has been an active broker for the past 17 years. Her prior involvement in the Women's Council of Realtors has included the offices of vice president and president of the Greater Boston Chapter. She has also held office in the local Winchester Council "L" of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

She is a former president of the Winchester Historical Society and has chaired several historic open house tours for the organization.

Kirkendall is a graduate of Bentley School of Accounting and Bentley College.

R.H. Long Motors

Location: Route 135, Framingham

History: Richard Long, founder of R.H. Long Motors, was a former automobile manufacturer with Franklin, a car maker in the early part of this century. In the 1920s, having opened the Bay State Auto Co., he began manufacturing and selling his own cars, called Baystates.

In 1927, Long established R.H. Long Motors in an old shoe factory. He initially sold only Cadillacs, but later added both Pontiacs and GMC Trucks to the lot. R.H. Long Motors, now operated by Long's son, Charles F. Long, is in its 66th year, and is the oldest Pontiac and Cadillac dealer in the United States.

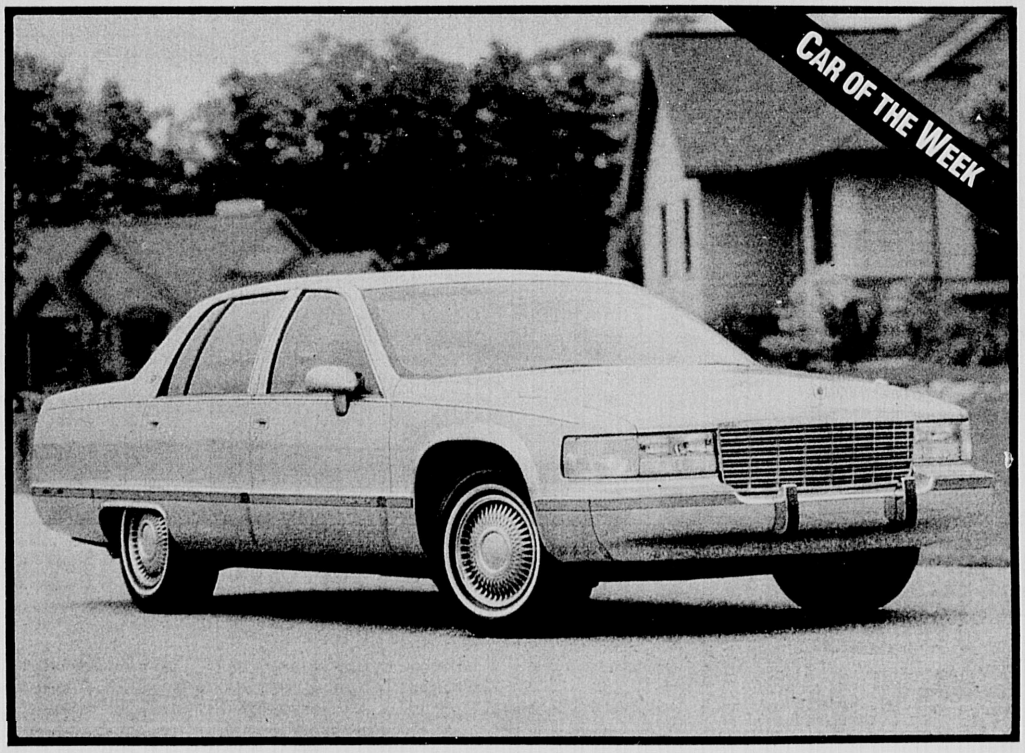

Type of Cars Sold: Pontiacs, Cadillacs and GMC Trucks, as well as a variety of used cars.

Hottest Sellers: Pontiac Grand Am and Grand Prix; GMC Sonoma and Suburban; and the Cadillac Fleetwood and DeVille.

Specialties: "What sets us apart from other dealers" is that R.H. Long Motors was founded and is run by the same family, says General Manager Julian Hargraves. According to Bill Leland, sales manager at Long Motors, this tradition has enabled the dealership to rely on repeat business and customer referrals for its continued growth.

However, with more than six decades of experience and growth, Long Motors has more to offer than the family touch. The dealership boasts a 44-stall features service department which allows Department Manager Tim Hutker and his crew to help customers properly maintain their cars This service has been increasingly helpful, notes Hargraves, as more people are keeping their cars longer and are maintaining them better. R.H. Long Motors is also the largest Pontiac parts dealer in the United States.

Cadillac Fleetwood

Combining style, technology, comfort and safety

The critically important position of the 1993 Fleetwood in the Cadillac lineup is reaffirmed with the introduction of the exciting and dramatically new six-passenger family car that combines today's styling and technology with traditional Cadillac luxury, comfort and safety.

"The Fleetwood holds a strategic place in the Cadillac portfolio," says John O. Grettenberger, general manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Division. "This new model lays claim to a solid core of specific Cadillac customers plus we believe it will be attractive to new buyers who want comfort and safety in a technically contemporary large rear-wheel-drive luxury car."

The Fleetwood's high visibility in the limousine trade and its targeted exportation to Japan and the Middle East are also factors in Fleetwood's continued strength for Cadillac.

Its high visibility in the limousine trade and its targeted exportation to Japan and the Middle East are also factors in Fleetwood's continued strength for Cadillac. The 7,000-pound trailer towing package option provides the highest capacity available on any passenger car in the world, Grettenberger notes.

In addition, the 1993 Fleetwood meets mandated 1997 federal standards for dynamic side impact testing and features

Chevrolet Caprice Classic LTZ

Big car with powerful engine

If you want to make a big impression on your neighbors, drive home in a 1993 Chevrolet Caprice Classic LTZ. This car is big from the word go.

KEANE ON WHEELS

By Tom Keane

Notice that I put emphasis on the words big and go; they are the essence of this report. This full-size sedan, that easily seats six people, will go anywhere — with power to spare.

The LTZ has a 5.7-liter V-8 engine that produces 300 pounds-foot of torque. That puts it in a class of its own. It has plenty of horsepower, too. Six people could put their luggage in the trunk, hitch a trailer to the rear and take off for the mountains. The engine can tow 5,000 pounds, which has an above average towing capability.

The down side is in miles per gallon. It is rated 16 city and 25 highway. Another drawback to city driving is getting in and out of traffic or negotiating a parking space. I tried to park it by a curb between two other cars and gave up because I couldn't see what I was doing.

It reminds me of cars of years ago. The instrument panel and hood are massive. The same thing applies to the front seat. The 6040 bench seat is extra large allowing plenty of room for a third person in the front seat. For the lack of a third person, a center armrest pulls down to add to the driving comfort. Even that is exceptionally large. The rear seat also has a pull-down center armrest, and everyone has plenty of head and leg room — even the sixth passenger seated in the front. The LTZ I drove had leather seats, an option that gave the interior a wealthy appearance, and reading lamps that added a touch of class.

There are storage areas on the doors, and in keeping with the current trend, it has a cup and coin holder. Naturally, it has all the power equipment you'd expect of a car in this price category. The windows,

Keep your tootsies warm on a cold winter morn

Auto Weekly features Ask the Auto Doctor, a question and answer column by car specialist Junior Damato. Damato's column will be featured twice a month.

Damato, an ASE Master Automotive Technician with 25 years experience, owns and operates a seven-bay garage in Boston His talents are twofold: repairing cars and verbalizing problems. As a result, Damato has a nationally syndicated "Auto Talk" radio show broadcast six hours every week. Damato can be heard on WHDH in Boston Sundays from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

ASK THE AUTO DOCTOR

By Junior Damato

Dear Doctor: I moved from Texas to Maine in September. I can't believe how cold it gets, but my fellow workers tell me they don't feel the cold until February. I own a Ford F150 pickup truck and do not have a garage. I would like to know what you think of engine heaters.

Steve T. Bangor, Maine

Dear Steve: Enjoy your new home. I park my Chevrolet pickup outside, as do a lot of people. I use an engine block coolant heater that is connected in the bottom radiator hose. Another type is a coolant heater that attaches to the heater hose.

Other types are freeze plug inserts and an oil warmer that is inserted in the dipstick tube. I've tried them all, and have found that the coolant heater that attaches to the bottom radiator hose works the best.

Select the proper wattage, install the heater and make sure the electrical wiring is securely fastened and there is nothing in the way of the fan belt. I have my heater on a timer. It turns on at 2 a.m. and turns off at 5:30 a.m. I get in the truck about 15 minutes later, and both the truck and heater are ready to go.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1987 Caravan with 56,000 miles on it. My question is about the heater, which isn't as hot as it used to be. My neighbor, who is a mechanic, told me to put a piece of cardboard in from of the radiator for the winter. I tried it and the heater is better.

Will this cause harm? I see lots of trucks with their radiators partially covered.

Nick D. Springfield, Mass.

Dear Nick: Big trucks have big radiator and diesel engines that run very cool. The radiators are oversize because of the heavy loads they pull.

Under certain temperatures and road conditions, a portion of the radiator is blocked to keep the engine at normal operating temperatures. But never use this practice on a car or small truck. If you have poor heat, get to the source, if the engine temperature doesn't get up to normal, the heater isn't the only thing affected.

It also affects the fuel mileage, emission and power. By blocking the air to the radiator, the engine could overheat causing severe damaged. Find an ASE certified technician to diagnose your heater problem.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1987 Isuzu Trooper II. It failed the safety inspection because of moisture in the left light assembly. I removed the assembly, checked for damage and it looked perfect. After drying the moisture I sealed the unit, but the moisture formed again. Do you have any suggestions?

Are there any technical service bulletins on this?

John S. Sterling, Va.

Dear John: There are no TSB on the moisture buildup in the headlight assembly. You were right removing the assembly, taking it apart and drying it, and reassembling it. I hope you used a silicone seal.

Unless you can seal the assembly completely, it will have to be replaced.

Dear Doctor: I hear you every week on the radio and have tried calling you but the line is always busy. My question concerns the computer in my 1987 Volvo 240. The computer failed at 18,000 miles and again at 35,000 miles. Could you tell me if Volvo has had any similar trouble. I lost faith in this car.

Tom C. Needham, Mass.

Dear Tom: I checked with both Volvo and Mitchell/On Demand System and there is no history of computer failure with you Volvo. At my shop, any time a computer fails, it is usually caused from an overload, voltage surge or moisture. Have a complete evaluation of the electrical system and fuel injection system by a qualified ASE technician.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1990 Toyota Camry with 50,000 miles on it. I have a reoccurring problem that everyone has given up on. After about a half hour of use, the cruise control will cut out while going at a steady speed.

However, the green indicator light stays lit. To get it to work again, I have to turn the unit off and on again, then reset the cruise speed. No one seems to have any idea how to correct it. Can you help?

William F. Sarnia, Canada

Dear William: This is a common problem. I am surprised that your local dealer is not aware of the Toyota Bulletin No. EL91-004.

The cruise control filter circuit to the ECU (computer) has been modified to reduce intermittent cancellation.

both driver's side and front passenger's side airbags.

The 1993 Fleetwood and Fleetwood Brougham represent an all-new body style. The Fleetwood is 4.1 inches longer than last year's model, bringing the length to 225.1 inches. It remains the longest regular-production car built in America. The width is 78.0 inches and the height is 57.1 inches. The wheelbase measures 121.5 inches, unchanged from 1992.

Fleetwood's body design gives it a modern, aerodynamic appearance with a reduced .36 coefficient of drag, dramatically down from .49 for the 1992 model.

Both the windshield and the back window are larger to incorporate a flush glass design, enhancing aerodynamics and reducing wind noise.

Fleetwood's front view is updated with a new grille integrated into the hood. The one-piece front and rear bumpers are nickel-chrome plated to match the new body side molding treatment. The rear of the Fleetwood has an all-new bumper system with a gray, grooved rub strip which extends around the entire perimeter of the car to provide a sweeping, coordinating appearance. Front and rear bumper guards are also standard.

Contributing to Fleetwood's quietness levels are one-piece stamped doors to ensure precise fit between body and doors.

All 1993 Fleetwoods have a new mini-wedge door latch and striker mechanism for secure interlocking between body and doors which also improves door opening/closing effort and safety. This feature is standard on all 1993 Cadillacs as is the extensive use of two-sided galvanized steel which is applied to side panels, deck lid and hood.

The 1993 Fleetwood, with special acoustical treatments and sealings, has improved wind and road noise isolation.

Test results above 30 mph have proven that the Fleetwood ranks among one of the quietest cars in the world.

All 1993 Fleetwoods have a new mini-wedge door latch and striker mechanism for secure interlocking between body and doors which also improves door opening/closing effort and safety.

Chevrolet Caprice Classic LTZ

seats, mirrors and door locks are moved with a touch of a button. Even the key ring has a remote lock control.

The trunk is large, too. Even with the spare tire, there is enough room to store the luggage of six passengers. The trunk lid has the low lift-over design, which is helpful when loading packages, but to utilize the full depth of the trunk you almost have to crawl into it.

The base price for a Caprice LS is $19,995, which has the standard 5-liter engine. The LTZ package has the 5.7-liter engine plus a sport suspension and a heavier frame, bigger brakes and tires and on and on. This package costs $1,075. The power equipment is part of another package, and the sound equipment is extra. In other words, a luxurious six-passenger sedan is $24,434.

The LTZ isn't the only package offered by Chevrolet, the Caprice has taxi and police packages, too. The Caprice is a big market for Chevy, but when the car was introduced, it looked too much like an armadillo. Now there are modifications; the wheels and tires are bigger, the wheel well is larger, giving the current model more eye appeal.

The trunk is large, too. Even with the spare tire, there is enough room to store the luggage of six passengers. The trunk lid has the low lift-over design, which is helpful when loading packages ...

All the Caprice sedans have airbags and anti-lock brakes as standard equipment. The design of the seat-belt clasp makes it exceptionally easy to buckle up.

The LTZ has a full frame and coil suspension. Although it handles reasonably well on winding roads, it is on the highway where the ride is most enjoyable. The only problem with highway driving is that the ride is so smooth, frequently I didn't realize how fast I was traveling — in spite of a speedometer with large digital numerals right in front of me. I had to rely on cruise control, rather than self control.

The Caprice is an exceptionally comfortable car. I'm impressed — and so are my neighbors.

SPARE PARTS

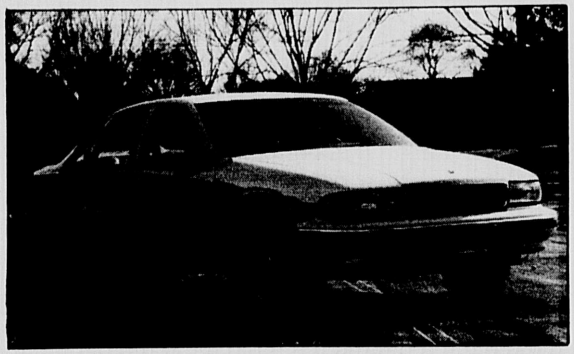

TELL IT LIKE IT IS: Chrysler's minivans have a 63 percent owner loyalty rate, the highest of any vehicle sold in the United States. This figure is higher than Mercedes Benz, GM trucks and Honda Accord, vehicles that usually have high owner loyalty. As a result, Chrysler's new minivan advertising campaign will let owners tell their own story.

WASH AND DRY: The Chamois Council reports that 50 percent of Americans wash their own car. They also say some dry the vehicle with towels and cloths that can hold dirt, which can cause scratches and streaks.

The council claims the most gentle and absorbent product for drying a car is a chamois, a product that has been around for more than 100 years. Pronounced "shamee," the cod-oiled tanned sheepskin can absorb four times its weight in water.

SUN SPEED: Toyota's experimental RaRa 10 solar-powered racing car uses mono-crystalline silicon cells and nickle-zinc battery power to attain speeds of 75 mph. The name RaRa 10 is derived from the ancient Egyptian sun god Ra.

NO TRESPASSING: In flooded areas, never attempt to drive through water on the road. Floodwaters can be deeper than expected because the current can quickly erode the road beneath it.

Dodge Dakota Pickups

1993s flaunt across-the-board refinements

Coming off the most successful model year ever, in which its new, more powerful powertrains created record sales, the Dodge Dakota pickup truck for 1993 has its product focus on across-the-board performance refinements.

The first mid-size pickup truck available, the Dakota offers more power, more standard payload, the largest cab, the largest pickup box and a higher trailer-tow rating than any compact truck.

Dakota continues its unique market advantage as the first mid-size pickup designed with the power and chassis to handle the 10,000 pound GCWR-plus load range of onehalf-ton pickups.

Dakota is available in two-wheel-drive and four-wheel-drive models with Conventional Cab or Club Cab (extended cab) versions.

The 1993 Dakota receives a smoother shifting five-speed manual transmission with its standard 2.5-liter four-cylinder engine, while four-wheel anti-lock brakes are available throughout the lineup.

Also for 1993, a full stainless steel exhaust system has been added on all models, along with the availability of a work package (power steering, 22-gallon fuel tank) on two-wheel drive models with long pick-up boxes.

1993 Dodge Dakota Sport 4 x 2

Both premium split bench seats and bucket seats have been designed for greater comfort. Power window and power lock switches are now more accessible, as are passenger grab handles. Outboard unibelt passenger restraints with free-running cinch adjustments also have been added.

Major redesigns of the Dodge Magnum 3.9-liter V-6 and the 5.2-liter V-8 engines in 1992, as well as significant improvements to the drivelines supporting these powerplants, were immediate favorites with Dakota's buyers.

The Magnum 3.9-liter is rated at 180 horsepower at 4,800 rpm with a peak 225 pound feet of torque at 3,200 rpm. The Magnum 5.2-liter has a peak 230 horsepower at 4,800 rpm, along with 280 pound feet of torque at 3,000 rpm.

With the Magnum V-8, the Dakota can achieve 0-60 MPH in approximately 8.3 seconds. With the Magnum V-6, Dakota can go from 0-60 MPH in 9.3 seconds.

The Magnum 3.9-liter V-6 is standard on four-wheel-drive Dakota bodystyles and optional on two-wheel-drive models. The Magnum 5.2-1liter V-8 is optional across the line.

A 2.5-liter, electronically fuel-injected four-cylinder engine is standard on two-wheel-drive Dakota Conventional Cab and Club Cab models.

Horsepower and torque output from the Magnum V-6 and V-8 engines is accommodated by Dodge's heavy-duty four-speed automatic transmission, as well as the new five-speed manual.

Conventional model Dakota pickups are built either on a 112-inch wheelbase with a 6-1/2-foot cargo box or a 124-inch wheelbase with an eight-foot box. The Club Cab has a 131-inch wheelbase and features the 6-1/2 foot box. Both boxes are double-walled construction and feature two-tier loading access.

Dakota boasts a large 2,550-pound payload capability in Conventional 2WD models and 2,000 pounds in Club Cab models. Trailer tow ratings of 6,400-pounds on the Magnum V-8 Club Cabs and up to 6,900-pounds on Conventional Cab models are available.

1993 Chrysler LeBaron Coupe, Convertible feature new styling treatment, added value

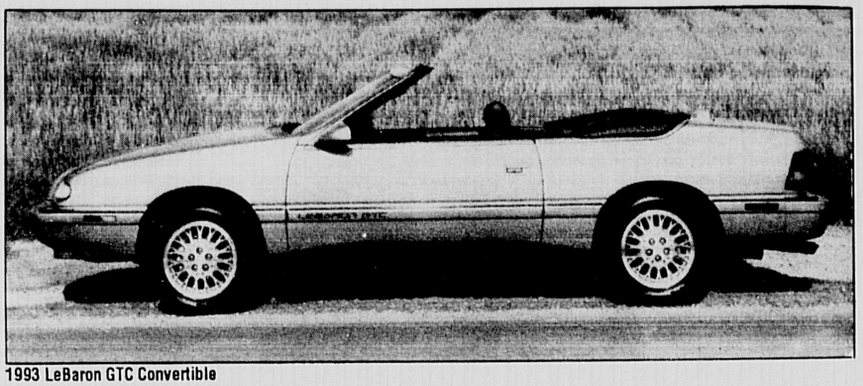

Front-wheel drive Chrysler LeBaron Coupe and Convertible models receive freshened front and rear body styling to increase buyer appeal in 1993.

The LeBaron Convertible has been the top-selling convertible in the world over the past decade.

LeBaron Coupe, a five-passenger mid-size vehicle avail-able in three levels of equipment and trim — Base, V(and GTC — is positioned in the highly-competitive mid-specialty segment of the market.

The four-passenger LeBaron Convertible, also available in three equipment/trim levels for 1993 with the same Base, LX and GTC model designations, is expected to build on its position as the industry's most successful convertible.

Chrysler's 3.0-liter V-6 engine with sequential multi-point electronic fuel-injection is standard on the LX and GTC sport model. A fully-adaptive, electronic 4-speed automatic transaxle is standard on LX and optional with GTC. The latter has a 5-speed manual gearbox standard.

1993 LeBaron GTC Convertible

A clutch/ignition interlock system for manual transaxle and a park/ignition interlock system for automatic transaxle are also standard on the Coupe and Convertible.

In addition to the exterior body freshening that includes redesigned front end and grille with aero headlights, clear park and turn light lenses with amber bulbs, plus red/amber taillights, other LeBaron Coupe and Convertible features include:

-A leather seat option with 12-way power driver's seat; a long-life stainless steel exhaust system: tamper-resistant odometer; higher performance torque converter for the 2.5-liter engine; interior lights with a time-out feature and a rear view mirror with dual reading/courtesy lights (convertible).

Also new are four wheel cover and aluminum-wheel offerings, including a 14-inch "Preceptor" cover as standard equipment. A 15-inch "Triad" wheel cover in white and gold, plus P205/60R 15 all-season tires is included with the Sport Package. A cast aluminum "Bullet" road wheel is optional, while 15-inch cast aluminum "Cathedral" road wheels in white and gold are available for the Sport and GTC packages.

Standard features for the GTC include bodyside color keyed grille molding and deck lid graphics, sport handling suspension, 15" cast aluminum road wheels.

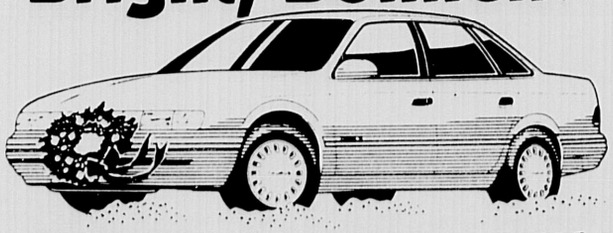

Competing in the mid-size specialty segment, the two-door LeBaron Coupe offers contemporary exterior styling, ergonomic interior design, and the availability of two models.

Standard features on all models include power windows, aerodynamic flush mounted headlamps, driver's side air bag, electric rear window defroster, an AM/FM stereo radio with digital clock and four speakers, and power rack-and-pinion steering.

On the Base LeBaron model, standard equipment includes a 2.5-liter electronic fuel-injected 4-cylinder engine with three-speed automatic transaxle, black body-side molding, P195/70R14 all-season steel-belted radial tires and 14-inch wheel covers.

Women tackle winter car maintenance

Simple steps prevent trouble

Most women car owners shy away from doing even simple tasks affecting a car's mechanical well-being, according to a recent survey of do-it-yourselfers. Yet some relatively simple precautions can help prevent a comfortable, warm drive from turning into a frigid vigil in a stalled vehicle.

Linda Kearney, a car racer and co-owner of a garage in Capital Heights, Md., would like to see women adopt a more can-do attitude toward car maintenance. Following are some ways to make sure your car is ready for the rigors of winter driving, according to Kearney, who is a spokesperson for Zerex antifreeze coolant:

Use lighter-weight oil to provide effective engine lubrication and avoid sluggish start-ups that guzzle gas. Keep in mind that motor oils break down over time, regardless of how much or little you drive your car, so an oil change every three or four months makes good sense.

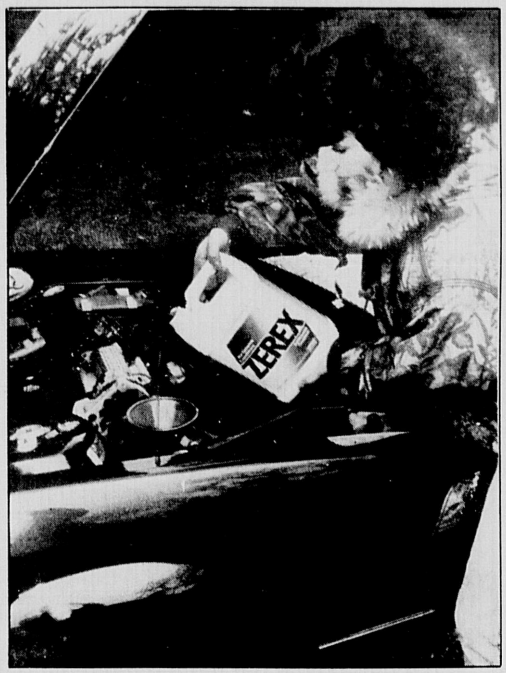

Condensation can cause carburetor problems, including stalled engine start-ups. To avoid this, keep the gas tank at least one-quarter full all the time.

Hoses and belts that show signs of cracks, brittleness or other serious wear are a potential source of trouble and should be replaced.

Cold temperatures sap the "juice" out of batteries. If your car's battery is over two years old, have an electrical load test performed. Also, have the alternator checked for voltage output.

A properly functioning cooling system prevents engine overheating, which can be a problem even in winter. Make sure the antifreeze in the radiator overflow tank always is up to the full line with a clean mixture that is half water and half antifreeze coolant. And remember that corrosion inhibitors in antifreeze coolant wear out over time. So it is wise to replace the fluid every year or so, using a premium product such as Zerex antifreeze coolant to assure protection even under extreme winter conditions.

Even the most complete maintenance program, however, doesn't always prevent problems. So Kearney suggests keeping some starting fluid and de-icer on hand just in case the vehicle won't start or the windshield or locks ice up. And, she cautions, make sure your "emergency kit" also includes windshield wiper fluid, flares, a bag of sand for traction in icy ruts, and blankets to keep you warm till roadside assistance arrives.

Cold temperatures sap the 'juice' out of batteries. If your car's battery is over two years old, have an electrical load test performed.

1993 Plymouth Acclaim

Impressive standard features earn this car high marks

Offering outstanding value to make it stand out in a crowded market segment, more than 50 features are standard on the 1993 Plymouth Acclaim.

The standard features include a driver-side air bag and 3-point belts for front and rear outboard positions and a lap belt for center occupants; tinted glass all around, power-assisted rack-and-pinion steering; deluxe windshield wipers with variable intermittent feature; childproof rear door locks; and aero-style halogen headlights.

Acclaim's high quality gained its recognition in the 1991 J.D. Power consumer satisfaction (CSI) ratings as the best domestic sedan on the market. And for 1993, the product should be even better.

It is among the lowest-priced five or six-passenger car in the U.S. and appeals to buyers who are attracted by quality, reliability, safety and handling features.

In addition to passenger comfort and convenience with optional bucket seating (standard on ES), Acclaim provides greater front and rear head room, rear leg and shoulder room, plus more interior volume than most of its competitors.

Acclaim will be available to fleet and rental buyers with a flexible fuel package. These cars, with a 2.5-liter engine and three-speed automatic transmission, can operate on a blend of 85 percent methanol (M-85) and 15 percent gasoline or any combination in between.

1993 Plymouth Acclaim

The Acclaim features an overhead cam 2.5-liter electronically fuel-injected four-cylinder engine and front-wheel disc brakes as standard equipment. Optionally available is a sequential, multi-point fuel-injected overhead cam 3.0-liter V-6 engine.

A 5-speed close-ratio manual overdrive transaxle with a higher performance torque converter, in combination with the 2.5 engine, is standard on Acclaim. Both a 3-speed automatic transaxle or electronic 4-speed automatic is optional. A new, fully stainless steel exhaust system is standard.

A new, color-keyed grille with a flush "Pentastar" hood ornament is standard for 1993. Tail lamps are a new design, as well.

Offering outstanding value to make it stand out in a crowded market segment, more than 50 features are standard on the 1993 Plymouth Acclaim.

School budget released

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The School Committee has issued its proposed numbers for the Fiscal Year 1994 School Department budget and will begin public hearings beginning in January.

The School Department's preliminary budget, announced at its Dec. 22 meeting, is $14,493,015, a $1,237,605 increase over Fiscal Year 1993's budget. Acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald said some of the extra money will go toward a director of curriculum, three extra teachers, and raises for teachers. Fitzgerald said he has not yet determined where the new teachers would be placed if the budget were passed as proposed, except that they would be elementary teachers.

Local clothing store to close

By Deborah Trask
EDITOR

Topsy Turvy, a local children's clothing store, will close its doors in January becoming the seventh downtown store to close this year.

The downtown had its worst moment when four shops closed in the downtown area in June, followed by the loss of Davis Fine Foods in October.

Citing business conditions that made staying afloat impossible, Topsy Turvy owner Martha O'Neil said the decision was still difficult. "I've had some good times here, but they just didn't last," said O'Neil.

"It's really too bad, but the economy changed and it affected me. I

Old ambulance kept as a back-up

By Stephen Olivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The Fire Department will be holding on to its back-up ambulance in case of an emergency instead of selling it as was originally planned.

Fire Chief Charles McNutt told the Board of Selectmen at its Dec. 21 meeting that the Fire Department was interested in keeping the second ambulance as a back-up. The ambulance would be used if the front-line ambulance was involved in an accident or needed extensive mechanical work, said McNutt. Town Manager Chadwick Maurer had proposed selling the ambulance.

The selectmen sided with McNutt by a 3-2 vote. Stephen Powers, William O'Leary, and Thomas Schmitt voted to keep the ambulance. Peter VanAken and Gerard Polcari voted to sell the it.

Winchester received a new ambulance in the summer, bought, in part, with money donated by Winchester Hospital. The Fire Department argued at that time that the town ambulance was in unreliable condition and needed extensive repairs. Both ambulances are currently located at the station on Mt. Vernon Street.

McNutt told the selectmen that the old ambulance should be kept in case the new ambulance has to be put in the shop. He stressed that the old ambulance would not be used as long as the new ambulance was on the road.

According to McNutt, if the town sold its second ambulance and the first one were to need repair, the town would have to borrow an ambulance from Woburn. McNutt added that ones previously loaned to the town from Woburn were usually in poor condition, far worse than the old ambulance now owned by

Winchester, Yesterday and Today

Winchester, 100 years ago

Main Street, looking south toward Mystic Valley Parkway

One hundred years ago Winchester Center was a sleepy little village catering to Boston commuters and owners of the factories located in Winchester and Woburn. A drive around town shows little traces of the Winchester of yesterday. Photographs must evoke our imaginations and kindle some memories of stories we've heard in the past.

The Town's photographic history is stored at the Henry Simonds Memorial Archives of the Town of Winchester, located in the Town Hall. Responsibility for the care and keeping of the documents lies with the Winchester Historical Commission. Recently, Commission members pored through the photograph collection to choose some for a newspaper article. What evolved has become an occasional series of photographs entitled, "Winchester, Today and Yesterday." Photographs are always welcome; contact the Archival Center at 721-7146 with comments or additions.

Before the days of strips of stores, the Center was made up of individual buildings with shops on the street level and living quarters for owners or clerks on the upper floors. On-premise living was common, especially in cities like Boston, where 24-hour guard was important for possible fire or theft. Our first shop on the right, James McLaughlin's shop, was just such a situation when McLaughlin first opened in Winchester Center in the 1880s. By the early 1890s he was listed at "176 Main St., living above" [the shop]. As his business prospered, he moved his residence to Myrtle Street.

Alex McDonald had his shop on the "corner of Main and Thompson." He was a dealer in meats, vegetables, butter, eggs, lard, etc. By 1916, the shop became a fish market. The house on the opposite corner of Main and Thompson was the house of Benjamin Thompson who owned a leather tannery located on the site of Manchester Field. Farther up Main Street beyond the massive elm tree, was a drygoods shop. Next was a building with a cupola, an early Winchester school. It stood where the Cambridgeport Bank is today. This building, the Gifford School, was moved to this spot around 1866 by Arthur Whitney. It was torn down in the 20th century.

The corner building, beyond the Converse Bridge is the Whitney Machine Factory, which manufactured leather working machinery,

POLICE LOG

Sunday, Dec. 27

4:52 p.m.
A Winchester youth told police that someone had stolen his bag from Winter Pond on Woodside Road while he was skating. In the bag were two pairs of skates valued at $110 and a watch valued at $30.

3 p.m.
Officer Douglas Wilkinson was dispatched to Bellevue Avenue near Forest Street for a report of a motor vehicle accident.

The operator of the first vehicle, a 74-year-old Winchester man, was traveling west on Forest Street where he attempted to take a left onto Bellevue. His vehicle collided with the second vehicle, operated by a 34-year-old New Hampshire man, which was traveling east on Forest. Witnesses told police that the operator of the second vehicle was traveling at a greater than reasonable speed. Both cars sustained minor damage.

2:52 a.m.
Officer Kurt Ellis was dispatched to Swanton Street for a report of a motor vehicle missing.

Police were met by two men who said that an aquaintance had taken their vehicle, a 1990 Buick Regal, without permission. Later that morning, police spotted the vehicle traveling north on Main Street and stopped it. The operator, a 21-year-old Medford man, did not have a license. A check with dispatch showed that the operator's license had been revoked for driving while intoxicated and that Medford police had a warrant for his arrest. Winchester police charged the operator with operating after the revocation of a license and transported him to the Medford police station.

12:18 a.m.
Officer Peter Hersee was dispatched to Church Street for a report of a motor vehicle accident.

Upon arrival, police discovered that a 55-year-old Framingham woman had driven her motor vehicle onto the island near Waterfield Road and had knocked over a "Keep Right" sign. The operator told police that she had taken her eyes off the road and had not seen the island. The vehicle was damaged in the bumper and the undercarriage and was towed.

Friday, Dec. 25

A man came to the police station to report that he had been assaulted after a traffic dispute.

A 21-year-old Arlington man told police that he was traveling north on Ridge Street when someone pulled up behind him in a pick-up truck and flashed his high beams. The Arlington man pulled over to the side of the road to allow the operator of the pick-up truck to pass. The pick-up truck then slid sideways as it passed. The Arlington man exited his motor vehicle to see if the operator of the pick-up truck was hurt. The operator of the pick-up truck then threatened the man with profane language, struck him in the face, and then kicked him while he was on the ground. The operator of the pick-up then got in his truck and drove off. According to police the operator of the pick-up may have been intoxicated.

7 p.m.
Officer James Covino was dispatched to Main Street for a report of a motor vehicle that had hit a telephone pole.

According to police, the operator of the vehicle, a 37-year-old Medford man, was traveling south on Main Street when he slid out of control and backed into a telephone pole on the opposite side of the road. The vehicle was damaged extensively in the rear.

5 p.m.
Officer Thomas Groux was dispatched to Forest Street for a motor vehicle accident.

The operator of the first vehicle, a 31-year-old Belmont man, pulled off to the side of the road because the road was icy. The operator of the second vehicle, an 18-year-old Reading woman, then struck the first vehicle from behind.

12:47 p.m.
Officer Arthur Houllahan was dispatched to Main Street for a report of vandalism.

Town Meeting committee to investigate town's filtration plans

By Stephen Ollivieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

A water study committee forged by Fall Town Meeting is racing against the clock to analyze the town's water system before a $6 million filtration plant is presented to Spring Town Meeting.

"It is a very unusual committee in that it has a very complicated task and a very short time to do it in," Town Moderator John Sullivan told the Water System Review Committee at its first meeting on Dec. 21. Sullivan told the committee that their main responsibility is to present a thorough, independent report to Spring Town Meeting on the town's water system and the filtration plant, which will be proposed in early May.

The 10-member committee consists of Randall Swartz, who proposed the warrant article that generated the committee, Andrew Hogeland, Jonathan Randall, John Shawcross, Harry Chefalo, Andrew Hall, John Looney, Sharon Mastenbrook, Steve Poulos, and Thomas Raphael.

The committee decided at its meeting that its first step would be to study the available documents on the town's water supply. Town Manager Chadwick Maurer, who was at the meeting, told the committee that Weston & Sampson, the engineering company which has worked with the Board of Selectmen on water issues, would be willing to give a presentation to the committee.

The committee declined the offer for now, saying they would rather study the matter on their own first. "I like the idea of us reviewing the documents before we have Weston & Sampson brainwash us," said Vice-Chairman Shawcross.

Several members said the performance of Weston & Sampson would be one of the issues they would investigate. Looney, a registered engineer, said, "I'm not happy with the presentation of the information at Town Meeting ... We should keep an eye on these people." Looney later said the presentation by Weston & Sampson was "goobledegook" and that they didn't know what they were saying.

When asked, Maurer conceded that Weston & Sampson had never bid for the work they've done so far. "Was there RFPs (requests for proposals) for this? No," said Maurer. "They have been involved with us for a number of years, and it is our intention to continue our relationship with Weston & Sampson," added Maurer.

Instead of working with Weston & Sampson, the committee will study four documents that have been done within the past fifteen years, and they will meet with the town's water systems engineer, Edward Grant. The committee's options for studies are limited since Town Meeting rejected a proposal to give the committee $5,000.

Sullivan told the committee that even though they would have access to Weston & Sampson, they would have to forward to the town manager any studies they would like to see done. "If this committee felt that an additional study should be done ... they should forward that to the town manager ... and if he thinks it's a crazy idea, I don't think he should fund it," said Sullivan.

Sullivan said the committee could play a major role when the Board of Selectmen hold public hearings in February. They could also propose alternates to the plans put forth by the selectmen and investigate the financial impact of the system, said Sullivan.

Residents should watch for census

Winchester residents should be on the lookout for the annual census form and applications for dog licenses and transfer station permits, mailed to every household on Monday, Dec. 28.

Census forms must be returned to the Town Hall by Jan. 15. Residents may apply for 1993 dog licenses and transfer station permits by filling out the appropriate applications and sending them back to Town Hall with a check in the same envelope with their census forms.

Once residents receive their permit (or permits), they should take the permit with them on their next trip to the dump and hand it to an attendant who will place a sticker on the vehicle. Fees are the same as 1992: $50 for the first vehicle in a household and $5 for each additional vehicle in the same household.

Town Clerk Carolyn Ward and Health Director Joseph Tabbi report that the combined system worked so well in 1992 that it has been continued for 1993. "Residents seem to like the efficiency of being able to send back their census form, purchase a dog license and a permit for the transfer station with one envelope and one check," said Ward. Last year more than 75 percent of dog licenses and transfer station permits were issued by mail.

It is expected that the Town's new computer, installed this past summer, will enable the process to go much faster than last year. "Permits can be issued in a matter of seconds," Ward said, "and processing large batches of mail should take no time at all."

This year's mailing includes a "Rabies Alert" from the Board of Health, urging pet owners to have cats as well as dogs vaccinated against rabies.

SENIOR NEWS

FROM THE JENKS CENTER

By Mary Kelly
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

The Jenks Center, a resource to the community

Winchester's Jenks Senior Center is the focal point for senior activities in town. It houses the Winchester Seniors Association and the town department of the Council on Aging. More than 100 different activities and programs take place during the course of the year.

Educational, social and recreational programs abound at the Center. Among the activities are the exercise programs three times a week, square dancing, line and ballroom dancing, bridge, glee club, bingo, ceramics, calligraphy classes, crafts and stitchery lessons, recorder lessons, foreign language classes, bowling league, yoga and creativity, art group, monthly day trips, overnight travel trips, frequent Super-Sunday dinners. There are groups like the Men's Discussion Group which meets twice a month and the Italian Culture Group which meets monthly. On Wednesday afternoon, Games Day presents a variety of challenges to keep seniors active.

Various committees of senior volunteers direct these activities.

The Council on Aging, an 11-member body appointed by the town selectmen, sponsors various transportation and hot lunch and outreach services by professional staff, as well as intergenerational programs and activities.

There is a senior van available three times a week to take seniors to the center for activities, as well as to local shopping and medical appointments. Three times a week, hot lunch program provides an opportunity for modest cost meals and socialization for seniors who may be alone at home. In addition, volunteer drivers provide transportation assistance to Winchester senior residents, who are without other means of transportation.

Various health programs are available at the Center. The twice monthly Keep Well Clinic monitors weight, blood pressure and nutrition, and, in conjunction with the town's health department, a flu and pneumococcus vaccination clinic is held in the fall, as well as various screenings and health education programs sponsored by the Jenks Center Health Committee. Support groups such as the Parkinson's Group and Group Experience are held on a regular basis.

The Council on Aging, together with the school department and the recreation department of the town, coordinates programs with the young people of Winchester, fostering understanding between elders and the youth of the town.

Through the Council on Aging, the town provides for professional staffing and underwrites senior programs. Council on Aging staff are responsible for outreach to seniors in town who may be unable to attend activities at the Center. Home visits are provided coordinating the home care needs of frail elders, with regional and local agencies.

Winchester residents 60 and older are automatically members of the Winchester Seniors Association, a nonprofit all volunteer organization. Many senior volunteers give precious hours to promote the wellbeing of all seniors in town.

Reminder: Winchester Handyman available

As recently reported in this column, in keeping with the Council on Aging's "Aging in Place" program, a volunteer Winchester Handyman has been found. He is a reliable, experienced senior who will be available to respond to requests for minor repairs and adjustments in the homes or apartments of Winchester elders.

Some of the tasks that can be done by the Handyman are: install wooden handrails (indoors and outdoors); install step treads; window sash cord repair; put up or take down curtain rods; replace lamp cords and light fixtures; replace electrical wall switches; small painting tasks; replace washers in faucets or replace plumbing fixtures; repair valves inside toilet tanks; insert water savers in toilet tank; small window repairs; replace glass window panes; small caulking tasks; attempts to open sink blockages; repoint loose brick steps; small woodworking tasks, i.e., installation of shelf.

Tasks that cannot be done: removal of air conditioners; repairs to utilities such as washers dryers and refrigerators.

Services of the Handyman are limited to small, quickly completed tasks. All requests will be screened and assessments of the tasks for the Handyman will be made by appointment.

If anyone has need of a repair or task assessment, call the Jenks Center, 721-7136, and ask for Barbara Ciampa, the COA administrator, who will review the request and refer it to the Handyman.

Spanish lessons to resume

Spanish lessons will begin again, at the Jenks Center, during the winter session. The Center is now recruiting for a new instructor. The time of the lessons can be negotiated.

School Committee hires three aides to assist at Lynch

By Stephen Ollvieri
ASSISTANT EDITOR

The School Committee will be hiring three aides to deal with overcrowding at the first grades at Lynch Elementary School, but some parents have told the committee that this is, at best, a temporary solution to the problems at Lynch.

School Committee members voted 4-0 at their Dec. 22 meeting to hire three aides starting in the second semester to assist first grade teachers at Lynch. Committee member Constance Makhoul was not present. At an earlier meeting, the committee considered hiring one aide at fifteen hours a week but were told by teachers and Lynch School Principal Charles McInnis that one aide would not be adequate. The three aides approved by the committee will work fifteen hours a week each.

However, the aides may only be working until March 26. The School Committee has an informal agreement not to spend money on an unbudgeted expense unless they can take that money from another source. Acting Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald said the School Department at this time can only come up with $3,000 to be taken from the Professional Services line item. This $3,000 will only fund the three aides until late March.

Fitzgerald stated that the aides would be told when hired that they may be working only three months. Fitzgerald conceded that he had "never done this before."

Fitzgerald did say that the budget would be reviewed prior to March 26, and if another $3,000 could be found, the aides would work until the end of the year.

The committee members' decision to spend money was their first unanimous vote on a budgetary item in awhile. Committee member James Evans, often the dissenting vote on spending issues, said he had "extreme discomfort" on spending the money but added, "I see this as an absolute crying need of 24 first grade kids."

The need for aides in the three first grade classes, which have a 24:1 teacher-pupil ratio, was first brought to the attention of the School Committee by parents earlier this semester. Lynch parents argued that beside the high pupil-teacher ratio (the town average is 19:1) there are also a large number of children at the school who demand special attention from teachers, therefore putting more stress on the teachers.

According to McInnis, 24 of the 72 children in the first grade need some form of special help. Eight of those children take English as a Second Language classes. Also, 29 of the children in the first grade did not attend Lynch school the previous year.

In trying to convince the committee members to hire three aides instead of one, McInnis told them that one aide would not have enough time to adequately assist the teachers and could not get to know all 72 children. "(A first grade aide) is not a short-term expense but a long-term investment," said McInnis. "The program has paid for itself if only one child is not returned to grade one."

While most parents in attendance were satisfied by the committee's decision to hire three aides, some asked the committee to find a long-term solution to the problems they see at Lynch. Parent Karl Fryzel said the redistricting done last summer did not address all the problems at Lynch. "This school still needs the resources to handle its diverse population," said Fryzel. As the committee starts to deal with its Fiscal Year 1994 budget, Fryzel asked the committee to reexamine the class sizes at Lynch. "Let's deal with this problem in advance. Now is the time to plan ahead," he said.

High school students petitioned the School Committee to permit the distribution of condoms. A total of 320 students signed the petition in support of installing condom machines in the bathrooms at the school. The School Committee declined to pursue the issue.

Winchester Police Dog Officer Dominic Molea retired from his usual rounds in the "dog mobile." Molea served as Winchester's dog officer for 19 years before his retirement.

Winchester began a drug program for parents called, "It Takes a Village to Raise a Child." The program, developed by the Mass. Statewide Parent Education, was instituted to teach parents how to prepare their children for a drug-free life. It was hoped the program reach parents as much as the newly approved DARE program was reaching their children.

The Metropolitan Police, the old State Police, and the Capitol Police were all joined to form the new Department of State Police. Shortly after the merger there was talk of new police cars that would be patrolling the Mystic Valley Parkway and South Border Road in Winchester, but the familiar blue-and-white cruisers are still in use.

A school budget of $13,197,410 proposed by the administration passed muster. The budget, as presented by Superintendent Charles Mitsakos, received sharp criticism from the then School Committee Chairman Constance Makhoul for a lack of detail. "Frankly, I think the budget is still somewhat of a jigsaw puzzle ... I'd like to see explanations, element by element," said Makhoul.

The ailing Cross Street bridge received increased restrictions on parking due to the weakness of the support beams on the bridge. According to Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer, a study of the bridges' structure had been approved by Town Meeting.

Construction of the Arthur Griffin Center for Photographic Art, completed for a ribbon-cutting ceremony in September, was underway in January.

Purity began its expansion project after a full year of review by town boards. The project expected at that time to take a full year is well underway with new parking spaces and a rough structure in place.

A group called CONCERN addressed issues of sexuality along with the medical details of sexually transmitted disease by holding educational talks for parents. Members of the school community, churches, and local medical professional filled out the ranks of the group.

Winchester was the target of a racially motivated crime, as a wave of Asian crimes struck the region. One home was burglarized and the owner tied up. Similar cases occurred in Newton, Malden, Acton, Randolph, Lynn and Braintree.

February

Chief Joseph Perritano addresses the media after a kidnapping/murder in Winchester in February.

Winchester had its serenity shattered following a domestic dispute that left two people dead and a local family grief-stricken. One Winchester woman was kidnapped by her boyfriend and another, her mother, was murdered. Ernest Anthony, Jr., 27, of Waltham, was eventually cornered in Brockton, where he killed himself.

In his FY93 budget Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer recommended the elimination of two full-time equivalent police officers, positions which were vacated during the year. Chief Joseph Perritano battled against the cuts saying they would reduce the effectiveness of the force and place residents in jeopardy. Also affected were the positions of full-time custodian and the position of Director of Assessments was recommended for trimming back to a half-time position.

Subcommittees submitted final reports on possible school buildings to close after four months of study. Four options were presented to the School Committee at that time for the Winchester school system.

A Rock Avenue waste site took center stage as a congressional candidate took his message on the road. Frank Vallarelli told the crowd that Congressman Edward Markey had not done enough to push for the cleanup of Rock Avenue.

House sales in town began to climb back from the two-year doldrums that local real estate agents had been experiencing. Greater Boston Real Estate Board figures showed an increase of 12.5 percent when the numbers for the quarter were finally reported.

The School Committee began a review of the cost of busing students since the budget submitted by Dr. Charles Mitsakos had not included funding for extracurricular activities and busing. The parents were mailed a survey and asked if they would pay for busing.

March

Final reports were advanced on possible school closings. The Facilities study committee recommended the closing of McCall Middle School, a plan which received little community support. The goal of closing McCall, according to committee members, would be to fill up the high school and close the building most in need of repairs. Members proposed that the high school be utilized closer to its capacity. FIES Committee member William Lionetta said, "I have to tell you that as a group we went into Lincoln, knowing that it is the oldest school, and we were pleasantly surprised by the good condition of the school."

Winchester High School made the top ten list of one local magazine. A rundown of the top 10 schools in the Boston area, published by Boston Magazine in its March issue, gave Winchester its high ranking due in part to per-pupil expenditure, percentage of seniors who continue their college education and SAT scores. Winchester High School Principal John Ritchie figured prominently as one reason for Winchester's high ranking.

Debates among the candidates for the Winchester Board of Selectmen Robert Deering, William O'Leary and Gerard Polcari began to heat up. Deering eventually lost his seat to Polcari.

Bush and Tsongas topped the ticket in Winchester on "Super Tuesday". In Winchester, Tsongas was clearly the favorite on the Democratic bill, picking up 2,818 votes or 73 percent of the votes cast. President Bush drew the lion's share of the Republican vote in Winchester, with 71 percent of the voting share.

An accident claimed the life of William H. McCarter III, then 24, when a car in which he was riding hit a tree on Lawson Road. The driver was subsequently charged with vehicular homicide in connection with the accident and pleaded guilty, receiving a suspended sentence.

Despite a major setback when a proposal to light Manchester Field was struck down, The Interscholastic Athletic Field Study Committee forged ahead on a warrant article for Spring Town Meeting to create a revolving fund for field maintenance. The fund was ruled illegal.

A vote to reappoint Principal John Ritchie to his position at Winchester High School included tenure. Parents, expecting a battle, showed up en masse to lend their support. Committee members expressed surprise at the number of letters and phone calls they received on the tenure vote. School Committee Chairman Constance Makhoul said, "Part of the School Committee's job is to give positive feedback and constructive criticism as an employer." She said that criticism might have been perceived as lack of support. The committee voted 5-0 in favor of rehiring Ritchie.

Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer predicted that recent MWRA rate hikes would cost ratepayers more money by year's end. Maurer said recent hikes could raise rates over several years as Winchester attempted to recoup the costs from residents.

School Committee candidates squared off at a League of Women Voters forum at Town Hall. Three School Committee candidates jockeyed for spots vacated by Dr. Michael Ronayne and Alice O. McCarter.

Gerard Polcari topped the ticket for the Board of Selectmen with a total of 2,884 votes earning him an overall 67 percent of the vote at the March 31 elections. James Evans won in his second bid for a School Committee seat with 2,535 votes or 59 percent of the total. Jerilyn Heinold garnered 2,222 votes or 52 percent of the total. Incumbent Selectmen Robert Deering lost his bid for reelection to a third term. Deering had 1,848 votes at the final tally.

Bernadette Kearney, Barbara Hyde, and Jeanne Sheridan campaign outside Lincoln School during the March elections.

Voter turnout was low with only 31 percent of registered voters casting ballots. Town Clerk Carolyn Ward noted the turnout is typically higher when an override question appears on the ballot.

Four armed robbers struck the White Hen Pantry and rather than stop to count their cash, they took off with the register in tow. Several police officers were able to stop two of the men in flight and arrest them. Two other suspects were apprehended after the Nashua Police cooperated on the investigation.

West Side Field neighbors dispute the operation of a chuck wagon by the Little League Association. Selectmen unanimously approved an easement at the close of a public hearing on the matter.

The project to reclaim Wedge Pond sparked some local debate over the year. The Committee to Reopen Wedge Pond Beach staged a cleanup day. With funding from "The Borggaard Beach Fund" and some local contributors the beach was scheduled for reopening. The effort to reopen the beach was later derailed during Town Meeting.

Board members chose Selectman Thomas Schmitt to act as chairman and the School Committee picked Mark Lombardi.

Town officials and parents, with all the reports in, debated several options for school closings. Ahead of the pack, according to the studies was a plan to close the middle school and move all of the students from there to the high school. A plan to install lights at Manchester Field for night games received little positive feedback from neighbors or the police. A study committee noted that the adverse impact on the neighborhood would not be offset by any appreciable benefits.

Winchester lost a sex discrimination appeal to Karen Baker, a former assistant principal at Winchester High School. Baker had filed a sex discrimination complaint less than two weeks after School Committee members voted 6-0 on March 24, 1987 to deny her tenure. After an investigation by the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, that agency found there to be probable cause that discrimination was a factor in the case.

Students in the high school published an underground paper entitled, "Editor's Choice," and along with a taped message to "Use it wisely", included a condom. Some parents reacted with outrage to the publication and brought their concerns to the School Committee.

Town Meeting gave approval to a water rate increase of 47.6 percent. Town Manager W. Chadwick Maurer blamed the increase on the increased MWRA assessment to the town. Later, the Board of Selectmen would give rebates to town residents after they were charged from the time of the vote on instead of the beginning of the Fiscal Year on July 1.

May

The Interscholastic Athletic Field Study Committee (IAFSC), chaired by Victor Gatto, won approval from Town Meeting and the Board of Selectmen to have Skillings Field resodded with money from a linkage deal with Purity Supreme. However, in one of the more contentious battles of Spring Town Meeting, the field committee's plan for a major renovation at Manchester Field was rejected. The opposition was led in large part by neighbors of Manchester Field who said they were not given adequate input into the plan. By the end of Town Meeting, a new field committee had been formed and the IAFSC was effectively dissolved.

Former Selectman Judie Muggia was named Citizen of the Year by the Winchester Chamber of Commerce. Being named Citizen of the Year did not keep Muggia from being roasted by her colleagues, including Town Manager Chadwick Maurer, Selectmen Chairman Thomas Schmitt and Selectman Peter VanAken, at a dinner held May 20 in her honor.

The School Committee decision on whether or not to close down an elementary school reached a crisis level when Town Meeting told the School Committee that they would not approve a budget for the committee until the committee made a final decision on whether or not to close down a school. School Committee Chairman Mark Lombardi told Town Meeting that the School Department has "a bottom line that we're going to stick to no matter what we do with our facilities." Town Meeting was unmoved by his comments, and the School Committee was told to come back when it had made a final decision on school closings.

After several months of debating a school utilization plan to fix some problems within the Winchester School System, the School Committee decided that plan would not include the shutting down any of the town's five elementary schools. The committee also decided this month that they would not close down the McCall Middle School and transfer those students to the high school. The project to change the makeup of the school system was spurred by underutilized space, discrepancy of school populations, and inequitable class mixes. After deciding to reject these options the committee began examining a school redistricting plan.

Carnival rides, cotton candy, and game booths were found all over Manchester Field as The EnKa Society threw their annual fair.

June

The Stone Zoo reopened on June 13 after being closed for a year and a half. Budget troubles on the state level closed down the zoo in 1990, but a partnership between the private and public sectors reopened the zoo. Rep. Paul Casey and Gov. William Weld were the keynote speakers at the zoo's reopening. "With an immense state deficit and shrinking revenues, it was evident that state government could no longer take sole responsibility for the funding of Massachusetts's two zoos," the governor told the crowd while praising the private-public venture.

After several intense meetings and numerous public input, the School Committee finally approved a redistricting plan for the Winchester school system. The plan, which passed by a 3-2 vote, moved the flats into the Lynch district, a portion of the Lincoln triangle to Ambrose, and the Winchester Gardens to Muraco. The disagreement that split the committee boiled down to whether a portion of the Lincoln triangle or the flats should be moved to the Lynch district.

The opening of Wedge Pond, which had received $13,000 by Town Meeting, was delayed for at least a year when a study done at MIT revealed that sand 25 feet from the beach was not free from mutants. Randall Swartz, a member of the Committee to Reopen Wedge Pond, announced the finding at Town Meeting and asked it to take the money back.

With only a month left in the Fiscal Year, the School Department announced it was facing a fiscal shortfall of $217,000. The School Committee appealed to the Finance Committee for money from the town's reserve fund to balance the shortfall. The Finance Committee originally balked at the request but later gave the committee $71,000. The last minute shortage would have an effect on the School Department long after the fiscal year ended. "We have asked to be kept apprised of the budget and nobody said a word," said committee member Constance Makhoul. Later that month the superintendent would resign.

Poor weather threatened to cancel Town Day for the first time in 10 years, but the rain let up long enough for residents to flood the streets of the downtown.

The school community was stunned when Charles Mitsakos resigned as superintendent of the Winchester School Department. The School Committee sent a letter to the superintendent, who had served for eight years, stating that they wanted to speak to him about his job performance. After two weeks of speculation, Mitsakos announced his resignation at the June 23 School Committee meeting. Although the School Committee never officially stated why they asked Mitsakos to resign, some members confirmed that the budget shortfall and some problems with redistricting numbers played a large part in his resignation.

The Fire Department received a new ambulance paid for in part by a donation from Winchester Hospital.

July

The Bentley Brothers International Circus roared into town on the weekend of July 11 as Winchester residents enjoyed three days of acrobats, animals, and clowns at Skillings Field.

The School Department was the recipient of a generous state Legislature, receiving a $289,100 windfall for its budget. The added aid was part of a $186 million education bill passed by the state Legislature over a Governor Weld veto. Busing, professional services, and extracurricular activities received a much-needed shot in the arm from the education bill.

Assistant Superintendent Robert Fitzgerald was named acting Superintendent for the Winchester schools while the committee searched for a replacement for Charles Mitsakos. After the unanimous vote, Fitzgerald said, "It's is not the scenario I had in mind to become the superintendent, but I thank you." Fitzgerald later told the Star that he would likely apply for the new superintendency position.

The Comprehensive Housing Affordability Study had its first of three public hearings before the Board of Selectmen. Numerous residents commented on the 55-page study, which was formulated by the Winchester Housing Partnership Board.

The Health Department picked up a part-time health inspector to crack down on health violations in food services. Diane Kurkjian filled the position which had been empty since it was cut from the budget in 1991. "We need his position desperately," said Chairman of the Board of Health Randall Swartz. "It (losing the position) put tremendous pressure on the board to maintain what the board felt was essential to the public health."

The Winchester Fire Department assisted the town of Arlington in battling a three-alarm fire at a residence on July 20. After $150,000 worth of damage and three hours the fire was finally extinguished.

Helen Philliou, Jim Johnson, Jonathan Randall, James Nagle were reappointed to the town's Finance Committee. Robin Faulkner Wortmann was appointed for a first time on the committee to fill the vacancy left by retiring chairman, Ralph Johnson. Committee member Matthew Stone was named the new chairman.

Television viewers in Winchester received an unwelcome gift in their monthly cable bills — an 11 percent rate increase. The price of the extended base package went from $18.50 to $20.50 month.

Winchester High School was the host for more than 100 area health officials, veterinarians, and animal control officers for a forum on rabies. The forum was run by state agencies along with health officials from Winchester. At that time no rabid animals had been found in the state; since then, 37 cases of infected animals have been documented in the commonwealth.

Principal Bruce MacDonald announced that he was leaving the Lincoln Elementary School for the Butler Elementary School in Belmont. His departure, after only two years, was a blow to the Lincoln community which has seen four principals in the last five years.

A voter registration drive kicked into high gear as the elections approached. The voter drive was run by the Winchester League of Women Voters, the Republican and Democratic Town Committees, and Town Clerk Carolyn Ward, who worked added hours and set up camp all over town to pull in new voters for the presidential elections.

The Winchester School Committee reached a final decision on busing for school children, which resulted in a 50-50 split between parents and the School Department on the cost for busing. The committee members had considered for some time not providing any transportation which was not required by law but changed their minds when they received additional funding from the state.

The Design Review Committee aired its plans for the renovation of the Town Common. The new proposed common includes a repaving of the walkways with bricks, a focal point, and benches, and lanterns similar to the ones downtown. The design was eventually approved and is currently under construction.

Vandals caused some heartache for several families when they knocked over eight headstones at the Wildwood Cemetery.

The Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) came before the School Committee after a six-month pilot run. The School Committee recommended changes in the program but gave approval for it to continue for the 1992-93 school year.

Rep. Paul Casey and former Sen. Salvatore Albano were the big winners in the Democratic primaries. Casey defeated Town Meeting member Barbara Joslin by a 2:1 margin while Albano edged out former Somerville state Representative Joseph Mackey. Both of their Republican opponents, Sen. Charles Shannon and Brian Broad for November were uncontested in the primaries.

After five years of hopping from town board to town board to garner approvals, the Arthur Griffin Center for Photographic Art opened on Shore Road on Sept. 12. The first exhibit featured pictures of the center's namesake. Griffin is a nationally known photographer, who was one of the first photographers to use color on a consistent basis. Numerous residents and town officials were on hand to watch Griffin cut the ribbon for the center.

The School Committee chose an 11-member committee to select a new superintendent. The selection did not come without heated debate. Jerilyn Heinold and James Evans refused to vote on the selection, saying that their choices for the committee's at-large seats were ignored. "It is impossible for me to imagine that of 21 people (chosen by Heinold and Evans) not one of them was deemed good enough to sit at at-large. I am absolutely disgusted at the turn this process has taken, and I protest it," said Heinold.

The EnKa Exchange finally had a place to call home when it opened a new consignment shop on Main Street on Sept. 21. It was the first time the EnKa Exchange, a fundraising arm of the EnKa Society, owned its own shop.

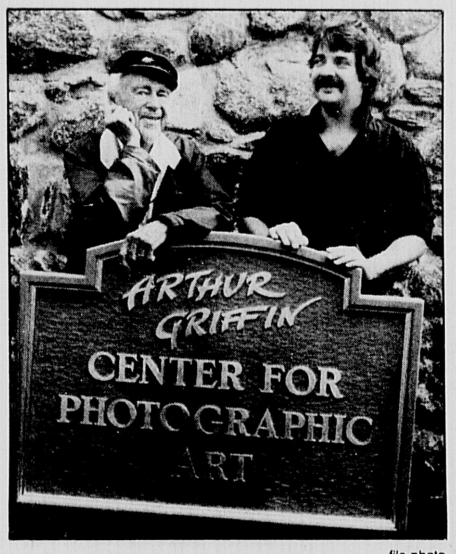

A new field study committee formed by Spring Town Meeting, convened in September. The new committee, chaired by Jay Boylan, will try to undertake the long-sought improvements in the town's playfields. The committee was charged to review the town's fields and make a report to Town Meeting on recommended changes to the town's fields.

Boston Magazine named Winchester as one of the top ten communities in the commonwealth. The magazine cited Winchester's low crime rate, open space, and proximity to Boston as reasons for its high ratings.

The Board of Selectmen reversed an earlier decision not to hold Fall Town Meeting when presented with four warrant articles by the Chairman of the Board of Health Randall Swartz. Although the selectmen finally decided to hold a Fall Town Meeting by a 4-1 vote, they unanimously voted to not approve the four warrants presented by Swartz.

A Winchester police officer was named in a law suit filed against the town of Hull. According to the suit, Officer Daniel Perenick pointed a gun at a Hull postal employee while he was a summer police officer in 1986. The employee told the court the incident led to his heart attack three days later. He is seeking $100,000 in damages.

Fifty residents showed at a Board of Selectmen's meeting to participate in the second public hearing for the Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy.

The residents of Rock Avenue held a rally along with the Massachusetts Campaign to Clean Up Hazardous Waste at the Rock Avenue dump site. The rally was to promote the passage of Question 4, which would tax the production and import of toxic chemicals and industrial petroleum and use those revenues for cleanup of the site. The question was defeated in November.

Second grade school teacher Paula Tranchita was named acting principal of the Lincoln School to replace Bruce MacDonald. The School Committee had hoped to appoint a new principal as soon as MacDonald left but later decided to wait until the end of the school year.

The Toxic Waste Study Committee, formed by Spring Town Meeting, met for the first time. The committee, chaired by Edward Fratto, was charged to investigate and study the six confirmed and seven suspected toxic waste sites in town and report to Town Meeting.

Candidates for the state Legislature squared off in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters. Sen. Charles Shannon and former Senator Salvatore Albano debated ideology, their records, and legislation. Representative Paul Casey defended his record against newcomer Brian Broad.

Governor William Weld came to town to stump for Republican Charles Shannon. Weld and Shannon greeted many startled shoppers outside Purity Supreme asking for a vote in the November election. Weld, desperate to hold on to his veto-upholding edge in the state Senate, helped Shannon regain his seat but was badly defeated in the November elections as the numbers of Republicans in the state Senate fell to under 10. A month after stumping with Weld, rumors abounded that Shannon was considering switching to the Democratic party.

Several town departments went through a practice emergency, simulating a chemical leak at the Department of Public Works. Fire Chief Charles McNutt said the drill went well and that more drills involing other communities would be held in the future.

The executive director of the Gables announced that the complex was in no financial difficulty depite the declaration of bankruptcy by the partnership that owns the Gables. The owner who filed on behalf of the partners was Edward (Buddy) LeRoux, former Red Sox owner.

November

Winchester went for Governor Bill Clinton by a wide margin over President George Bush in the November elections. When the votes were tallied, some 5,704 voters in Winchester helped Clinton come out on top; the first time since 1968 that Winchester voted for a Democrat for president.

Sen. Charles Shannon breezed to a win over candidate Salvatore Albano by winning both Winchester and Medford. Shannon also showed strong in Albano's hometown of Somerville. Albano said the number of town officials who supported Shannon's campaign, including a unanimous approval by the selectmen, made a win impossible.

The town turnout tied a record, set in 1988 in another presidential election, when 89 percent of the voters showed up at the polls to cast a vote. As a result the official tally came at 12:30 a.m. on Wednesday morning.

Selectmen voted to settle the Charles George case, along with 12 other communities. The town will pay $475,000 to the commonwealth over a period of 10 years at four percent interest. Winchester became a party to a lawsuit alleging improper dumping of hazardous materials in a landfill in Tyngsboro. In 1985 the state and federal governments sued the George company and 23 other parties when the site contaminated a nearby water line.

The debate over holding the line on the School Department budget flared as funds for school monitors were cut. The committee has vowed to scrutinize the Fiscal Year 1993 budget throughout the course of the year to avoid a repeat of last year's shortfall.

Town Meeting convened for one short night on Nov. 5 and adjourned before midnight making short work of six articles. An article, proposed by Winchester Tax Payers Association Robert Dewald, to transfer $144,792 from the housing fund to the general fund met with defeat. Several water articles, sponsored by Board of Health Chairman Randall Swartz, which sparked a debate by the board on whether Town Meeting should convene at all, were amended. Two provisions to start non-funded, advisory studies involving the town's water supply passed.

A five-year plan to address the needs of residents on affordable housing passed the public scrutiny afforded it by several hearings throughout the year. A first-phase initiative of the plan, to study the Mystic School for use by the elderly met with the approval of the board. The National Housing Affordability Act of 1990 made a Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS) mandatory for towns competing for federal funds.

Board of Health Chairman Randall Swartz uses an overhead display to explain the development of drinking water treatment in Winchester to begin the discussion of Article 3 during Town Meeting on Nov. 5.

December

New sewer bills for residents with septic systems caused a stir as did the rate hikes on the water bills. Town Meeting voted to adopt a 47.6 percent flat rate increase, a hike slated to go into effect July 1. Residents questioned whether Town Meeting knew the rate hikes would be retroactive when they voted on it. Residents with septic systems proposed a $100 payment to pay for system improvements, selectmen and the town manager agreed.

A vandalized stolen car was found by a jogger in the South Reservoir. Town officials, police and firefighters responded to the scene to minimize the effects of the oil slick which escaped near the filtration plant. A swastika, about three-quarter inches in diameter, was found carved in the hood. No information on the vandals surfaced after a police investigation. However, police did find a gate to the reservoir had been left open.

Town officials faced yet another massive settlement in a year of record cash settlements. Some $400,000 is due by Dec. 31 to pay Winchester's portion of an arbitration ruling awarded Massachusetts Refusetech Inc. (MRI), which runs the Wheelabrator site, $18 million will be paid in total by the 23 members of the North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC). MRI was looking for $75 million in the original lawsuit.

Water in the North Reservoir was rerouted to increase the amount of time of exposure to chemical disinfectants following a study by officials. Town Meeting members voted to hold a public hearing on the closing of the North Reservoir to study how much time the water should be exposed to disinfectant. According to Weston & Sampson engineer Alan Silbovitz, the change would come at no cost to the town and improve the water to the Winchester Hospital.

Budget cuts proposed by the MBTA could affect bus route No. 350, which travels from Burlington, through Winchester and into Arlington. Selectman Peter VanAken questioned the wisdom of making such changes when the Central Artery is under construction.

Selectmen continued to question a Nov. 25 NESWC ruling that would require the town to pay a $400,000 assessment to a North Andover waste-to-energy facility where the town sends its trash. Town officials and Selectmen questioned the formula used to derive the settlement figures.

Town officials offered a new policy to protect the public against rabid raccoons in the wake of the discovery of an infected raccoon in Belmont. The Winchester Police Department will euthanize any animal that they suspect of being infected with rabies. The spread of rabies has been swifter than expected and more pervasive.

Selectman Chairman Thomas Schmitt pulled out of contention for re-election in the March elections. "I'm seriously considering running for a state-level office," Schmitt said.

Colonel William P. Winchester

Our 'ace in the hole'

By Dan Chane
SPECIAL TO THE STAR

As 1993 arrives with a fresh sense of commitment from most Winchester folk, it may be well to lay up firm foundations for our hopes within the framework of our past assets.

Past years — seemingly dead as mutton — still bear witness to the efforts of many who have maintained and increased the high standards we come to expect as citizens of Winchester.

Since 1850 Winchester has been blessed with a town government more dedicated and responsive than most. Successive boards of selectmen — forever called upon to be all things to all people — have unfailingly put Winchester first.

Lately, however, it has been rumored around The Square that the present board may desert Town Hall for Broadway.

Historically, unfailing courtesy and efficiency have become synonymous with our "Town Hall Family" — each department delivering the goods with a smile, and commendable wit.

During the past few years, Town Moderator John Sullivan could more truthfully have been called "Town Mediator" in his efforts to keep various committees — and Town Meeting itself — on the straight and narrow. His quintessentiai Yankee wit has always brought down the collective house.

The position of Town Manager — relatively new in the scheme of things — finds Chad Maurer with one finger constantly on Winchester's pulse as he deftly handles administrative detail, attends meetings day and night — and still finds the time to regale Winchester each January as a star performer in the Winton Club Cabaret.

Our DPW, descendant of many smaller town departments, has been responsible for the upkeep of Winchester's physical infrastructure. The exemplary work of those in the department sometimes passes us by in our busy daily routine.

In 1993 it would be nice to visit the Public Safety Building and thank those, ofttimes unsung heroes — members of our police and fire departments. They are always there for us — and are firmly committed to professional excellence.

It bears repeating too that Winchester's greatest strength has been the commitment of her citizens. Never mundane in persuasion, their participation in town life has given Winchester its unique sense of self — despite the heartburn that sometimes comes with the territory.

To be sure, Winchester has been blessed with unique physical surroundings. There just isn't a more attractive town in the Greater Boston area.

In scratching the surface, however, most outsiders are surprised to find that Winchester's true "ace in the hole" is — and always will be — her people.

Happy New Year, Winchester.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

Beacon Hill Roll Call
Volume 19 — Report No. 52
Massachusetts House and Senate
Dec. 21 - 25, 1992

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on three roll calls and local representatives' votes on four roll calls from the week of Dec. 21 through 25.

SCHOOL AID (S 48) — Constitutional Convention approved 103-80 (Senate approved 30-8, House approved 73-72) a proposed constitutional amendment eliminating language from the state constitution which prohibits public aid to private and religious institutions. The amendment inserts wording from the federal constitution prohibiting the legislature from making laws "respecting an establishment of religion."

Amendment supporters said it is time to erase the offensive language which was placed in the constitution in 1855 by the anti-Catholic Know-Nothing Party. They said the amendment will not allow state aid to private schools which is prohibited by other sections of the constitution.

Opponents said the amendment violates the separation of church and state and will lead to state aid to private schools at the expense of public schools. They argued the offensive language was eliminated years ago.

The proposal has received the 101 votes required for initial approval and now needs approval by the 1993-1994 legislature in order to go on the 1994 ballot for voter consideration.

A Yes vote is for striking the language prohibiting the aid. A No vote is for keeping the language prohibiting the aid.

Rep. Paul Casey voted yes.

Sen. Charles Shannon voted no.

MORE SCHOOL AID (S 48) — Constitutional Convention rejected 93-88 (House approved 78-65, Senate rejected 28-10) a further amendment to the proposed constitutional amendment eliminating language from the state constitution which prohibits public aid to private and religious institutions.

The further amendment still eliminates the language but replaces it with a ban on public aid to private schools. This same further amendment was approved just a few days ago, but after intense lobbying, the

Humanistic singles slightly ho-hum

By Terry Marotta

GUEST COLUMNIST

I came upon an ad for a Singles Newsletter not long ago.

I was leafing through the back of a perfectly normal and straight-faced magazine, and there it was among the Classifieds, right between an ad for a comparative anatomy chart called "Penises of the Animal Kingdom" and one for "Stand Corrected: the Magazine for Fans of Romantic Adult Spanking": an ad for a Singles organization, according to the blurb, whose aim was to link up people "who care about peace, social justice and the environment."

"You don't have to be an activist to join," its cover letter read, when the free sample newsletter arrived a few weeks later. "What's important is that you share life-affirming humanistic values."

This struck me funny. Did they assume that there were comparable singles organizations for those who hold war, tyranny and garbage-strewn highways close to their hearts? And if so, how would one in such a group market himself? "Selfish, cat-throttling rage-alcoholic seeks spiritual twin to share dream vacation clubbing baby seals"? "Smoke. Drink heavily. Call you Bouncy-Buns out at dinners with your boss?" Was this crowd of so-called humanists a little smug or what?

Let's take a look at the newsletter and see.

Many, by the look of it, are quite a lot alike. This lady "with eyes like melting chocolate" is a "vegetarian Unitarian, and an "emotionally independent cuddler." This man, "handsome, honest, warm," is a "gentle athletic educated ethical vegetarian," who requires in his dream date "no smoking, drugs, alcohol or young children." One Lothario describes himself as a "sometimes enrapt friend of bluejays, dialogue, sunflowers, Palestinian rights, polytheism...clouds, hugs and empty boxes." He says he needs "a feminist interlocutor, friend, wife, slave." (This guy's all yours, Madge. And get back to me about the boxes.)

There are some who can't limit themselves to any one adjective (they're "passionate yet balanced," "funny yet intense", for example), and others who come off sounding plain desperate ("could relocate anywhere in U.S."; "like music, grassy meadows, weather (all kinds)." They all seem to enjoy walking on the beach, and they all yearn to touch, hug, listen, and have adventures.

A west coast lady beckons thusly: "Could you fancy sharing early morning walks, strolls in the garden, love in the afternoon with a slender energetic 46-year-old Scorpio? And in the evening good food, wine and conversation about anything from elephants to tugboats (mad about both), film to famines?" (Is she mad about the famines too?) One from Arizona would enjoy hearing from "aging hippies, anarchists, geniuses and misfits; but not "milk drinkers, couch potatoes, computer freaks or dogmatists." And a man from Mendocino seeks a "kind creative attractive woman young enough to bear children, wise enough to accept grief as well as joy" (uh, how much grief did you have in mind, bud?)

Here's one no gal could bear to pass up: "Massage therapist/psychotherapist. Don't measure women by cup size. Seeking monogamous woman with depth of heart, intelligent, slimmish brunette, petite, voluptuous okay, sensuous but spiritually oriented. Non-JAP Jew nice; or Oriental; or non-dogmatic Christian."

It just makes you wonder, doesn't it?

But it makes you sympathetic too. I mean what would YOU write if someone told you this was your main chance for turning in those narrow monkish twin-bed sheets for something more commodious? What would I write? "5'6" laundry-doing female? Gold tooth toward back, Ikera vaccination scar high on thigh, amusing congenital signature-style hiccup? Enjoy: Welcome Back Kotter reruns, trying walk in old platform shoes, laughing at her children behind backs? Yes: Ben and Jerry's. No: oven cleaning." (?)

I guess it ain't as easy as it looks.

But back to the newsletter. One man called himself greying, bearded balding and dog-owning. Another, a 70-year-old widowed male, said he desired an "acceptable female to share his house. Drinking and smoking a must."

I don't know why, but these were the only two in the whole Humanistic Swap that held any appeal for me. Maybe 'cause they were less smug about themselves and seemed to have reasonable expectations.

All I know is, if these self-styled Humanists ever get to run the show, God help all you smokers, milk drinkers, dogmatic Christians and Jewish American Princesses. You guys can come to our spread out here by the toxic waste dump. Just ask for Animal and me, Bouncy Buns. We'll be sure to treat you right.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CSA comments on pending legislation

To the editor:

The Board of the Association at its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 16, held a discussion concerning the Education Reform Act of 1992. The following comments reflect a consensus view of all the members of the Board that emerged from that discussion. We should note that the Association represents the PTOs of each of the seven schools in the Winchester school system.

Overall, the Association supports the proposed legislation, if for no other reason than it will force the entire education bureaucracy of the Commonwealth, from Boston to the Berkshires, to rethink the approach to education to meet the needs of the 21st century. This by itself makes the bill worthwhile. Our most urgent concern with the legislation is the questionable source of new revenues for towns such as Winchester that already support a level of per pupil expenditures that approximate the foundation budget set forth in the bill. For Winchester to improve the quality of the education provided to its children, to meet the global challenges of the 21st century, given the constraints imposed by Proposition 2½, the Town simply must receive more State support for its educational system. Unless the bill provides new monies for towns such as Winchester, the bill is seriously flawed.

Financial questions aside, there is much to applaud in the bill. We are supportive of the new mandates for curriculum and professional development that are set forth, the provision for innovative schools, the restructuring of school governance to parents, teachers and principals of each school, and the attempt to redefine the mission of special education to reduce the disproportionate claim on school expenditures for this class of students while assisting those truly in need of the extra resources of the school community.

For all these reasons, we support the bill when it comes before the Legislature for passage. At the same time, we favor a funding plan that will require the State to pay its fair share of the burden of education expenses, even for the more affluent towns. It would be unfortunate if the result of this new important legislation is that its new mandates further exacerbate the property tax burdens of the cities and towns, and, at the same time force the school budget to compete directly for revenues with other state programs or the local municipal budget.

ON THE RECORD

School Committee members had mixed interpretations of the Massachusetts Education Assessment Program test results for Winchester students. Committee member Edward O'Connell said at a meeting that he was "impressed with our performance. We did very well." However, committee member James Evans said later at that same meeting that everything is not well with the system. "I would suggest that things are not as rosy as has been suggested earlier this evening," said Evans.

The School Committee will be studying some major education proposals that may be put forth by the state Legislature. The committee will be asking Sen. Charles Shannon and Rep. Paul Casey to come to a meeting to discuss the education reform being proposed on Beacon Hill so the committee can make a judgement on whether or not there are any bills worth supporting.

The School Committee will be calling for a long-range photo copier plan for the school system after they approved $35,000 for copy machines. "You see offices with two copiers ... six feet apart," said committee Chairman Mark Lombardi.

Town officials should worry about the harmful trend of putting too much pressure on permanent committee members (Conservation Commission, Finance Committee, Planning Board, etc.) by forming more and more temporary committees that require members from those permanent committees. This trend has two negative effects: Committee members seem less and less enthusiastic as they spend more and more time at Town Hall, and many committees feel obligated to appoint members to these temporary committees even though they may not have a single member who is knowledgeable on the topic. Not just are we getting more and more committees, they are now getting bigger. The newly formed water committee has 10 members. It was originally slated for six members until a Town Meeting member had it changed to 10. It is believed that the more members the better, but that isn't always so. Water study is a complex problem that needs to be completed quickly. The large number of members on that committee will only make the task even harder. At the committee's first meeting members had difficulty finding a night to meet.

COMMENT

convention defeated it.

Amendment supporters said this will simply insure that the ban continues and that precious public school resources are not used for private schools.

Opponents said the language of the further amendment is unacceptable and is still discriminatory and anti-Catholic.

A Yes vote is for the further amendment banning public aid to private schools. A No vote is against the further amendment.

Casey voted no.

Shannon voted yes.

ADOPTION (H 6304) — House 84-45, gave final approval to a bill changing the present two court processes into a single one for freeing abused and neglected children for adoption. The measure also clarifies specific guidelines for freeing up these children for adoption and requires action and final determination of cases within 18 months after a case is first filed.

Supporters said this bill will speed up the adoption process for abused children who currently are shuffled around to different temporary placements for an average of five years. They argued the measure will help these kids and also save the state millions of dollars.

Opponents urged members to put the bill on hold until the governor's Blue Ribbon Foster Care Commission issues its report. Some said the bill goes too far and makes it too easy for the state to take children away from their biological parents.

The Senate later gave the bill final approval on a voice vote and the measure is not on Governor Weld's desk.

A Yes vote is for the bill. A No vote is against it.

Casey voted yes.

COURT REFORM (H 6232) — Senate 30-4, gave near final approval to its own version of a bill overhauling the state's court system. Provisions include state takeover of county courthouses; creation of a statewide juvenile court; and early retirement incentives for some judicial employees.

Supporters said this major reform bill is long overdue and is a fiscally responsible one which gives the court system the power to run its own operations.

Opponents objected to many sections including the state takeover of county courthouses. The House has already approved a different version of the bill and a conference committee will likely be appointed to draft a compromise version.

A Yes vote is for the bill. A No vote is against it.

Shannon voted yes.

Shannon supports term limits

Sen. Charles Shannon (Medford/Somerville/Winchester) is one of the leading proponents of the term limits legislation which will be voted on during the Constitutional Convention.

Shannon said, "The people of Massachusetts have a basic right to vote on whether or not they support term limits. I find it reprehensible that so many senators and representatives are simply denying the rights of the voter to place this question on the ballot. I have always been, and I shall continue to be, a strong advocate of term limits. I believe it is the only way to prevent the abuse of the so called "career politician."

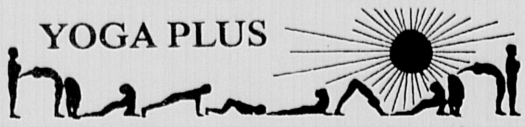

Shannon continued, "72,000 citizens of Massachusetts signed the Term Limitation Initiative and I firmly believe the citizens of Massachusetts have the right to decide this issue for themselves. The only way to accomplish this goal is to place it on the ballot box. It is inconceivable that so many of my fellow legislators believe they know "what's best" for the people of Massachusetts. The sheer numbers of signatures acquired by LIMITS is, in itself, a compelling reason in placing this issue on the ballot."

Shannon said, "I am in complete agreement with the Executive Director of LIMITS who noted that "Last month, voters in some 14 states had the opportunity to have their voices heard on this issue, bringing to 17 the total number of states that have voted on term limit amendments. These states alone, including California, Florida, Michigan and Ohio, represent more than a third of this nation's population. It would be nothing short of a disgrace, if, here in Massachusetts, in the birthplace of modern constitutional government and the model for the concept of "government of the people and by the people," citizens were prevented from participating in the constitutional process."

Shannon continued by saying, "When we look at the results of the November election, we must recognize that term limits passed in these states in a range from 52 percent to 77 percent. In our neighboring state of Rhode Island, the State Legislature took the initiative and they voted to place term limits on the ballot without waiting for a citizen petition drive. Thirty seven of our state governors are presently under term limits and I think the time has come for Massachusetts to join our sister states in this endeavor.

Nomination papers available Jan. 4

Town Clerk Carolyn Ward has announced that nomination papers for the 1993 Town Election on March 30 will be available at the Town Clerk's Office on Jan. 4. The last day to take out nomination papers for all town-wide offices and town meeting is Friday, Feb. 5.

Town-wide offices to be filled this year are the one-year moderator's seat, one three-year term on the Board of Selectmen, one assessor, one member of the Board of Health, two Planning Board seats, one School Committee seat, two Library trustees, one member of the Housing Authority and one representative to the Northeast Regional Vocational School. The moderator's term is for one year, the Housing Authority term is for five years, the Vocational School Representative's term is for four years, all others are three-year terms.

Candidates for town-wide office are required to obtain the signatures of 50 registered voters in order to have their names placed on the ballot.

In addition to the town-wide offices, one third of the 192 three-year terms in the representative town meeting are up for re-election. Each of the eight precincts has eight town meeting seats to be elected for three-year terms.

Town meeting member candidates need to have only 10 registered voters in their precinct sign their nomination papers. Incumbent town meeting members do not have to obtain signatures, but must notify the town clerk in writing of their desire to become a candidate for re-election.

The last day to take out nomination papers at the town clerk's office is Friday, Feb. 5 at 5 p.m. Candidates have until Tuesday, Feb. 9 to submit signed papers to the Board of Registrars for certification.

For more information on running for town office, potential candidates are urged to contact the town clerk.

Families and individuals register for Red Cross aid

More than 264 families and individuals have registered for Red Cross emergency assistance at disaster relief service centers in Scituate and Lynn. Red Cross damage assessment shows that more than 2,500 homes, most in the Scituate, Hull, Winthrop and Revere areas, have been affected by last weekend's storm. Red Cross estimates that as many as 1,000 families and individuals may be eligible for assistance, including those with minor damage.

"People may not realize that if they have minor damage, such as basement flooding or damage to their heating system, and don't have insurance, they may qualify for Red Cross assistance," says Bev Clayton, Red Cross Family Services Officer. "We also are encouraging lobstermen to come into our disaster centers because of the disruption of their businesses.

All Red Cross disaster assistance is free to those in need and is financed through donations from the American public. For information about Red Cross assistance for storm victims, the public may call the Red Cross Hotline at 800/244-8341.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
ANN BLACKHAM, CRB, CRS
HOMEOWNER TAX WINNER
QUESTION: How does the homeowner fare under the latest rules?
ANSWER: In the midst of drastic cutbacks in investment preferences everywhere else thanks to the Tax Reform Act, owners of first and second homes are doing well.
Deductibility of mortgage interest and property taxes for primary and second homes remains completely intact. This is often the largest tax deduction for most homeowners and will continue to be so. Also intact are the rules that allow you to defer tax on the profit when you sell if you roll it over into another home and the $125,000 tax exclusion from profit if you are over age 55.

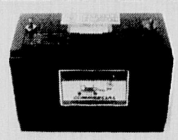

HOMEOWNERS fare well under current tax laws. Your home remains a great tax shelter.

Learning 'Title Searching' at the library

Searching for a book or other work by title is very similar to searching for an author. You first have to tell the computer that you are searching for a title. One way is to press the preset blue "title search" button on the keyboard. The computer will respond as follows:

Enter title:

Simply type in the title. Leave out articles ("the", "a", or "an") when they are at the beginning of the title. For example, a search for A Farewell To Arms would be like this:

Enter title: farewell to arms (Return)

Leave out punctuation. For example:

Enter title: you cant go home again (Return)

Instead of using the preset buttons, you can indicate a title search by using "t" with an "equals" sign. For example tfarewell to arms (Return)

If you are not sure of the whole title, try shortening it.

tfarewell to (Return)

The computer will list all of the titles that match what you typed in:

Line No.	No. of titles	Titles
1	1	A farewell to alcohol
2	1	Farewell to Arabia
3	16	A farewell to arms

In the above example, there are 16 works with the title of A Farewell To Arms. The computer lists all of the different editions and versions (hardcover, large print, audiocassette, paperback) that are in the database. Press the line number (the number in the first column) to see them listed:

Line No.	Author	Title
1	Hemingway, Ernest	A farewell to arms sound recording
2	Hemingway, Ernest	A farewell to arms Large type edition
3	Hemingway, Ernest	A farewell to arms
4	Hemingway, Ernest	A farewell to arms
5	Hemingway, Ernest	A farewell to arms

Our library's holdings will be highlighted. Type in the line number of the title you want and press return:

AUTHOR: Hemingway, Ernest

TITLE: A farewell to arms

PUBLISHER: Scribner, c1929

No.	Call number	Volume	Material	Location	Status
1	Fiction Hemingway		Book	Winchester	Available

This book is kept in the Fiction Room under "Hemingway" and is available; that is, not checked out.

Next Week: Subject searching.

Pamela Powell to speak at library

Come and meet Pamela Powell, author of the children's fiction book, The Turtle Watchers, when she visits the Winchester Library on Tuesday, Jan. 5, at 3:30 p.m. in the Library's Meeting Room.

Powell was inspired to write The Turtle Watchers during her three-year stay in the West Indies, when she witnessed a leatherback turtle laying her eggs on a beach. This led to her conceiving a rousing adventure story for readers ages 7 to 11

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Winchester Public Library.

For information about this, or any of the Winchester Public Library's services for children, call the Children's Room at 721-7140.

Decorating seminar at library

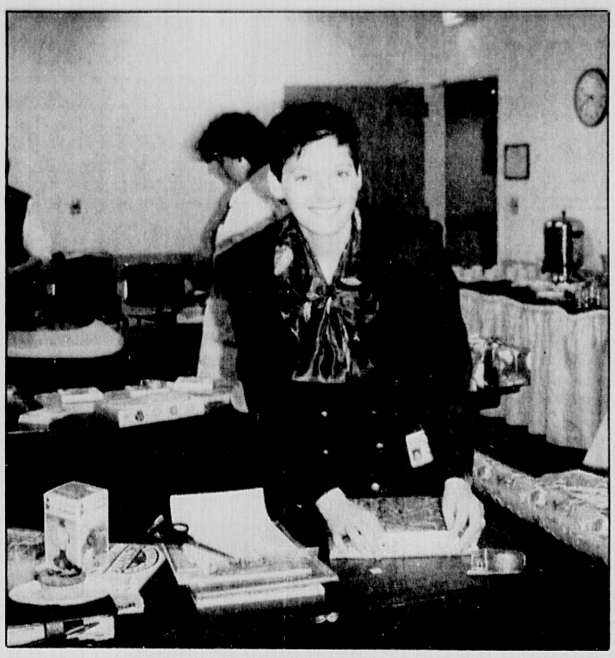

Professional decorator Terry Dacey will present a free home decorating seminar in the Library's Meeting Room on Saturday, Jan. 16 at 2 p.m. The seminar will focus on the use of color and ways to pull the various elements together to achieve a desired effect. The objective will be to help create an environment that expresses the individual's personal style, tastes and interests.

In addition to her home decorating business, Dacey teaches at Northern Essex Community College. This is the third time she has spoken at the Library.

Winter storytimes schedule at library

A Star-Spangled Investment

For 50 years U.S. Savings Bonds have been a star-spangled investment, as traditional as the Fourth of July, and a sure way to build for financial independence. The Series EE U.S. Savings Bond now pays market-based interest rates and is guaranteed by the U.S. Government against loss, theft, and destruction. Bond interest earnings are exempt from state and local income taxes, and the federal income tax liability on earnings can be deferred. Since January 1990 Bonds purchased and redeemed to pay education expenses can be totally tax-exempt (income limitations and certain registration requirements apply to the Education Bond Program).

Budget is released

The next step for the 40-page budget will be a public hearing on January 12 (See page 5B for published budget).The budget goes from the School Committee to the town manager in mid-February and then to the Finance Committee before it is voted on by Spring Town Meeting. Fitzgerald said it was "too early to call" on whether the town manager will accept the $14.49 million budget.

The additional teachers, which total 3.72 positions, are necessary due to an increase in enrollment, Fitzgerald said. Despite the increase in teachers, there will likely be three or four split grades at the elementary level next year. There is presently one split grade in the system.

The reinstatement of a curriculum director, which had been cut two years ago, should please education advocates who have criticized this cut as much as any other made by the School Committee over the last two years. "A curriculum director is a significant position in any school system," said Fitzgerald. There is a need for better curriculum articulation (in the Winchester schools)."

When the position was cut, the responsibility for curriculum was given to the principals. "It is better to have one person charged with that responsibility. The principals did an excellent job but they were stretched thin," said Fitzgerald.

Although there will be new positions and raises, non-personal items received some of the biggest increases in the budget. The instructional supplies line item was raised from $291,255 to $416,963. The equipment line item received one of the biggest increases from $15,000 to $68,693. The extra equipment costs include $27,793 for office furniture, which was $3,450 last year, and $33,170 for computers and audio-visual equipment, which was $6,255.

Contractual services will also be raised from $997,545 to $1,247,649. The largest increases under this line item include a raise in tuitions from $400,420 to $483,200 and a raise in transportation from $166,100 to $286,724.

more specifically, dehairing machinery. The machines removed the hair from the hides of leather. Joel Whitney, a machinist and inventor, moved to South Woburn in 1844. He formed a close friendship with a man named Goodyear, also from Woburn, who was working on early experiments in india rubber. They worked together on inventions; Whitney branching off to other interests where he improved the process of making steel saws and early woodworking tools. He founded Whitney Machine Factory taking advantage of the water from the Aberjona for his power. His son, Arthur, carried on the business into the 20th century.

Notice the streets were not paved, but Main Street had tracks for the trolley line running from Medford to Woburn and/or Stoneham. No cars appear in this photo, just a drover and his horses in the center of the street, and a smaller carriage and buggy can be seen parked in front of the drygoods store.

Today's photo shows a distinct lack of trees in the Center, although some have been planted within the last 10 years which will become large some day. Another missing element is the telephone poles now underground. The Locatelli Building (which today houses T. Michaels, Brigham's, etc.) was erected in the 1930s. It replaced several of the buildings seen in our early photograph, but more significantly, the section that winds around the corner and down Thompson Street sits on the exact footprint of some early houses and first-floor shops.

The existing courtyard behind was known as Purrington Place and was a small side street with shops and houses. By 1930 the area was such a hodgepodge that the Locatelli Building was a welcome change. What is interesting is the continuation of the mixed-use of the space, that is retail, office, and residences have always been in this area. Take a walk around this area some day and imagine it as it may have been 100 years ago, and search for the few existing clues to the early days of Winchester Center.

This child has cerebral palsy. Can you tell?

Cerebral Palsy is permanent brain damage that most commonly occurs before, during, or shortly after birth. Depending on the area of the brain affected, cerebral palsy can have widely varying symptoms – some as mild as a slight limp or speech impairment, or a learning disability that may not be detected until the child has experienced repeated failures in school.

At United Cerebral Palsy we're working with doctors, schools, and parents to help find better ways of detecting cerebral palsy. Because we know by experience that when the condition is detected early, there are many things we can do to minimize the effects.

To find out more about early diagnosis and ways to manage life with cerebral palsy, call UCP. There's no telling how important it could be.

The town was offered a $2,000 trade-in value for the old ambulance when it bought the new ambulance in August but declined the offer. Maurer said that he expects the town could get up to $11,000 for the ambulance. The new ambulance cost the town $77,000.

McNutt argued that keeping the old ambulance wasn't costing the town any money. "We should keep it as long as it is serving us at no cost," said McNutt. He added that if the old ambulance needed any major repairs, "we wouldn't do it."

Maurer said he sought the sale of the old ambulance for "philosophical reasons." Maurer said it was town practice to sell old equipment when new equipment is bought to replace it.

Van Aken noted that the Fire Department had claimed the ambulance was in almost unusable condition when the selectmen had to decide how to spend the money from Winchester Hospital, and he wondered why the Fire Department would now want to keep it. The ambulance has a cracked floor board and problems with the wiring, air conditioning, engine valves, and transmission.

McNutt said the ambulance, which has 38,000 miles on it, is safe for a back-up. "(The ambulance) would not meet requirements for an upfront ambulance, but it does meet requirements for back-up," said McNutt.

Van Aken said he would not vote to keep the back-up because "when we send out an ambulance it should be reliable." He added that he would rather call in an ambulance from another community. "We're better off having a front-line ambulance even if it's a few minutes late."

Local road race picks up pace

By Jerry Spar
SPORTS EDITOR

When the Liberty Athletic Club, the nation's oldest running club for women, went looking for a sponsor for its annual New Year's Day road race in Winchester, it seemed only natural to talk to a company that produces women's sporting goods.

Thus the bond between Liberty AC and a Massachusetts company called Ryka was formed.

And when the race organizers decided to find a charitable cause for this year's event, Ryka already had one — a fund that helps support women who are the victims of abuse.

So this year's race, previously called "Five on the First," is now the "Run for ROSE." ROSE is an acronym for Regaining One's Self-Esteem.

Race organizers are hoping that the event will increase people's awareness both of the cause and the organizations.

"It's tremendous exposure," Liberty AC Vice President Rita Cecil said. "It's important to us, because our club is not sponsored by any shoe company or anything. All our revenue is from fund-raising — major events like this one, an auction, and membership dues."

The connection with Bonnell Ford goes through Bruce Bonnell, whose daughter Sarah, a junior at Winchester High School, is a member of Liberty AC. Bonnell, a member of the Liberty Board of Directors, will be donating the car dealership's property as race headquarters for the third straight year (the race was held at a different site for four years prior).

One other change this year, along with the new sponsor, is the addition of a one-mile fun run/walk.

"We want to encourage families to come out," Cecil said. "In general, we're really trying to give back to the runners. Every runner, regardless of whether they win or not, gets a goody bag. And we're giving away our traditional prize for the 93rd, 193rd, 293rd, and so on, finishers."

NOTE: For more information on the race, including entry details, see page 3B.

Never a dull moment with coach Cliché

Getting a good line out of some coaches is like pulling teeth.

But it's never been that way with coach Cliché, the human quote machine. Once in a blue moon it's worth the effort to catch up with the coach, a legend in his own time.

A VIEW FROM A SPAR

"Thanks for giving me a shot at redemption, a chance to even the score," the coach says, flying out of the chute. "I thought I had been left for dead. But better late than never."

"Hey, forgive and forget," I say, fearing I should have let a sleeping dog lie. Too late. I had awoken a sleeping giant. I had to grin and bear it.

"I'm raring to go this year," the coach says, showing he's not past his prime. "I know I burned some bridges before, but I've turned over a new leaf. I'm willing to start anew and let the chips fall where they may. Now I'm just taking them one at a time. You have to put the past behind you, because tomorrow's a new day."

"Let's get down to business," I say, trying not to pull any punches, hit below the belt, kick a man while he's down or rub salt in the wounds. "You guys look good on paper. You seem to be a well-balanced club, everybody plays well, and there aren't many weaknesses throughout the lineup, because, as you know, you're only as strong as your weakest link.

"But statistics can be deceiving. So are you for real, can you back it up, or do you talk the talk without walking the walk? Perhaps you're just a pretender to the throne, living on borrowed time."

"We've learned from our mistakes," coach Cliché says. "I know last time out we dropped the ball and left with egg on our faces to go eat some humble pie. We took our lumps and got a taste of our own medicine. But the deck was stacked against us and it just wasn't in the cards. Anyhow, that was then, this is now. That's yesterday's news. Now the shoe's on the other foot. We've lived and learned. It's a brand new ball game."

"What's the bottom line?" I ask. "Have you got what it takes to be the cream of the crop or will you be hung out to dry, left to pick up the pieces, with nothing to show for your effort?"

"We'll be there when the smoke clears," the coach says, beginning to find the groove. "Let me give you one or more good reasons why. We take them one at a time and we don't look past anyone. We stay within ourselves and don't play outside the lines. We give it our all, go for broke and give 110 percent. I'm talking never say die.

> "Anything can happen, so throw the records away and let's see if we can get the monkey off our backs. I think we'll be able to give them a run for their money because, when the chips are down, we bite the bullet, reach deep down inside, and do what we have to do to get the job done."
> Coach Cliché

"When our backs are against the wall, we come out swinging," the coach adds. "We play like there's no tomorrow, we come to play every day, day-in and day-out. We don't hold back, we let it all hang out and we don't leave anything out there because we go until the tank is dry. We know how to turn it up a notch and play to the best of our ability because when the going gets tough, the tough get going."

"You really know how to give this reporter his money's worth," I

Causes for celebration

As 1992 draws to a close, the Star presents a month-by-month look at Winchester sports for the year.

January

The Winter sports season was well under way and Winchester had championship hopes for boys' swimming and wrestling, and tournament hopes for both basketball teams. It would be the wrestlers' year to shine, as the senior-dominated Sachem squad would blow through the league and go on to field two New England champs and one All-American.

The young gymnastics team ripped off a three-meet win streak, with freshman Megan Foley and senior Alyssa Berman leading the way.

Senior captain Adam Piandes broke a Winchester High School basketball record by scoring 26 first-half points in a 62-55 win over Burlington.

Quote of the month:

"They definitely outplayed us. I thought we were really ready for this game. We had a nice practice yesterday and the atmosphere before game time was fantastic. But they were a much better team than we were tonight."

— Distraught WHS hockey coach Jack Newhall, whose team would win just one game on the season.

February

The WHS basketball team nearly pulled off an upset of Bishop Fenwick in the second round of the state tourney, but Fenwick's Casey Arena took the game over down the stretch in a 63-57 Crusader win. The Sachems advanced to the Fenwick meeting by beating Lincoln-Sudbury 65-57 behind a 29-point effort from Piandes.

The WHS wrestlers won their third straight Middlesex League championship, getting a pin from heavyweight Bill Branley in the final match of the final meet at Woburn.

Quote of the month:

"I told them we were right where we thought we'd be at this point and they're all looking at me like, 'we are?', and I told them to go back out there and take it one match at a time."

— WHS wrestling coach Larry Tremblay, on Winchester's improbable comeback after trailing Woburn 23-4 after six events in the league championship match at Woburn.

March

WHS seniors Will Thilly and Chris Ebanks each won state and New England wrestling championships.

Winchester's Bantam hockey team captured the state championship with an exciting, 3-2 win over Triboro.

Quote of the month

"Really, we have a shot to win the league. We have a very well-balanced lineup made up mostly of seniors with at least one, if not two years of experience as starters."

— WHS baseball coach Bill Chase. His prediction turned out to be correct, as Winchester won the league for the first time since 1972.

What started as a promising season just a few weeks ago is rapidly turning into a nightmare for the Winchester High School hockey team.

Winchester High School
ROUNDUP

With consecutive losses to Stoneham (6-2) and Lexington (7-1), the Sachems have tumbled to the Middlesex League cellar.

On Saturday, Dec. 26, Winchester traveled to Lexington, where the Sachems figured to have a good chance at earning their first points of the season. The Minutemen, however, had other plans.

Lexington stunned the Sachems with three goals in the first 2:14 of the opening period, then added two more scores just 11 seconds apart later in the period, grabbing a 5-0 first-stanza lead.

Lexington scored two more early in the second, and only a Bobby Marrone end-to-end rush for a third-period goal kept the Sachems from being shut out.

Lexington buzzed all over Winchester, getting off 16 shots on dazed Sachem goalie Andrew Brown before Winchester managed its first shot. For the first period, Winchester was outshot 21-2.

Last Wednesday, Dec. 23, at the Stoneham Arena, Winchester played solid hockey for the better part of two periods, but costly penalties allowed the Spartans to pull away for a 6-2 triumph.

Matt Breuer got Winchester on the board just 4:03 into the contest, beating Stoneham goalie Rob Murgia. After Stoneham tied it, Paul McGowan notched his second of the season, at 3:50 of the second, scoring on a blazing slap shot. Stoneham tied it again, however, on a Jeff Cullen power-play goal midway through the second.

When Stoneham picked up its forechecking, Winchester retaliated by taking penalties. A roughing call on Breuer led to Stoneham's fourth goal, which came with just seven seconds left in the second. Stoneham added two more for the 6-2 final.

The Sachems will try to get back on track this week, beginning Wednesday, when they host basement-buddy Belmont at O'Brien Rink in Woburn (6 p.m.).

Sachem cagers throw scare into Lexington; Sachemettes go quietly

By Jim McKenzie

The Winchester High boys' basketball team made a bid to celebrate Christmas a little early last Wednesday, Dec. 23, throwing a real scare into the Lexington Minutemen on Lexington's home court before falling 79-71.

Winchester High School
BASKETBALL

Led by the outside shooting of Mark Morrison, Brian Keefe and Kirk Minihane, Winchester held a lead until Lexington turned up the defensive pressure and outscored the Sachems, 19-9, down the stretch.

Winchester needed to have a good shooting day as center Sean Furey sat out his second straight game. The Sachems knocked down eight 3-pointers, including two by Morrison, who finished with a game-high 29 points, and two more by Keefe, who scored 16 of his 20 points in the first half.

Kirk Minihane supplied much of the firepower in the second half, nailing three treys on the way to 13 points. Lexington got 24 from senior point guard Rashad Wilson and 19 from 6-foot-7-inch center Sean Groer.

"I was very pleased with everyone's effort," said Winchester coach Quinton Dale. "We did a real good job on our man-to-man."

MARK MORRISON
Pumps in 29 vs. Lexington

Despite allowing 79 points — by far the most any team had scored against the Sachems this season — Dale was happy with the team's overall defensive effort.

"Todd Sundstrom played well, and Mike Collins and Frank Frisoli did a nice job stopping their big center for a good stretch," said Dale.

Winchester was forced into some key turnovers when Lexington pressed late in the game.

"We're still young at (handling the press)," Dale said. "We panicked a little there. We're going to get a lot better."

Offensively, the biggest difference came at the free throw line. Lexington went to the stripe 29 times, compared to just 10 for Winchester. But the solid perimeter game kept Winchester in the game throughout.

"We were patient and got the shots we wanted," said Dale. "The kids played real hard. I hated to see them lose."

Sachemettes struggle on road

Things didn't go so smoothly for the Winchester girls last Wednesday as the visiting Sachemettes were slammed, 54-22, by a strong Lexington squad.

Winchester played well early on, but Lexington's impressive size (its shortest starter is 5-8) eventually took its toll on the smaller Sachemettes.

"The first 10 minutes we played very well," said Winchester coach Joe DiSarcina. "We played aggressive man-to-man defense, but again we were missing some easy shots."

The Sachemettes were led by point guard Julie Russo and senior center Jenn Russo, each with six points. Jenn Russo played a strong physical game throughout, against the much larger Minutemaids.

The Sachemettes trailed 30-15 at the break, and used the second half to get all 12 players a good amount of playing time.

"I think the final score was a bit deceptive," said DiSarcina. "They're a much better team than we are, but not 30 points better."

was worsened when several Winchester fans verbally (and nearly physically) abused an umpire they felt had missed a call.

Winchester's Brooke Foley won a first- and second-place award at the New England Diving Championships at Harvard University.

Chris Ebanks won All-America honors by finishing second in the nation at the U.S. High School Wrestling Nationals in Pittsburgh.

Quote of the month:

"This type of thing simply doesn't happen to wrestlers from Massachusetts."

— WHS wrestling coach Larry Tremblay, on Chris Ebanks' award.

May

Both the boys' and girls' tennis teams were bumped from the state tourney in the first round. Both teams won Middlesex League championships, but the boys drew a tough Andover squad and lost 4-1, while the girls drew Brookline and fell 3-2.

Winchester's Matt Fuller won the state individual tennis championship at Holy Cross with a straight-set win.

The Winchester Sports Foundation inducted six former WHS greats into its Hall of Fame. Honored were: Henry Knowlton, Dot MacKenzie, Artie Johnson, Tony DeTeso, Pete Provinzano and Victor Lawson.

The Auto Salon A's won their fourth straight Winchester Bambino Baseball championship.

Quote of the month:

"I don't want to make any excuses, but give me a break. We were the third seed! I don't understand how we draw Andover in the first round. It's really not fair. This is the third straight year we've drawn an outstanding team in the first round."

— Frustrated WHS boys' tennis coach Sean O'Laughlin, after Winchester lost to Andover, a perennial state tennis power, in the first round of the state tournament.

June

After a six-year tenure as head WHS basketball coach, Mike Boyages was not rehired by the Winchester School Committee. The dismissal touched off a debate in town, as supporters pointed to Winchester's four straight tournament appearances while detractors said the coach had trouble communicating with his players.

The Middlesex League champion Sachem baseball team was bumped in the first round of the state tournament by old nemesis Belmont. Marauder senior hurler Jay O'Shaughnessy put on a clinic in beating the Sachems 5-3 at Manchester Field. O'Shaughnessy struck out 17 Sachems and allowed just two hits.

July

The Winchester Men's Softball League held its annual charity games at Ginn Field on July 27. In the annual all-star game, the A League crushed the B League 15-2. In the nightcap, the Ventura All-Stars, a team comprised of present and former Boston Bruins, challenged the Winchester Men's Softball League coaches and emerged with a 10-8 victory.

In local baseball action, Dugout Sports struggled through the first rounds of the state Bambino Baseball championships, while the Summer Sachems improved their record to 13-6 and sent eight players to the league all-star team.

Winchester resident Carole Marks completed a 48-day, 3,400-mile cross-country bicycle trip to benefit the American Diabetes Association.

Joe Palumbo and Kirk Holmquest teamed up to win the Winchester Tennis Association (WTA) 1992 men's doubles championship. Catherine Dunn and Sarah Doran won the women's title.

Quotes of the month:

July 6: "We didn't really hit the ball at all tonight."

July 7: "We hit the ball a little better tonight."

— 15-16-year-old Lou Tompkins All-Star coach Joe Marrone, who constantly stressed that hitting would be the key to his team's success throughout the summer season.

August

The Summer Sachems marched to their second straight Middlesex League championship, beating Burlington 7-4 behind Brian Mannett's tremendous three-run homer in the top of the sixth inning at Burlington's Simonds Park.

Over 190 players competed in the WTA's 1992 Junior Tournament, which had to be moved indoors due to continual rain.

Dugout Sports completed a fabulous summer season, capturing both the State and New England 11-year-old Bambino Baseball championships. The Dugout won the New England title on the home field of the other finalist, South Meriden, Conn.

Quote of the month:

"All I was thinking was 'Oh my God, if I make an out my teammates are gonna hate me.' "

— Jay Higgins, Dugout Sports' 11-year-old third baseman, on his thoughts as he approached the plate with the potential winning run 60 feet away in the championship game of the New England Bambino Baseball tournament. Higgins' infield hit won the title for the Dugout.

September

As the new school year rolled around, there was still a little unfinished summer league business. In the Winchester Men's Softball League, Carroll Insurance and the Pirates took home their second consecutive championships in the A and B Leagues, respectively.

"This type of thing simply doesn't happen to wrestlers from Massachusetts."

WHS wrestling coach Larry Tremblay
referring to WHS All-America wrestler Chris Ebanks

All 10 graduated seniors from the WHS girls' soccer team found slots on collegiate teams, and even with just two returning starters, the Sachemettes were the pick to win the league.

Winchester's field hockey team had a new coach, Michelle Palumbo, and a new attitude. Though they struggled early, the Sachemettes went on to earn the respect of their opponents.

The WHS football team won its first two games, led by the play of quarterback John Rauseo. The senior captain passed for 123 yards and ran for 146 in a season opening win at Franklin, and followed that up with a 166-yard rushing effort against Burlington.

Quote of the month:

"The kids didn't believe they could score. As soon as they put the first one in the net, the others came much more easily."

— Field hockey coach Michelle Palumbo, after Winchester broke out of a scoring drought in a 4-3 win over Wakefield, the team's first victory of the season.

October

Winchester's football team suffered a three-game slide, including its worst defeat in more than 10 years, a 36-0 loss at Reading. After a 28-14 loss at Lexington on Oct. 17, the Sachem seniors and coaches held a closed-door meeting and emerged determined to win the last five games of the season.

The undefeated boys' soccer team was mauled 4-0 at Belmont, but didn't lose again in the regular season, clinching the league with a 15-1-1 mark. The girls won their ninth league championship in 10 years under coach Chris Scanlon.

The golf team captured its first-ever Division 2 North championship, beating 12 other schools at Brookline's Putterham Meadows on Oct. 29.

Quote of the month:

"If we were ever to win this thing, Coach (Dave) Miller would go nuts."

— WHS senior golf captain Mike McGinty, the day before Winchester won the North sectional championship.

November

Perhaps the most tumultuous month of the year found upsets galore. The league champion Winchester soccer teams were both booted from the state tourney in the second round. The boys lost 2-1 to Andover while the girls fell in a shootout to North Andover.

On the gridiron, Winchester completed a 5-0 "second season" with a 19-0 wipeout of the favored Woburn Tanners in the annual Thanksgiving Day battle at Woburn's Connolly Stadium. Senior Josh Carroll's 99-yard touchdown run after stripping a Woburn fullback of the football on the half-yard line highlighted an emotional Sachem win.

Quote of the month:

"He came off tackle, and I hit him and Todd (Sundstrom, Winchester's defensive tackle) hit him. I knew he wasn't gonna get in the end zone, so I just stripped it out and ran."

— Josh Carroll, after "The Strip" in the Woburn-Winchester game.

December

The winter sports season got underway with some of the old, some of the new, and some of just the same-old, same-old.

Supposedly retired WHS wrestling coach Larry Tremblay found himself back at the helm for the grapplers, but found a young, inexperienced team for the first time in over a decade. Somehow, Tremblay managed to guide the team to a 3-1 start.

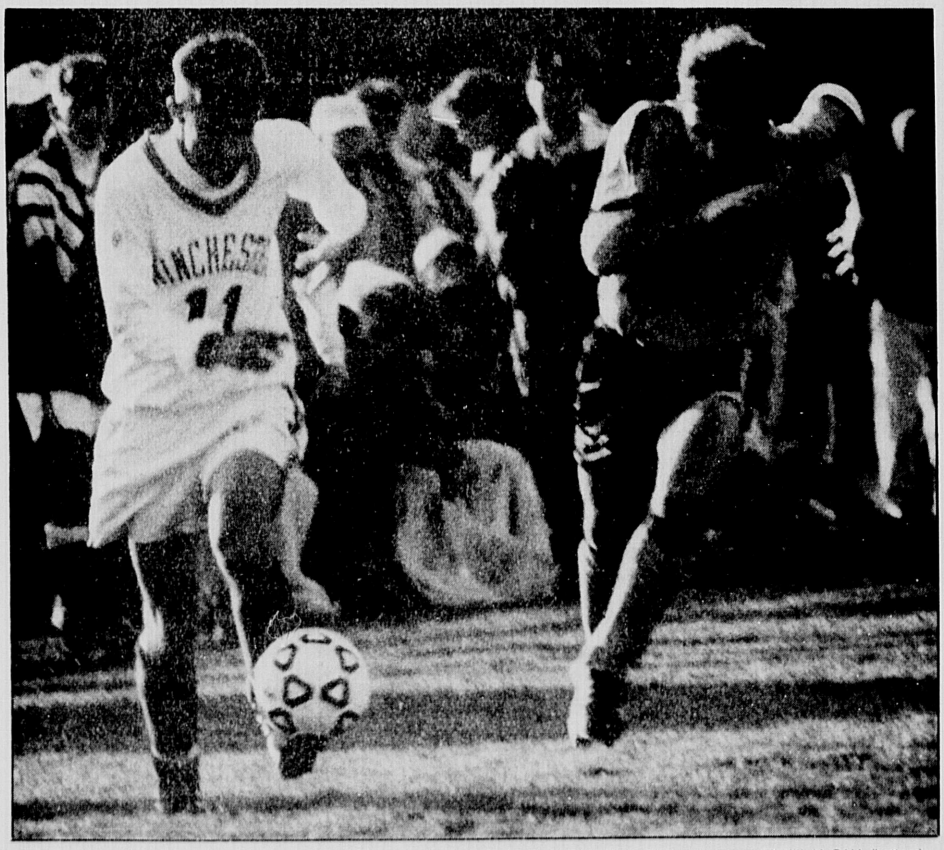

Quinton Dale was introduced as the new WHS basketball coach, and found out quickly just how tough Middlesex League basketball can be. After a win on opening night, Dale's club lost three straight tight games on the road.

The WHS hockey team got off to a slow start, losing its first four games by progressively larger margins. Winchester was hoping to avoid finishing in the Middlesex League cellar for the seventh straight year.

Quote of the month:

"Coach showed us what to do during the timeout. After (teammate Russo) stole it, I just wanted to put it in. At the end, I was going real slow."

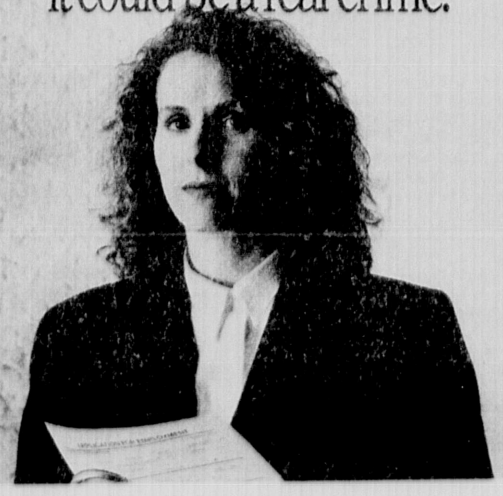

— WHS freshman girls' basketball player Corinne Imperatore, after her driving layup with two seconds left propelled the Sachemettes to a wild, 60-59 win in the season-opener.

Fall Winchester High teams were among the top in their fields. Senior quarterback John Rauseo (top photo) led the Sachem gridders to wins in their final five games. WHS soccer had plenty to cheer about as both the boys and girls won league titles. Senior forward Shaun Oliver (bottom) led the Middlesex League in scoring.

If you overlook this job applicant it could be a real crime.

Not only could you be missing out on some valuable talent, you could be breaking the law. The Americans with Disabilities Act requires all employers to make workplaces accessible and to give everyone who's qualified the chance to apply for a job – without discrimination. That could mean overlooking your prejudices and giving someone a chance that's long overdue. Support Easter Seals.

Bay State Winter Games upcoming

The Eighth Annual Bay State Winter Games will be held in the Berkshires of Massachusetts on Feb. 5-7.

Athletes of all ages from around Massachusetts will compete in the following four sports: Masters of Massachusetts ice hockey (30-plus and 40-plus age divisions), figure skating, alpine skiing (two-run giant slalom for high school athletes), and cross country skiing (5K and 10K races for all ages, lollipop race for kids).

Entry deadline is Jan. 22. For entry information, call 727-3227.

On Saturday night, Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m., the annual figure skating show called Bay State Skate, featuring national and regional stars, will be held at Williams College Ice Rink. Tickets are $8 each and can be purchased over the phone in advance by calling the office of the Bay State Games at 727-3227.

Fencing academy free demonstration

The Academy of Fencing, located at 125 Walnut St. in Watertown, will offer a free demonstration and trial class in the Olympic sport of fencing.

The free class, for children between the ages of 6 and 16, will be held Saturday, Jan. 2, at 1:30 p.m.

The free demonstration will take place on Friday, Jan. 8, at 8 p.m. Some of New England's top fencers will demonstrate foil, epee and sabre, the three "weapons" used in modern competitive fencing.

The Academy begins its winter term on Monday, Jan. 4, for beginning juniors and Monday, Jan. 11, for adults. Adult beginner classes meet Monday and Wednesday evenings and Saturdays. More advanced level classes are also available.

Each class meets for an hour and the term lasts for eight weeks. Equipment is provided by the Academy. Open fencing hours, when students may go to the Academy and practice, are included in the fee.

The Academy of Fencing is the Boston area's only fencing school and is part of the non-profit Boston Fencing Club. Call 926-3450 for more information.

Competition will be held for men and women in the following 17 events: freestyle (50 meters, 100m, 200m, 400m, 800m, 1500m, 4x100m, 4x200m); butterfly (100m, 200m); backstroke (100m, 200m); breaststroke (100m, 200m); intermediate medley (200m, 400m); medley relay (4x100m).

Easter Seals, Celts sponsor Shoot-Out

Hundreds of area youngsters have received invitations from Boston Celtics star Kevin McHale to participate in the 1992 Easter Seal/Boston Celtics Basketball Shoot-Out. Local schools and youth organizations have also been invited to participate.

"We know kids like to shoot baskets in their yards, their neighborhoods and churches," said McHale, the Shoot-Out chairman. "Kids can take part in the Easter Seal Shoot-Out on their own or at their schools."

Youngsters participating in the Shoot-Out collect pledges from family and friends for each basket shot during a three-minute period. A parent, teacher or coach signs off on the number of baskets completed. The shooter collects his or her pledges and sends the money to Easter Seals to fund services for people with disabilities.

Last year, nearly 5,000 youngsters raised $150,000 in Basketball Shoot-Outs all over Massachusetts. The top 100 fund raisers joined McHale and Dee Brown in the Boston Garden for a special basketball clinic.

This season, 100 winners will attend the clinic at Boston Garden on March 26, 1993.

For more information, call David Lamacchia at 1-800-922-8290.

Sachem runners in league chase

"I need a completely different team to show up for Belmont," said Winchester coach Jack Newhall. "We had a great practice (Monday), and I hope the kids will respond."

Grapplers show strength

The Sachem wrestlers continue to impress, beating two of three opponents at a quad meet in Wellesley last Wednesday to move to 3-1 on the young season.

Winchester knocked off Brookline and Concord-Carlisle but fell to top-ranked Wellesley. According to Winchester coach Larry Tremblay, the grapplers are progressing faster than he had expected.

"That's two good wins for us," said Tremblay. "We beat them real good. We're looking to get the younger kids as much experience as we can early in the season. It's all going to pay off for them."

The Sachems continued to receive outstanding contributions from sophomores Wes Mathews and Dan Boffo and senior captain Jeff Edmands. Mathews has repeatedly impressed the WHS staff with his intensity level while remaining undefeated at 145. Boffo has yet to lose at 152, and Edmands has had no troubles at 189.

Winchester will be moving some wrestlers around in the next few weeks to give the team better balance. Mathews is expected to drop to 140 and Boffo to 145 to allow each of Winchester's 160-pounders to wrestle.

"We're looking for lineup flexibility," said Tremblay. "By dropping Boffo and Mathews, we're putting them into more difficult classes, but they'll be getting better competition. They'll reap the benefits in their junior and senior years."

The team got an unexpected lift from freshman Artie Carr, a newcomer to the team who got a pin in his first match, dropping a Brookline wrestler in the first period.

Track battles league foes

Winchester met Stoneham in indoor track last Tuesday at the Lexington field house, and while the girls lost a tight, 45-41 meet, the boys came back to earn a 43-43 tie with the Spartans.

Trailing by as much as 29-7, the Sachems got a 1-2 finish from Shaun Oliver and Rolando Oyola in the 600 and a first from Paul Albiani and a tie for third between Rob Donlon and Darin Byrne in the 300, to pull within 12, 33-21.

Ben Simeone won the hurdles with Brian Mannett taking third, and when Ron Hall and Brian Lindmark swept first and second in the dash, Winchester was within striking distance. In an exciting mile relay, Oliver, Albiani, Donlon and Oyola outraced the Stoneham contingent for a 43-all tie.

In the girls meet, Winchester fell just short of the Lady Spartans despite wins by Deidre Murdock in the two-mile, Laura Aleo in the 600, Nicole Malouf in the 300, Sarah Bonnell in the mile, Diana Grande in the hurdles, Colleen Campbell in the dash and a win from Grande, Malouf, Bonnell and Aleo in the relay.

respond. "So I guess the fans can also expect to get what they pay for?"

"You hit the nail right on the head," answers the coach, not missing a beat. "We're starting to come together, beginning to jell, yet we've got a long way to go. We'll see what they're made of when they're on center stage, in the bright lights, playing to a packed house. Hey, anything can happen, so throw the records away and let's see if we can get the monkey off our backs. I think we'll be able to give them a run for their money because, when the chips are down, we bite the bullet, reach deep down inside, and do what we have to do to get the job done."

"It sounds like you want it so bad you can taste it," I say. "But can you get a total team effort for the entire game, or is the fat lady going to sing even though it ain't over 'til it's over?"

"Stranger things have happened," the coach says. "But I'm not going to lose any sleep over it. If we drop a few along the way, well, losing builds character. Besides, you get out of it what you put into it."

"Time's up," I say. "It's crunch time, down to the wire, the chips are on the table and it's the grand finale. Any parting shots?"

"You haven't heard the last of me," the coach says as he walks the long road back. "We're not rebuilding, we're reloading. We're always a threat and have to be respected. So this is no fond farewell. I'll always be a part of the action, right in the thick of things, ready to mix it up."

"Will you be satisfied after you get your licks," I ask, as another interview bites the dust. "Or will you still get after it 24 hours, each and every day?"

"It's much too early to say," the coach answers. "Besides, in this racket, anything can happen — and it usually does."

January Lecture Series

Two speakers, Richard Lederer and David Smith, are scheduled to head off the post-holiday January doldrums for weather-weary Winchesterites. Sponsored by Friends of the Winchester Public Library, admission is $5 each, or $8 if you wish to purchase both tickets at once, in advance.

Richard Lederer, best-selling author of "Anguished English," "Get Thee to a Punnery," "Crazy English," "The Play of Words," and "The Miracle of Language," broadcasts regularly on radio channels across the country. Elected 1989-1990 International Punster of the Year by the International Save the Pun Foundation, Lederer's talks and workshops have been called "as much a performance as a presentation." Also the Grammar Grappler for "Writer's Digest," his work and wit have appeared in "The New York Times," "The New Yorker," and "People," among other recognized publications.

David Smith, a longtime educator at Shady Hill, and recipient of the "Breaking the Mold Award" by the U.S. Department of Education, gives us geography in his "Mapping the World by Heart" and the forthcoming "Profile Village." Termed a brilliantly educated, well-read, contemplative man with a versatile and powerful intellect," Smith conducts a hands-on workshop for young and old, for travelers, and for dreamers. According to enthusiastic reviewers on NBC's "Today Show" and in "Time," this dynamic lecturer gives you no less than the world.

Richard Lederer will speak on Sunday, Jan. 10, 1993 at 3 p.m.; David Smith will speak on Sunday, Jan. 31, 1993, also at 3 p.m. Both lectures will take place at Winchester High School Auditorium. Advanced sale tickets to Richard Lederer's Heals Over Head in Love with Language (Sic) and David Smith's Maps. Lies and Dreams are available at Bookends, Henderson's, and the Winchester Public Library. Books and materials will be on sale at both lectures. For further information, call 729-1346.

Young musicians stage concert to benefit AIDS patients

Winchester musicians ages 10 to 25 will join together on Saturday, Jan. 2 at 4 p.m. in the Old Parish Hall at the Parish of the Epiphany. The proceeds of the concert will benefit the AIDS patients at the Hospice at Mission Hill in Boston.

The tickets are $5 each and will be on sale all week at Henderson's stationers (a sponsor of the concert), as well as at the office at the Parish of the Epiphany. They will also be available at the door on Saturday, Jan. 2, before the concert. The concert is being organized by Alison Hoffnagle (729-1886) and Lee Behnke (729-5788).

Coutry Club to host annual bonspiel

The Winchester Country Club will hold its 36th annual international mixed curling bonspiel (or tournament) on Jan. 7 through 10, 1993.

Curling is a game in which four-person teams slide polished 40 pound granite stones down a long sheet of ice to a target area. While one team member delivers his or her stone, the captain (called the skip), directs play from the opposite end. The other team members sweep the ice ahead of the stone to make it go farther if needed or to straighten its course. do curlers wear skates? No, they wear rubber-soled shoes. The object is to get stones into the target, or "house", to knock out opposing stones, and to guard friendly stones.

This ancient game involves a great deal of strategy and can be very exciting. It is very popular in Canada and many of the northern United States. It is also played in the Scandinavian countries, Scotland, England, most European countries, and even Australia and Japan. Curling has recently been made an Olympic Medal Sport, which should broaden its appeal and promote increased competition.

Winchester's bonspiel will include up to seventeen teams, four fron Canada, several local clubs, Nashua, NH, Belfast, Maine, Schenectady, NY, and Cleveland, Oh.

Cate School names new headmaster

After an exhaustive seven-month search, Cate School is pleased to announce the selection of Peter Thorp as its new headmaster. Thorp will succeed Headmaster Scott McLeod, whose distinguished career at Cate spans 28 years, 18 as headmaster. McLeod's resignation takes effect June 30.

Thorp and his family come to Cate from the Fountain Valley School in Colorado Springs, Colo., where he now serves as associate headmaster and teaches history. During his 17-year tenure at Fountain Valley, Thorp has chaired the history department, and served as academic dean, dean of faculty and assistant headmaster.

Thorp was born in Winchester, on March 25, 1948. His wife Jane is a registered nurse, who has worked in emergency rooms and intensive care units and as a medical consultant. They have two daughters — Elyssa, 12 and Amy, 8.

Thorp received his bachelor's degree in art history from Williams College, and his master's degree in social sciences from Boston State College. He attended the Northfield-Mount Hermon Counseling Institute, was a special student at Harvard's Graduate School of Education, and has participated in various workshops sponsored by the National Association of Independent Schools, Klingenstein Foundation and Independent School Management. Thorp has also received several fellowships, which have enabled him to spend close to a year-and-a-half abroad conducting independent studies in Europe and North Africa and attending a summer seminar in China.

On a more personal note, Thorp loves to read and enjoys all sports — particularly bicycling and skiing. He delights in travel, as evidenced by a 1986 sabbatical, when he and his family spent five months visiting French Polynesia, Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia and Hong Kong. He has also made seven trips to Europe, including five as student director and crew chief on a medieval dig at the Abbaye de Psalmodi, near Arles, France, and has visited the Soviet Union.

Peter and Jane Thorp will bring to Cate an energy, commitment and leadership necessary to lead the school into the next century. We look forward to their arrival on the Mesa.

Holiday cheer was in the air at the Jenks Senior Center recently. The two Kindergarten classes from the Ambrose School performed a concert of Christmas carols and holiday songs for the seniors.

Howard R. Bartlett

PROFESSOR EMERITUS

Howard R. Bartlett, retired history professor and head of the MIT Department of Humanities for a quarter of a century, died Sunday, Dec. 27, in Amenity Manor Convalescent Center in Topsham, Maine. He was 91.

Born in Auburn, Maine, Bartlett graduated in 1919 from Auburn's Edward Little High School. Four years later, he received a bachelor's degree from Dartmouth College and, in 1928, earned his master's degree from Harvard University.

In 1923, Bartlett began working at Arthur Perry & Co. Investment Brokers in Boston. Having transferred one year later to the Wood & Smith Shoe Co. in Auburn, Maine, Bartlett worked there until his father's death in 1925, then took over the family dry goods business. He managed that business, F. Bartlett & Sons, until 1926.

From 1928 to 1929, Bartlett taught history at Haverhill High School, then, in 1929, began teaching history at MIT. At that time, the Department of English and History — later known as the Department of Humanities — was comprised of only 16 or 17 members. Said Bartlett in an interview, "We all taught everything in those days, including composition, engineering report writing, public speaking and a modest amount of literature and history."

Early in his career, Bartlett's special interest was American economic history. He later concentrated on contemporary social and political history — specifically, the changes wrought by technology and the manner in which various cultures, particularly those of underdeveloped nations, adjust to them.

In 1935, he was appointed assistant professor and, in 1938, associate professor. He became acting head of the department that year and, two years later, was made department head with the rank of professor. Having relinquished his administrative duties in 1963, Bartlett returned to teaching until his retirement in 1967. For the next three years, he remained at MIT as a senior lecturer.

During his time as department head, the role of humanities became increasingly important at MIT, as represented by the establishment in 1950 of the School of Humanities and Social Science and the inauguration, in 1955, of a double major in humanities and science or engineering. These changes were followed by the establishment of a humanities major in 1966, which was, in great measure, the culmination of Professor Bartlett's work.

While employed at MIT, Bartlett also worked from 1957 to 1958 as a consultant for the U.S. State Department's International Exchange Service and the Indian Ministry of Education. In addition, he served in 1963 as a consultant for the Ford Foundation, helping to establish the Birla Institute of Technology and Science in Pilani, India.

In 1958, Bartlett and his wife moved into the Burton House, an MIT dormitory. This move was the first step in what has become the highly successful house master system at MIT, in which all the dormitories have resident masters and tutors. Professor Bartlett served as house master until 1963, when he and his wife returned to their home in Winchester, where he was a member of the Citizens' Advisory Committee on the Schools and was chairman of the School Committee.

A former director of the Germaenia Cooperative Bank of Boston, Bartlett also directed the Howard Benevolent Society in Boston, and was a former trustee of the Warren Institution of Savings and the Union Warren Savings Bank, both of Boston.

In 1951, Bartlett began to summer in South Harpswell, Maine, and, following his retirement, moved there permanently. While living in South Harpswell, Bartlett was a member of the Elijah Kellogg Church and the Harpswell Neck Volunteer Ambulance Association.

Husband of the late Helen (Root) Bartlett, to whom he had been married for more than 50 years, he leaves five grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; one niece; and one nephew.

He was the father of the late Linda Hersey, who died Feb. 26.

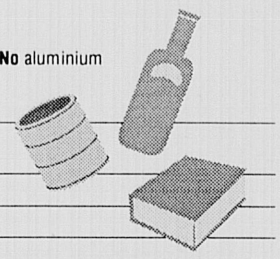

A memorial service will be held at a later date.

Donations may be made to the Harpswell Neck Volunteer Ambulance Association, c/o Stephen Harris, South Harpswell, Maine 04079.

Arrangements were made by the Brackett Funeral Home, Brunswick.

St. Eulalia's Parish in Winchester is sponsoring a seven-week program "Divorce and Beyond". The program is for people who are already divorced or who have at least filed for divorce. Church officials note: "It is developed to help gain a perspective on divorce — to cope with strains and stresses — to find ways of coping that will lead to growth and eventual restructuring of one's life. That is to be able to enter as a whole person into the mainstream of life." The sessions will be held Monday evenings, Jan. 4 to Feb. 8 from 8:15 p.m. — 9:30 p.m. in the parish center. For information and registration call 729-8220.

St. Mary's Sodality to meet in Jan.

Saint Mary's Blessed Virgin Sodality will meet Tuesday morning, Jan. 5 in the convent. Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. by Rev. Paul G. Kelley, Sodality Spritual Director. Guest speaker will be Roger Dumont. He will give a presentation on Mission America. A light luncheon will be served by Sodality members. All women of the Parish are cordially invited.

Brigham Gill

Location: Route 9, Natick

History: Joseph Gill and Art Brigham started their business in a small Wellesley building in 1966. As the business rapidly grew, they relocated in 1968 to their current store in Natick. The Jeep line-up was added in 1975 and Suzuki in 1991. Joseph Gill's son, Richard, who is vice president and general manager, now runs and operates the dealership and its 42 employees. Gill is also vice president of the MetroWest Auto Dealers Association which was formed this past summer to attract customers to the MetroWest area dealerships.

Types of Cars Sold: Pontiac, Jeep Eagle, Suzuki.

Best Deal on The Lot: Jeep Grand Wagoneer

Service: "We offer a service department and a full body shop for any frame, body or painting needs you may have," explains Richard Gill.

Specialties: At Brigham Gill you can find a strong commitment to customer satisfaction, more than an average dealership, says Richard Gill. "We also offer a large selection of used cars," said Gill, referring to the large inventory of used Jeeps on the lot at all times.

Growth: There has been a growth in demand for 4-wheel drive sport and utility vehicles in the past several years.

Incentives: A wide variety of rebates are being offered on all makes, as well as interest rates as low as 2.9% on Bonnevilles, and free maintenance on all 1992 Pontiacs.

Philosophy: Richard Gill and his staff are committed to total customer satisfatction because they believe it is the key to success in the 90s.

Grand Cherokee

Jeep enhances handling and comfort for 1993

After setting a new standard of ride, handling and comfort for compact sport utility vehicles, the Jeep Grand Cherokee adds more "coal to the fire" in its first full model year with more production and more new customer-pleasing features. These include offering the only V-8 engine in a compact sport utility vehicle, adding two-wheel drive models with six-cylinder engines beginning in January and introducing the top-of-the-line, Grand Wagoneer. "The Grand Wagoneer features a unique exterior appearance and interior trim and includes an extensive list of standard performance, luxury, comfort and safety features," said Larry W. Baker, Jeep-Eagle General Manager. "Both the Grand Wagoneer and Grand Cherokee represent a quantum leap forward in blending the legendary off-road ruggedness and durability of Jeep with a new standard for ride, comfort and on-road handling." Some industry pundits have said Grand Cherokee's on-road handling moves toward a luxury sedan. Arguably, the vehicle handles better than any other sport utility. engine will deliver 220 horsepower at 4,800 rpm and 285 pound feet of torque at 3,600 rpm. This engine is available in the base, Laredo and Limited versions and is standard in the Grand Wagoneer.

The V-8 engine expands Grand Cherokee's trailer towing capacity from 5,000 pounds to 6,500 pounds in four-wheel-drive, the highest in its class. Anchored by what may be the most eye-appealing design in its segment, the Grand Cherokee features:

The first driver's side air bag ever offered in a sport utility vehicle — a standard feature.

Anti-lock brakes operable in four-wheel-drive as standard for superior steering and vehicle handling control in emergency situations.

Increased body structure torsional stiffness that interacts with a four-corner, multi-link coil spring suspension system (Quadra-Coil) to dramatically smooth out the ride for occupants in off-highway conditions.

Use of a new, ozone-friendly refrigerant, R134a. It replaces the more commonly used freon gas, the first of several Chrysler vehicles to improve its air conditioning system for a better environment.

A new, electronically-controlled, four-speed automatic transmission becomes available with the six-cylinder engine at midyear, as does a power sunroof option across model line.

Other popular features either standard or available on Grand Cherokee models include front bucket seats; floor-mounted, transmission controls; a 60/40 split bench rear seat, an air conditioning system with automatic temperature control; keyless entry system with two transmitters; security system; night vision safety mirrors; power windows and locks; a top-of-the-line, off-highway, performance suspension package called Up-Country; trac-lock rear differential, and three audio systems.

Available in a four-door bodystyle only, the Grand Cherokee offers four four-wheel drive models from which to choose — Base, Laredo, Limited and Grand Wagoneer.

Minimize effects of salt and ice

Pre-winter waxing combats damage

When winter arrives, so do all the factors that contribute to automobile rusting, and their eventual demise. But, combatting rust can be as simple as waxing the vehicle with a premium car wax.

Rust forms on cars in two major ways.

"Galvanic" corrosion results from the combination of two dissimilar metals and an electrolyte. An electrolyte is a fluid that conducts electricity, such as a salt solution that's found on winter roads.

"Concentration cell" corrosion may account for even more rusting than galvanic action. Caked dirt containing mud and road salt that's embedded in an existing nick or scratch on an auto finish is an example. This condition results in rapid corrosion or enlarged paint blisters around the exposed area. It will spread quickly due in adverse damp winter elements.

However, only unprot-ected bare metal is vulnerable to corrosion. A premium car wax will help seal these areas. It will help prevent surface corrosion from spread-ing.

Another reason cars should be waxed in the winter is that heating systems, both commercial and residential, work overtime during this season. This sends heavy concentrations of pollutants into the air. There's more fallout. In summer contaminants on the car's surface are easily washed away.

During the winter months, road-film on a car's finish can be 10 times greater than during the summer. Washing is less convenient during the winter so these contaminants stay on the finish longer and are harder to remove. A premium car wax sets up a barrier between the car's finish and these contaminants.

Selecting a premium wax for that pre-winter wax treatment is a smart investment. Premum waxes cost more because they're made from with more effective ingredients which cost more. Compared to the purchase price of an automobile, it's money wisely spent.

During winter months, road-film on a car's finish can be 10 times greater than during the summer.

Is your car ready for winter's first chill?

Steps to make this winter a breeze

Are you ready for the morning after winter's first cold night?

Inevitably we'll hear weathercasters warn us that the big chill is on its way. It's a difficult time for your car, but let's assume you've taken care of seasonal services — you've serviced the cooling system with proper antifreeze protection. You've had the engine tuned up, changed the oil and checked out the battery and electrical system.

What can you do on the day before the arrival of that cold Canadian air? Consider these suggestions from the Car Care Council:

Park in a location protected from the wind. If you have no garage or carport, park with the rear of the vehicle toward the wind.

Place a 75 watt light bulb near the battery to prevent freezing. Mount it securely, so it cannot touch anything.

Fill the gas tank and pour in a bottle of fuel line antifreeze as an added precaution. Condensation in the tank and gas lines can freeze up, blocking fuel flow.

If you've been doing a lot of stop-and-go driving with lights, heater and other accessories turned on, hook up your battery charger, if you have one. A battery may lose half or more of its power when the temperature takes a severe dip.

Have some lock defroster and a good scraper handy.

Do your windshield wipers and washers work properly? Do you have adequate windshield washer antifreeze solvent? (Consider installing winter wiper blades that resist becoming encrusted with ice and snow.)

Check tire inflation. For every 10 degree drop in temperature, tires lose one pound of pressure. If the thermometer read 80 degrees the last time you checked them, your tires would be underinflated by 5 pounds or more when the temperature falls below freezing.

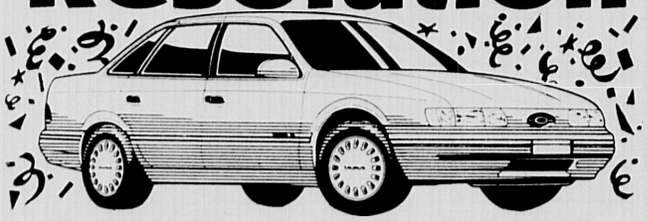

The council offers an informative pamphlet entitled "Are you sure you and your car are ready for winter?" Providing detailed preventive maintenance tips, the illustrated brochure includes a handy 36-point bumper-to-bumper check list plus suggestions for a blizzard emergency kit.

It's free. Send a stamped, self-addressed #10 envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. W, One Grande Lake Dr., Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Car Care Council's five most common causes of breakdowns on the road:

* car runs out of gas
* engine stalls or won't start
* dead battery
* flat tire
* car overheats

Buick LeSabre

1993 model touts enhanced engine

1993 Buick LeSabre Limited

FLINT, Mich. — LeSabre, Buick's best-selling model that was completely redesigned in 1992, features an enhanced version of the highly-regarded 3800 V-6 engine and other refinements for the 1993 model year.

The 3800 V-6 with tuned port injection has been redesigned for quieter, more responsive performance, while also meeting stricter emission standards in California. Torque is increased by 5 lb-ft to 225 at 3200 rpm while horsepower remains 170 at 4800 rpm.

LeSabre, offered in six-passenger Custom and Limited sedan models, again has an electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive. Estimated fuel economy is improved by one mile per gallon in the city. The projected EPA figures are 19 miles per gallon in the city and 28 on the highway.

Anti-lock brakes (ABS) and a driver-side air bag are among a long list of safety and security features. ABS, which was standard on Limited in '92, is now standard on Custom as well.

Other new standard equipment includes power door locks on all models and variable-effort steering on Limited. Variable-effort steering is a system designed to make steering easier in parking and other low-speed maneuvers while providing more "road feel" at highway speeds.

The system reduces the flow rate from the power steering pump as the speed of the car increases. The reduction in flow rate to the steering gear produces a higher steering effort. This provides firmer on-center steering effort for improved road feel at highway speeds.

LeSabre retains the aerodynamic shape introduced in 1992 that was described by William L. Porter, chief of the Buick exterior design studio where the car was designed, as having "all of the fluid lines that exude the character of a full-size Buick — a character of muscular grace." LeSabre's drag coefficient is .32.

Traction control, again optional on Limited, is designed to enhance vehicle control during acceleration below 30 mph and is especially effective when poor road conditions — such as ice, snow, mud and gravel — are encountered. The system uses anti-lock brakes to control wheel slippage, and senses when the driving wheels are spinning faster than the non-driving wheels. When this condition is detected, the system applies the brakes the proper amount to control wheel spin.

Other continued features include a wrap-around instrument panel; optional dual climate controls — "ComforTemp" — in Limited models; and flush-mounted glass to further reduce wind noise.

Besides ABS and driver-side air bag, standard safety and security features include rear-door child security locks which may be engaged to prevent rear passengers from opening the doors; a power window lock-out which may be engaged to prevent passengers from operating the windows; and a personalized automotive security system which disables the engine starting and fuel systems if a non-matching ignition key is used.

A Gran Touring package, available on both models, includes 16-inch wheels with Eagle GA Touring tires, 3.06 final-drive ratio, leather-wrapped steering wheel and Gran Touring suspension.

Other features include a low-liftover trunk for easier access for loading; easily reachable remote trunk release on the left side of the instrument panel; and, optional on Limited, an engine oil-life monitor that uses engine sensors to determine when to change oil.

The standard seats are a 55/45 split bench design and a center storage armrest is standard on Limited, optional on Custom. Also standard are driver and front-passenger manual seat-back recliners. Additional standard features are air conditioning, power steering, power windows with express-down feature on the driver's window, supplemental and extendable front sunshades, overhead console with front reading lights on Limited, trip odometer and AM-FM radio with seek, scan and digital clock.

The standard sound system includes four extended-range speakers. A Concert Sound system, featuring six extended-range speakers, is optional on both models.

DynaRide, a suspension tuned and equipped to enhance Buick's traditional ride without sacrificing handling, is standard on all LeSabres except those with Gran Touring suspension. DynaRide combines advanced valving technology with carefully selected and tuned components for a smooth, responsive ride over all types of roads.

The dual automatic ComforTemp climate control system, available again on Limited, allows the driver and front passenger to individually control temperature. ComforTemp includes a touch control in the instrument panel and additional controls mounted in the right front door. Rear-seat ComforTemp, also optional on Limited, allows rear passengers to adjust air flow direction.

Other optional equipment includes an analog gauge cluster with tachometer on Limited, 3,000 pound trailer towing package, remote keyless entry on Limited, electric outside rearview mirrors (left and right remote) on Custom and a compact disc player. New wire wheel covers are optional on Custom and Limited.

BMW's 1993 Classic 325i

WOODCLIFF LAKE, N. J. — In the mid-eighties, BMW had the foresight to foresee a resurgence of interest in open-air driving. This led to the launch of a Convertible version of its compact, high-quality, fun-to-drive 3-Series. The rest is history, as they say: Since its debut in 1987, the BMW 325i Convertible has been America's ultimate tanning machine, a favorite among the young and the young of lifestyle for its unique combination of solid engineering, quality construction and pure open-air driving pleasure.

After a freshening in 1991 and further improvements in 1992, the 325i Convertible continues unchanged for 1993 with a concept and design that can accurately be described as classic. Under its hood is an eager, smooth 2.5-liter six-cylinder engine — as classic in performance and sound as the Convertible itself — available for 1993 only with a five-speed manual transmission. Four-wheel disc brakes with an antilock braking system (ABS) harness its power; precisely assisted rack-and-pinion steering and sporty, wide (14 x 6.5J) cross-spoke alloy wheels with generously dimensioned tires help the driver communicate accurately with the road. All of this adds up to an automobile that is uniquely delightful to drive and own.

BMW Classic 325i Convertible

The 325i Convertible's list of standard features is complete and attractive. Wide cross-spoke alloy wheels look sporty and enhance handling. A driver's-side airbag Supplementary Restraint System (SRS) and a passenger's-side automatic seatbelt tensioner are standard safety features.

Foglights, power mirrors, central locking, multi-adjustable leather sports seats, leather-rimmed steering wheel, power windows, electronically controlled air conditioning, Onboard Computer, a fan-type rear-window defroster and an anti-theft AM/FM stereo/cassette audio system with six speakers and power antenna are all standard as well. And the 325i Convertible's power-operated convertible top, coordinated to the body paint in a variety of available colors, disappears cleanly under a metal cover.

Although it was the first BMW Convertible ever to be produced on a regular BMW assembly line — and thanks to its solid success in greater numbers than any previous open-bodied BMW — it is nevertheless considerably rarer than its sedan counterparts and is sure to enjoy the extra esteem that convertible models usually have as they mature. A new Convertible, based on the present 3-Series Coupe models, is expected to appear in summer 1993.

> "America's favorite tanning machine"

Like all other 1993 BMW models, the 325i Convertible is backed by a four-year/50,000-mile Limited Warranty, a six-year/unlimited-mileage warranty against corrosion perforation, and BMW's 24-hour Roadside Assistance Program.

When the new-car warranty expires, the BMW owner can extend roadside-assistance coverage for just $59.90 per year with BMW's Service Card, which includes a variety of worthwhile benefits including towing, locksmith costs, custom trip routing and emergency cash advance.
